This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

As a companion-book of reference for facts, statistics, and other data, in constant demand, the National Almanac for 1863 took a long stride in advance of any preceding work of the same general description. It therefore proved to be a most acceptable and popular book, the sales amounting to fifteen thousand copies. But just as that volume surpassed its predecessors of the same type, as a source of popular information, the present volume is believed to be in advance of the first. It has been the subject of more labor and more care; its scope is much broader, and its statistics, to a very large extent, are much better and fresher. It is, therefore, anticipated with confidence that it will meet with a still more favorable reception by the public.

As examples of the freshness and value of the matter of this volume, the reader should turn to the tables, now first published, showing the operations of our Internal Revenue system; or to the pages exhibiting the condition of our Navy, and its captures during the war; or to the full and recent presentations of the affairs of the great Bureaus of the Interior Department. Referring to the first of these instances, the reader will find copious tables, showing the results of our system of Internal Taxation, still so new to the present generation of Americans. They exhibit in detail the amount of Internal Revenue paid during the last fiscal year by every article and class of articles subject to duty; they also show the amount contributed to the national Treasury by classes of individuals, as Bankers, Brokers, Doctors, Lawyers, Brewers, Distillers, Dealers, Peddlers, etc.; they exhibit, further, the proportions of taxes paid by the great interests of the country, Manufactures, Agriculture, Railroads, Banks, etc.; and, still further, the proportions paid by the several States, and by the great geographical and political divisions of the country. The tables on these subjects are not only important and valuable to all citizens, from the tax-payer to the law-maker, but they are exceedingly curious and instructive in their relation to the resources of the United States. They are, moreover, so recent that, at the date when this is written, they have never been made public in any form, not even for the purposes of the Government.

With regard to the second instance, turn for proof to the statements exhibiting the name, the description, the tonnage, the guns, and the whereabouts, of each of the ships of our magnificent Navy; the distribution of the fleet actively cruising; the condition of the vessels in course of construction; what the Navy is doing, and what it has done, in the way of captures. Pursuing the examination to the third instance, let the reader examine the details under the head of the "Interior Department;" the information concerning our rich inheritance of public lands; the progress of American genius, as shown in the tables concerning the Patent Office; the facts concerning the important and growing subject of Pensions; the interesting tables giving the numbers and location of the Indian tribes; and the valuable tables showing the nativities of the free population of the United States.

Let it be borne in mind that the examples here referred to are examples only; for the book is full of just such fresh, original, and valuable matter.

Another illustration of the value of the contents in this volume will be found in its ample information concerning the VOLUNTEERS of the Armies of the United States. Hitherto our Army Registers have been confined mainly to the Regular Army; but, by means of a large correspondence and careful compilations from voluminous official records, the National Almanac is enabled to present to the people of the country a mass of information relating to the Volunteer service which has never been approached in completeness by any single publication on the subject. The tables under this head (for which see the several States, and the title "Volunteers" in the Index) give the number and description; the arm of the service; term of service; the names of the original commanding officers; the number of men; the date of muster or departure, and other interesting details, of every regiment, or separate organization, of every loyal State and Territory, during the two memorable years of volunteering, 1861–63. Nowhere else can this magazine of information concerning the Volunteer Armies of the United States be found in one volume. As a permanent and compact record of the marvellous development of the military power and resources of the United States, it is worth more than the price of the whole volume.

An earnest and, to a large extent, successful effort has been made to give completeness and uniformity to the information concerning the governments and the supreme judiciary of the several States. Under each table of State officers, the time and manner of their election or appointment is given, from authentic sources; also, the numbers and constitution of the State Legislatures, with their time of meeting; and, with respect to the judiciary, the manner of selecting or appointing the judges, their tenure of office, and the times and places for holding terms of all the Supreme Courts.

The affairs of the organized Territories of the United States are treated with more than usual fulness, because they are objects of special interest at this time, and because recent legislation had so far obliterated old boundaries as to require an entirely new statement of their existing lines, present areas, population, and condition, for public information.

The financial affairs of a country at war being important topics of study and discussion, great attention has been given to that subject in this volume. In the case of the Treasury statistics, they are in all essential particulars brought down to a period one year later than any tabular matter hitherto attempted in a work of this kind. So, too, with regard to the financial affairs of the States. While in some of these the information furnished is no later than usual, the editor has succeeded in procuring from nearly all the great States either full particulars or abstracts of their revenues, expenditures, and debt, and of the condition of their banks, a year later than usual. The Bank returns of the States will be found, in all important cases, to be nearly a year later than the most recent returns published by the General Government.

Statistics are divisible into two principal classes: viz.: (1) those which exhibit the present condition and relations of the objects or affairs to which they refer, and (2) those which develop progress or movement. Holding this in view, the editor has been careful (wherever it could be done) to combine the two classes so as to show both the present condition and relations, and the progress or movement, of the subjects of which they treat. Thus, taking our State Prison statistics as an example, the figures given not only present the affairs of those establishments at the dates of the most recent published reports, but also show, comparing the second year of the present war with the first, that crime has decreased everywhere throughout the United States to a very remarkable extent. Similar data are furnished for comparisons of the progress of those unerring indices of thrift and comfort,—the savings-banks of the New England States. The additions to the number of depositors and to the amount of deposits during the war, are as extraordinary as they are gratifying to record. Data of the same kind are furnished for comparisons concerning our Public School systems, our great public charities, hospitals, correctional institutions, &c.

Several of the articles on special subjects, by contributors to this volume, are of a character to invite close attention. That on National Burdens and Resources is a mine of statistical wealth that will prove the richer the more it is explored; that on the Public Libraries of the United States is a very desirable exposition of a subject concerning which our bibliographical literature has been very deficient; that on Population as affected by Immigration presents some startling figures connected with our vital statistics; that on Agriculture will repay perusal by the laborers in the greatest of all the great interests of our country; and that on Mortality and Sickness in the Armies of the United States,* with its illustrative diagrams, is upon a subject of the deepest interest and importance.

The Record of the Events of the War during the past year is divided into two articles,—the first being a narrative of the operations of each Army or Military Department, and the second being a record of the prominent events of the year, both military and civil, in chronological order. These two, with the Record in the Almanac of 1863, make a full Diary of the events of the war from the beginning of the rebellion.

As the present year will be one of extraordinary political interest, there is added to the usual contents of the volume a very full and complete series of returns of the last General Elections in all the States and Territories, by counties and Congressional districts, and also of the Presidential elections from 1848 to 1860.

One of the most marked improvements in this issue of the National Almanac will be found under the head of "Foreign Countries," extending from page 552 to 627,—seventy-five pages, concerning the sovereigns, governments, ministries, areas, populations, finances, armies, navies, commerce, navigation, and affairs generally, of nearly all the countries of the world,—a volume of interesting and valuable matter, otherwise inaccessible to the great body of the public.

It is no part of the purpose of these remarks to attempt even a general outline of the contents of this volume: in a work of such multifarious details so compactly condensed, such an outline could not be drawn within the limits of any reasonable preface. The object is simply to present examples of the freshness and value of the mass of the matter, and of the improvements in and wider scope of the subjects introduced. Hence it is not at all improbable that the subjects not mentioned here are quite as important as those adduced as examples. Those who would get a fair idea of the extensive and varied character of the contents of this volume of the National Almanac must examine the body of the book, or, at least, carefully consult the Index. And those who would have a knowledge of the toil and of the vexatious cares of its preparation can reach it only through practical experience in making such a book. There are twelve pages in one set of tables, which involved the sending and receiving of nearly seven hundred letters,—the contents of about three hundred and fifty of which are condensed in the twelve pages referred to. In that case the postage alone cost nearly twenty-four dollars, or about two dollars a page. In the preparation of the whole work, about twelve hundred letters were sent, and about thirteen hundred letters and packets received; and from these letters and packets, and nearly four hundred official reports and state papers besides, in print and in manuscript, the mass of the information in the book has been compiled, condensed, and arranged.

As with the preceding volume, so in this, it has been a primary object to procure information from original and official sources, and to have the matter reviewed by official personages conversant with the particular subjects. This course has been pursued with success. The cases in which any thing has been taken at second-hand are very few indeed. No care, labor, or expense has been spared to make the work accurate and reliable and to give it a standard character.

It is a grateful duty to acknowledge the favors and courtesy of the many public and private gentlemen who have contributed the valuable materials out of which this work has been built. To the Heads of the Executive Departments and Bureaus at Washington and their assistants and clerks; to the Foreign Ministers, diplomatic agents, and consuls; to our own Ministers, diplomatic agents, and consuls abroad; to the Governor-General and the Lieutenant-Governors of the British North American Provinces, their secretaries and clerks; to the Governors, Secretaries of State, Executive and Military Secretaries, Adjutant-Generals, Treasurers, Comptrollers, Auditors, Bank Commissioners, School Superintendents, and other Executive officers of the several States and Territories; to the Judges, Clerks, &c. of the Supreme and other Courts of the States; to the officers of some of the State Legislatures; to the Hon. Edward McPherson, Clerk of the National House of Representatives; to Captain Jas. M. Gilliss, Superintendent of the U.S. Naval Observatory to A. R. Spofford, Esq., of the Congressional Library; to Professor Gould, of Cambridge; to Hon. James Pollock and Dr. H. R. Linderman, of Philadelphia; to James S. Grinnell, Lewis Bollman, and Daniel Buck, Esqs., of Washington; to S. K. Hornbrook, Esq., of Wheeling; to Lockwood L. Doty, Esq., of Albany; to the correspondent of the Publishers' Circular at Paris; to Benjamin Moran, Esq., at London, and to many others, who are not forgotten though for the present mentioned only in this general way,—especial acknowledgments are due for documents, materials, and suggestions sent forward in the most prompt and kindly manner. The editor now sees that he should have made a formal list of these kind and esteemed auxiliaries, and regrets that such a list cannot be made in time for the present volume. It is hoped that they will be in part compensated by having at hand in the National Almanac a companion-book of reference, that will save them, one and all, a great deal of time-consuming labor that would otherwise be spent in searching through hundreds of other volumes for the names, events, statistics, and data collected in one compact body in the Almanac. In many cases the officers of Colleges, Seminaries, &c., the Superintendents of Hospitals, Asylums, and other Institutions for the Insane, Deaf-Mutes and Blind, Reform Schools, &c., the Wardens of Prisons, and other heads of Sanitary, Correctional, and Punitive institutions, favored the publisher and editor by the prompt and early transmission of reports, catalogues, and circulars.

Suggestions, corrections, contributions, reports, public papers and materials, for the volume for 1865, will be most acceptable, and are earnestly solicited.

The volume of the National Almanac for 1864 is thus committed to the just judgment of the public, with a parting remark, in the language of a distinguished American officer, that it is a little library in itself, and one which answers nearly all questions on public affairs in a most satisfactory manner.

Eclipses.

There will be two eclipses this year,—both of the Sun.

I. A Central Eclipse of the Sun, May 5, visible as a partial eclipse in the eastern part of Asia, the northern part of Australia, and the northwestern part of North America. In the United States it will be visible as a partial one, just before sunset, west of the line passing from Galveston, Texas, to the western end of Lake Superior. This eclipse Begins on the Earth, May 5, 4h. 22m. P.M. Washington time, in longitude 156° 3′ W. of Washington, and in latitude 1° 25′ S.

Ends on the Earth, May 5, 9h. 55m., in longitude 53° 25′ W. of Washington, and in latitude 20° 9′ N.

Central eclipse at noon, in longitude 109° 28′ W. of Washington, and in latitude 32° 14′ N.

According to Hausen's Tables of the Sun and Moon at the instant of conjunction, the diameter of the Moon will be only 2″.4 smaller than that of the Sun, and through the effect of parallax the eclipse may be total.

II. An Annular Eclipse of the Sun, October 30, visible in South America as an annular, and in the southern part of North America and southwestern part of Africa as a partial, eclipse. This eclipse Begins on the Earth, October 30, 7h. 23m. A.M. Washington time, in longitude 23° 6′ W. of Washington, and in latitude 6° 26′ N.

Ends on the Earth, October 30, 1h. 21m. P.M., in longitude 289° 19′ W. of Washington, and in latitude 19° 24′ S.

Central eclipse at noon, in longitude 340° 47′ W. of Washington, and in latitude 24° 57′ S.

In the United States this eclipse will be visible at sunrise as a small partial one in the southern parts of California and Texas. In the central part of South America this eclipse will be favorable for observation.

Morning and Evening Stars.

Venus will be morning star till July 18, then evening star the rest of the year. Mars will be morning star till December 1, then evening star the rest of the year. Jupiter will be morning star till May 13, then evening star till November 30, then morning star the rest of the year. Saturn will be morning star till April 4, then evening star till October 13, then morning star the rest of the year.

Visibility of Mercury.

This planet will attain its greatest elongations from the Sun on January 9, April 30, August 28, and December 22, when it will be east of the Sun; and on February 18, June 17, and October 9, when it will be west of the Sun.

Duration of Twilight.

The following table exhibits the duration of twilight, morning and evening. It is calculated for a north latitude of 40° 20′, with the Sun 18° below the horizon.

EXPLANATION OF THE FOLLOWING TABLES.

The times of the rising and setting of the sun and moon have been calculated for four points,—viz. Boston, New York, Washington, and San Francisco. They will serve, however, for other points which do not differ much in latitude,—though for the moon's rising and setting we should add as we go west, and subtract as we go east, about one minute and a half for every ten degrees of longitude.

The time of high water has been calculated for only one of the two daily tides; the other will be half-way between the two given in the table, on each side of it. Thus, we have the evening high tide at New York, March 7, 9h. 14m.; the morning tide occurs half-way between 9h. 14m. and 10h. 1m., or at 9h. 37m.

The letters m. and e. in the tables for the rising and setting of the planets, and for the eclipses of Jupiter's satellites, signify morning and evening.

The times given for the rising and setting of the planets, and for the eclipses of the satellites of Jupiter, are computed for the meridian of Washington. The times of the southing of the sun and moon are also given for the meridian of that observatory: the former is sufficiently accurate for any place in the United States; but to the latter we should add as we go west, and subtract as we go east, about one minute and a half for each ten degrees of longitude, as is directed for the rising and setting, above.

The following signs are used in the column of Phenomena:—

PROGRESS OF ASTRONOMY DURING THE YEAR TERMINATING WITH OCTOBER, 1863.

THE year has been fruitful in the investigations in Physical Astronomy, as well as in addition to the number of bodies belonging to our system.

Comets.—Five comets have been discovered since making up the record for last year's Almanac.

I. By Professor Respighi, at Bologna, on the 28th of November, 1862. Its orbit is sensibly parabolic.

II. By Dr. Bruhns, at Leipsic, 2d of December, 1862. On account of its rapid motion towards the south, it appears to have been observed but a short time in the northern hemisphere, from which only we have results. The observations are satisfied by a parabola.

III. By Dr. Klinkerfues, at Göttingen, 11th of April, 1862. On the day following its discovery, its appearance was described at Paris as "very fine, the disc (nucleus) surrounded by a fan-shaped luminosity." It was observed at Washington, 4th of May, and appeared as a round nebulosity 5′ or 6′ in diameter. It was visible to the naked eye during the early part of May. The observations extend over an interval of about five months, and its orbit seems to be slightly elliptical.

IV. By Professor Respighi, at Bologna, 12th of April, 1862. On the 14th of April, its nucleus was as bright as a star of 6th magnitude, and its coma 40′ long. Its orbit is parabolic.

V. By Mr. Bäcker, at Nauen, near Berlin, 9th of October. Its appearance was that of a faint nebula. It has been observed at Washington; and thus far a parabolic orbit satisfies the observations.

Probably because of its position in the morning twilight, the short period comet of Brorsen passed its perihelion unobserved in 1862–1863. That of Winnecke will pass its perihelion 23d of November, 1863, at which time its right ascension will be 17 hours, and its declination 21° south.

Companions to Sirius.—It was stated in the last volume that Mr. Alvan Clark, at Cambridgeport, Mass., had discovered a companion to Sirius, with the great refractor of his construction. This instrument, unrivalled for its magnitude, is 216 lines in diameter. Mr. Goldschmidt has announced to the Academy of Sciences at Paris the discovery of five other companions, the diameter of his object-glass being only 46 lines! He has given a diagram showing their places.

Mr. Dawes appears to have been the second person to recognize any of the newly-discovered companions by Goldschmidt. He announces having found the minute star d some 54″ to 57″ east of the principal one.

Companion of Procyon.—Mr. Hermann Romberg, who has the care of the Observatory of J. Gurney Barclay, Esq., at Leyton, Essex (England), has given measures for angle of position (294° 54′) and distance (45″.8) of a 10½ mag. companion to Procyon made in March last. And thus the anomalous motions of Sirius and Procyon are in a fair way to be accounted for. Reasoning upon the observed character of their deviations, as deduced from a discussion of observations made by different astronomers since 1755, as far back as 1844 the illustrious Bessel predicted the presence of other bodies not very remote from them.

Variable Nebula.—The nebula near ζ Tauri was not noticed by Chacornac in observations between the 26th to 31st of January, 1854, nor even as late as 17th of December of the same year. It was first seen 19th of October, 1855; and there are strong reasons for believing that it must be numbered among the extraordinary and as yet inexplicable celestial phenomena.

Solar Parallax.—During the year 1862, a series of observations was made upon the planet Mars when near opposition, for the purpose of determining its parallax, and thence that of the sun. The series first proposed embraced differential measures in declination, to be made near the meridian. An ephemeris was prepared at the Washington Observatory, and distributed to astronomers in every part of the world. Corresponding observations, made at the observatory at Santiago, in Chile, have been received, and a discussion of the results will take place on arrival of those promised from Williamstown, Australia.

A second series of meridional observations was asked for by Dr. Winnecke, of the Pulkowa Observatory. A comparison of the results made there with those obtained from the Cape of Good Hope Observatory, indicates that the value (8″.5776) derived by Encke from computations of the transits of Venus must be increased about one-twenty-fourth part. A similar comparison of observations between Greenwich and Williamstown gives a value, 8″.932, closely accordant with the former, and by the elaboration of his lunar tables, Professor Hansen finds a value 8″.97. In a discussion of the theories of Venus, the Earth, and Mars, Le Verrier had previously found the necessity for adopting 8″.95, a value intermediate between the two preceding, which is no little remarkable.

Sun's Heat.—For an interesting paper relative to the heat of the sun, the reader is referred to the June number of the London, Edinburgh, and Dublin Philosophical Magazine.

Light of the Sun.—Mr. Alvan Clark has instituted a series of experiments to determine the comparative light of the sun and stars, and finds that the former would be visible as a star of the sixth magnitude if it were removed to 1,200,000 times its present distance. If the distances ascribed to several of the stars from parallax be true, he thinks astronomers will find our glorious luminary only a very small star.

Movement of the Solar System in Space.—Mr. Airy, the Astronomer Royal, has completed the computations for inferring the direction and amount of the movement of our system in space, from the observed proper motions of 1167 stars. The result is that the sun is moving towards a point in A. R. 264°, N. P. D. 65°; and at the distance of a star of the first magnitude, the annual motion subtends an angle of 0″.4. But the comparison of the sum of the squares of apparent proper motions, uncorrected, with the sum of the squares of apparent proper motions corrected for motion of the sun, shows so small an advance in the explanation of the stars' apparent movements, as to throw great doubt on the certainty of results, the sum of the squares being diminished by only the twenty-fifth part. The Astronomer Royal states that the indicated point in space does not differ much from Sir William Herschel's, but depends much in N. P. D. on the accuracy of Bradley's quadrant observations.

Annual Parallax.—Mr. Krueger has published in the Comptes Rendus of the Royal Society of Finland the results of a series of observations made with the Heliometer at Rome to determine the parallaxes of 21258 Lalande, and 17415 of the Argelander-Oeltzen Catalogue. The former has a proper motion of 4″.5, and the latter of 1″.4. Their computed parallaxes are +0″.260 ⊥0″.020, and +0″.247 ⊥0″.021 respectively, the former agreeing closely with the result previously obtained by M. Auwers, of Königsberg.

Zodiacal Light.—A new theory of this interesting phenomenon, by Professor Challis, of Cambridge (Eng.), may be found in the January and February numbers of the London, Edinburgh, and Dublin Philosophical Magazine.

August Meteors.—On the nights of 9th and 10th they were extremely numerous during the early portions of each evening. The greater numbers on both nights radiated from a point below and eastward of the pole star, one portion passing to the east and the other westward of the meridian and very slightly inclined to the horizon. Their marked peculiarity was that almost without exception they left brilliant trains, visible 20°, and sometimes even 30°, in extent. The observers near New Haven have published their results in Silliman's Journal.

Celestial Photography.—Dr. Draper, of the University of New York, has made great improvements in this branch of astronomical investigation. He has perfected a picture of the moon, made under a magnifying power of 320, which represents our satellite on a scale of about 70 miles to the inch. His telescope has a silvered glass mirror, and is kept steady whilst motion is communicated to the sensitized photograph-plate by clockwork. An illustrated account of his operations will shortly be published by the Smithsonian Institution.

Lewis Rutherford, Esq., of New York, has continued experiments in stellar photography, for the purpose of obtaining magnified pictures from which angles of position and distance of double stars could be measured with greater satisfaction than the micrometer affords; but, for the want of a sufficiently sensitive process, the anticipations of great gains have not been realized. It has been found impossible to obtain impressions of the smaller stars, and thus the number of objects to which the process seems applicable becomes so reduced as to afford scant encouragement. An apparatus for the same purpose has been prepared at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, by the Astronomer Royal, and lines in the spectra of 19 stars have been measured. They are generally nebulous, resembling the solar line H.

Mr. Huggins and Dr. W. A. Miller, in England, and Rev. Professors Secchi and Donati, in Italy, are also experimenting on this subject.

Publications.—Among the valuable publications of the year, the following may be named:—Manual of Spherical and Practical Astronomy, by Professor William Chauvenet. Published by Lippincott & Co.

THE UNITED STATES NAVAL OBSERVATORY AT WASHINGTON.

In our volume for 1863 we gave some account of the United States Coast Survey, the institution which has unquestionably done more hitherto than any other one in the land towards establishing on a firm basis the scientific reputation of the United States abroad, and probably more than any other also in disseminating scientific methods and stimulating to scientific progress at home in all directions within its scope and influence.

Immediately following was a similar account of the Smithsonian Institution, an organization aiming at a still wider range of influence,—namely, both the increase and the diffusion of knowledge; and these, too, with no restrictions of nationality, and no special devotion to any one department or class of departments in learning or science. Of the large and wise policy, and of the able administration which has characterized this magnificent trust, the nation to whom it was confided may well be proud.

We propose now to give some account of a third prominent American institution of science,—the Naval Observatory at Washington,—which has been equipped in a style worthy of a great government, and, until the outbreak of the present insurrection, furnished with larger means in men and money than any other Observatory in the world. If ample facilities in these respects had been in themselves sufficient, it would long since have taken rank with the noblest astronomical institutions in existence, eclipsing most of them, and vying with Pulkowa itself,—the noblest shrine ever reared to astronomy. Although it may not until recently have answered all the expectations of the nation, or indeed of astronomers anywhere, it has now earned a title to very prominent rank among observatories by the high degree of accuracy to which all its observations may lay claim, the system with which they are carried on with reference to definite ends, the regularity with which all its instruments are constantly employed each for that work to which it is best adapted, and for the promptness with which the observations are reduced and rendered available for use as fast as they are made. These are the characteristics of an Observatory of the first class.

It is somewhat remarkable, when we consider our national ambition and our aspirations for intellectual progress, that so long a time elapsed before the establishment of any institution in the United States claiming even the name of an astronomical observatory, if we except some temporary structures erected during colonial times for special purposes.

Prominent among those who early advocated and persistently urged the foundation of such an institution, was John Quincy Adams. As early as October, 1823, while Secretary of State, in a letter to one of the corporation of Harvard College, he urged the establishment of an Astronomical Observatory at Cambridge, and offered to contribute one thousand dollars personally towards this end in case the requisite sum should be raised within two years, the concealment of his name being, however, enjoined. At the expiration of that time, the amount not having been subscribed, Mr. Adams renewed the offer; but the spirit of liberality had not at that time been awakened among the friends of science, and his effort was in vain.

In 1825, in the first Message to Congress after his accession to the Presidency of the United States, he earnestly recommended the establishment of a National Observatory, as also of a Uniform Standard of Weights and Measures, of a Naval Academy, a Nautical Almanac, and a National University. But all these recommendations were treated with neglect by Congress; although time has written a sufficient commentary on their wisdom and foresight. An excellent report on the subject, advocating the views of the President, was made by Mr. C. F. Mercer, chairman of the committee of the House to whom, in the ordinary routine, the subject was referred; but the recommendations of the President and of the Committee were suffered to lie unnoticed on the tables of both Houses; and it was reserved for the Emperor Nicholas of Russia to follow those counsels which party rancor precluded the Congress of the United States from adopting on the recommendation of their President, and, by the establishment of the noblest Observatory of the world, to render the capital of his empire a capital of astronomical science.

The first structure in the United States claiming the name of a fixed astronomical observatory, was erected on Capitol Hill in Washington, in the year 1834, by Lieutenant Wilkes, for the Naval Depot of Charts. It was equipped with a three and three-quarter inch transit-instrument made for the Coast Survey in 1815 and loaned to the Navy Department on Lieutenant Wilkes's application, and some portable instruments made for use in an exploring expedition contemplated by the Government in 1828. It does not, however, appear that any observations were ever made by Lieutenant Wilkes other than those necessary for rating the chronometers. During the next year a five-inch telescope was placed in the steeple of one of the buildings of Yale College, by the aid of which Halley's comet was roughly observed by Professors Olmsted and Loomis. In 1838, another small astronomical structure was built at Hudson, Ohio, through the exertions of Professor Elias Loomis, and furnished with an English equatorial of four inches aperture and a three-inch transit-circle. Professor Loomis determined the longitude and latitude of his observatory, and made observations of five comets and sixteen occultations, although the duties of a professor engaged in constant tuition left him no opportunity for further astronomical research.

In June, 1838, information was sent by Mr. Rush, our minister in England, that he had received the money bequeathed by James Smithson for founding in Washington an institution, bearing his name, for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men. Mr. Adams again exerted his most strenuous efforts to secure the establishment of an Astronomical Observatory as a part of the institution. He immediately waited on President Van Buren, and in a long interview urged his views of the subject. A few months later, at the call of the Secretary of State, he reduced his views to writing, advocating the application of part of the fund to the establishment of a great Observatory and of a Nautical Almanac. Mr. Van Buren expressed his concurrence with the views, but never acted in the premises.

Indeed, so bitter was the rancor of political partisanship at this time, and so intense the hatred entertained by the then dominant section of the country against Mr. Adams, that, to use the language of his biographer, "opposition to the design became identified with party spirit, and to defeat it no language of contempt or of ridicule was omitted by the partisans of General Jackson. In every appropriation which it was apprehended might be converted to its accomplishment, the restriction 'and to no other' was carefully inserted." In the second section of an act passed on the 10th July, 1832, providing for the survey of the coasts of the United States, the following limitation was inserted by the Naval Committee, —Mr. M. Hoffman, Chairman,—"Provided, That nothing in this act, or in the act hereby revived, shall be construed to authorize the construction or maintenance of a permanent Astronomical Observatory." Yet at the time of passing this act it was well understood that a part of the appropriation it contained was necessarily to be applied to astronomical observations; and subsequently Congress appropriated money to the erection of an Astronomical Observatory, under a fictitious name, in the city of Washington, to which subsequent appropriations were regularly granted in the annual bills providing for the Navy Department;—the authors of the laws intending an astronomical observatory, and being well aware that the funds would be so applied, but causing the insertion of the proviso in the one case and of the feigned name in the other, for the purpose of preventing the institution from being attributed to the influence of Mr. Adams.*

In August, 1838, the U.S. Exploring Expedition having been organized, Lieutenant Gilliss was directed by the Navy Department to take charge of the apparatus at the establishment constructed by Lieutenant Wilkes, and to observe moon culminations and transits of moon-culminating stars as often as possible, for use in determining differences of longitude in connection with the Expedition. Mr. Bond, of Boston, who possessed a small transit-instrument at Dorchester, Massachusetts, was also employed for the same purpose. The building, being found unsuitable for the purposes desired, was remodelled by Lieutenant Gilliss, who succeeded in obtaining two good clocks, one for mean and one for sidereal time; a three and a quarter inch achromatic; and the Meridian Circle by Ertel, now in use at the Naval Observatory. This was the first working Observatory in the United States; and the volume containing the observations during the five years 1838-42, with their reduced results, was the first American volume of astronomical observations. The resulting Catalogue of Right-Ascensions for 1840 is still of high value, and compares most favorably with the results obtained at institutions of historic eminence on the other side of the Atlantic. In his introduction to this volume of Observations, Lieutenant Gilliss states:—

"My attention was early arrested by discrepancies between the clock errors resulting from standard stars, and some of those comprised in the list of moon culminations; discrepancies amounting in several cases to more than two seconds of time, which, being confirmed by the observations of consecutive nights, were consequently altogether beyond the limits of probable errors. Receiving about this time a copy of the 'Catalogue of the Royal Astronomical Society,' it occurred to me that while carrying out the objects of the Exploring Expedition, the mites which I could add to the data for more correctly locating 'the landmarks of the universe,' would not be entirely unworthy of collection; and with this object in view I determined henceforward to increase the number of stars to be nightly observed, so as to embrace one in each three and a half to four minutes, between the times of transit of the first and last moon-culminating star, the interval fixed on being the time ordinarily occupied by the transit of one star over all the wires, and setting the finder for its successor. This was all I could hope to accomplish with the means in my power, unless careful estimations of the apparent magnitudes of each star observed should enable me to detect at the termination of the series variations in their brightness, or to confirm the degree of lustre already assigned to them. What has been accomplished in this respect is shown in the notes to the General Catalogue.

"All the observations in the volume, excluding a part of those of November 28, 1838, and all of May 3 and 4, 1841 (as stated in the foot-notes), were made by myself. Absence on the latter days was caused by illness; and it is proper to state that with the above exceptions there was not a visible culmination of the moon, which occurred when the sun was less than one hour above the horizon, during the entire period embraced by the observations, or an occultation after the 15th of June, 1839, except that of 139 Tauri, mentioned on page 502, which I did not personally observe.

"It remains but for me to express my gratitude that the prosecution of these observations should have resulted in the foundation of a permanent Naval Observatory, and have obtained for me, though for a brief period, the privilege of association with many of the most distinguished astronomers of the present century."

On March 5, 1840, Mr. Adams, being chairman of the select committee on the Smithsonian fund, made a second report, in which, after recounting all the principal facts connected with the bequest and its acceptance, he again advocated the views which he had so often urged. But, while the question was pending, a resolution was passed by the Senate appointing a joint committee on the subject of the Smithsonian bequest. The House in courtesy concurred, and appointed on its own part the members of the select committee of which Mr. Adams was chairman to be members of the joint committee. It may readily be imagined that the two portions of the committee were unable to agree; and it was finally decided that each of the two component parts should present its own report; and while Mr. Adams reported* a series of resolutions prescribing the investment and management of the fund, and directing that the first appropriation of interest-money should be "applied for the erection of an Astronomical Observatory, and for the various objects incident to such an establishment," Mr. Preston, of South Carolina, the chairman of the Senate Committee, presented counter-resolutions containing the provision that no part of the funds should be applied to the erection of an Astronomical Observatory. This report of Mr. Adams is well worthy the perusal of every lover of the glorious science of astronomy, both for the richness of its information and the beauty of its eloquence.

In 1840 and 1841, two observatories were established,—the first at Philadelphia, by the "High School" of that city, and the second at West Point, by the U.S. Military Academy. The former was placed under the direction of the late Sears C. Walker, the pioneer of practical astronomy in the United States, and of Professor E. O. Kendall; the latter under that of Professor Bartlett. To these astronomers we owe the first introduction into the country of German instruments which the combined genius of Bessel, Struve, and Argelander, the three leading practical astronomers of the century, and of Fraunhofer, with his gifted colaborers in the highest fields of optical and mechanical art, had rendered as far superior to the instruments of England and France as they were different in general design,—the German instruments being devised with a view to the greatest possible mobility of their several parts, that by use in different positions their errors might be measured and eradicated; and the English being constructed with a view to the greatest possible fixity, under the impression that errors might thus be avoided.

Neither of these Observatories had the advantage of thorough insulation from other buildings, or even of the supports of the instruments being near the ground; but to them, or rather to the ability and assiduity of their directors, working in the hours of relaxation from professional duties, we owe the first important series of astronomical observations made in the United States. It is to the stimulus given by their observations,—especially the admirable ones of Mr. Walker, rendered peculiarly valuable by his computations, for which they supplied the material,—and to their publications, particularly the able Report on European Observatories presented by Professor Bartlett to the Engineer Department on returning from a journey to Europe for the purpose of ordering instruments,—that we are doubtless indebted for much of that public sentiment which, combined with other influences, at last brought about the establishment of the Naval Observatory. Mr. Adams led the way, and his exertions probably secured the result; but any direct recommendation of his was sure to be treated with neglect. Lieutenant Gilliss had, by his diligent, careful, and successful observations, secured the all-essential confidence and co-operation of the Navy Department, and certainly stimulated the naval committees of Congress to action; but in shaping and confirming that public sentiment through which alone the favorable action by Congress became probable, the influence of the other astronomers bore no inconsiderable part.

On the 12th April, 1842, Mr. Adams, as chairman of the committee on the Smithsonian fund, presented a third report in form of a bill, providing for its administration on the same principles which he had advocated in former years, and directing that the income already accrued should be invested as a capital, and its interest applied to the construction and maintenance of an Astronomical Observatory. The bill failed; for, as Mr. Adams's biographer remarks, "there was no purpose on which the predominating party were more fixed than to prevent the gratification of Mr. Adams in this well-known cherished wish of his heart." Yet an Observatory, under a feigned name, was established by act of that very Congress at that very session, without a division, or indeed any opposition, in either House; and four years later the Smithsonian Institution was organized essentially on the basis so often urged by him, although omitting the Observatory element, which was then no longer desirable, inasmuch as the end had been obtained by other means.

On the 15th March, 1842, the Committee on Naval Affairs reported to the House of Representatives a bill "to authorize the construction of a Depot for Charts and Instruments of the Navy of the United States," together with a written report,* in which occur the following passages:—

"In the summer of 1838 the honorable Secretary of the Navy directed the Superintendent to make a constant series of observations in astronomy, magnetism, and meteorology, ordering an additional number of assistants, and granting authority for the purchase of all necessary instruments.

"These observations are intended not only for the benefit of the Navy, but of the country and the world.

"The house now occupied, and the Observatory connected with it, are both private property. The former is inadequate to the purposes for which it is intended, from its possessing no accommodations for the officers in charge; and the latter is unfit from its size, and unsafe for the valuable instruments it contains.

"We are indebted to other nations for the data which enable our ships to cross the ocean. Not only has the Navy failed to contribute to the common stock from which all our navigators borrow, but our country has never yet published an observation of a celestial body, which bore the impress 'by authority,' and it is believed that until the observations before alluded to in this report, none have ever been directed by the Government which can be considered continuous.

"That great errors exist in the tabulated places of the heavenly bodies, the labors of astronomers of the present day sufficiently prove. Indeed, all who were at all curious in such matters could not have failed to remark how great a difference there was between the observed and computed times of the last annular eclipse visible in the United States.

"Observatories, though not expensive, cannot prosper in our country until we can obtain rest from the pursuit of mercantile affairs, or their charge is undertaken by the Government. The duties are confining; if properly executed, arduous; and but few are qualified by experience or habits to undertake them. If officers can be found with taste for such duties, an Observatory will give more information to the world under a military organization, in one year, than under any other direction in two.

"A small Observatory is absolutely essential to the depot; without it the duties cannot be performed. The present tenement was erected at private expense, of slight materials, and is entirely unsuited to the wants of the Navy or the protection of the instruments. From defects in its original construction, a considerable portion of the heavens is entirely obscured to the observer; nor can these defects be remedied, even were the building worthy alteration.

"The magnetic observatories which were established by the European Governments two years since, and which have a location in almost every part of the world, were earnestly recommended to us by the learned men of England. Active and extensive co-operation, they say, will be the only mode of setting at rest the conflicting theories of this most important branch of science. Simultaneous observations over three-fourths of the globe may be taken as satisfactory evidence that the whole world would present similar results. At some of the observatories it is intended to continue the observations uninterruptedly as in astronomy; but in others they probably will not be continued beyond 1846, when their results will be given to the world.

"Whatever these results may be, the Navy is deeply interested in them,—more so than any other branch of society; and shall it be said that we have appropriated the hard-earned labors of others to benefit our Navy, without compelling it to bear its portion?

"Deeming an establishment of this description essential to the welfare of the Navy, the committee report the accompanying bill."

The bill was identical with the one which subsequently became a law. It was read twice, and disposed of in the House by reference to the "Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union."

On the 23d June, a bill identical with the one thus laid to rest in the House, was introduced in the Senate by the Naval Committee of that body. It passed through the several stages of legislation in due order, without hindrance or objection; went to the House on the 30th July; was referred to the same committee as before; but as a Senate bill was treated with courtesy. It was reported back without discussion, passed by the House without debate, and on the 31st August, 1842, became a law, as follows:—

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled: That the Secretary of the Navy be and he is hereby authorized to contract for the building of a suitable house for a depot of charts and instruments of the Navy of the United States, on a plan not exceeding in cost the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars.

"And be it further enacted, That the sum of ten thousand dollars be and is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated towards carrying this law into effect.

"And be it further enacted, That the said establishment may be located on any portion of the public land in the District of Columbia which the President of the United States may deem suited to the purpose."

On the 9th September, nine days after the passage of the law, the Secretary of the Navy, "taking the report of the Naval Committee, which accompanied the [House] bill as the exponent of the will of Congress," confided the preparation of the plans to Lieutenant Gilliss, the present Superintendent. After consulting those Americans most conversant with astronomical subjects, he visited Europe to obtain the counsel of foreign astronomers, and to make himself acquainted by personal inspection with the latest improvements in the construction of astronomical and magnetic implements. In March, 1843, he returned home, having ordered the instruments under authority from the Secretary of the Navy, and began the erection of the Observatory. The building was completed, the instruments mounted and essentially adjusted, and a library procured within eighteen months.

On the 7th February, 1845, Lieutenant Gilliss presented a very detailed report of his labors,—taking due care, of course, to designate the institution by the name which Congress had seen fit to confer upon it. This report is published as Senate Document No. 114, 28th Congress, Second Session. It contains a careful description, with minute drawings, of the instruments, which are in the main the same that, after the lapse of eighteen years, are still in active and successful employment. Indeed, we make use of the report for our present description of the institution.

In the letter accompanying the report, Lieutenant Gilliss says,—

"I have the honor to transmit herewith a report detailing the plan and construction of the Depot of Charts and Instruments, with an outline of its astronomical instruments, library, &c.

"In preparing this account I have been influenced by a paragraph in a report from the Council to the members of the Royal Astronomical Society, in which they state:—

"'The Council are of opinion that it would tend materially to the advancement of astronomy if an accurate description of every principal Observatory could be obtained, accompanied with a ground-plan and elevation of the building; together with a description of the instruments employed, and drawings of such as are remarkable either for their novelty or peculiar interest.'"

And in the report itself he continues:—

"It being evident, from the report of the committee of Congress before named, that it was intended to establish a Naval Observatory in connection with the Depot of Charts and Instruments, it became an object of great importance to obtain instruments of such character in the various departments of astronomy, terrestrial magnetism, and meteorology (designated by them to be pursued) as would render the most efficient service during the longest portion of time. To this end, eminent advice was sought, and a list prepared for the approval of the honorable Secretary, which, regarding their ultimate usefulness as paramount, still kept economy in view. The list embraced,—

1st. Achromatic refractor.
2d. Meridian transit.
3d. Prime-vertical transit.
4th. Mural circle.
5th. Comet-searcher.
6th. Magnetic instruments.
7th. Meteorological instruments.
8th. Books.

"In addition to these to be purchased, there belong to the Navy a portable forty-two inches transit instrument and two clocks purchased by Lieutenant Wilkes for the Exploring Expedition, and a thirty-inches transit circle and two clocks ordered for the Depot by myself, all which, with a number of mathematical, astronomical, and other scientific books, could be rendered useful in the new establishment."

The site selected for the building is on a hill—then known as Camp Hill—in the southwestern part of the city, on the north bank of the Potomac, and ninety-five feet above high-water mark, having a horizontal range of a mile and a quarter to the north and of eight miles southward. This hill is of gravel formation, covered with a stratum of dry, brittle, clayey soil, through which water filters freely; and the grounds assigned comprise about seventeen acres.

The building consists of a central portion fifty feet square, which contains a basement and two stories, each with four rooms, and is surmounted by a revolving dome, twenty-three feet in diameter, for the Equatorial. On the east, west, and south are wings twenty-one feet wide and eighteen feet high, the two former being twenty-six and a half feet long, and the latter originally twenty-one feet, but extended twenty feet more in 1846 by the addition of another apartment. In these the other instruments are situated, leaving the central building for official purposes. To guard against changes of temperature arising from the influence of its heated rooms upon the observing apartments in the east and west wings, thick double walls are interposed with a space of six inches between them. The south wing is insulated by a passage-way.

The astronomical instruments provided by Lieutenant Gilliss are still in use. They have been already enumerated, and we will shortly describe them in detail. In addition to the astronomical observatory, a subterraneous magnetic observatory was constructed on the most approved principles, and furnished with the best instruments which could be procured.

At the close of September, 1844, Lieutenant Gilliss reported the Observatory ready for occupation. The instruments had been mounted and adjusted, and an excellent library provided.

On the 1st of October, Lieutenant M. F. Maury was assigned to the charge of the institution, and directed to remove to it the nautical books, charts, and instruments of the then existing depot. A corps of three lieutenants, six midshipmen, and a machinist, was assigned him; and soon after, four more lieutenants were ordered to the Observatory. Among their names may be recognized some which have already become national, and associated with memories of a nation's gratitude earned by gallant naval service in the present struggle for the preservation of our country and her liberties.

Within the year, three professors were added to the corps, and the all-important assistance of Mr. Sears C. Walker secured, doubtless at that time by far the most eminent practical astronomer whom our country had produced. To the ability and high attainments of Mr. Walker, in connection with Professors Coffin, Keith, and the lamented Hubbard,—all of whom soon took high rank among astronomers, and whose patriotism and love of science led them to regard no personal sacrifices as too great,—astronomy owes far more than will probably ever be put on record. In the following year Mr. Ferguson was added to the astronomical corps, and the zeal and ability with which he has employed the Equatorial are well known. It is probably far within bounds to say that more careful observations have been made by him with this instrument, than have been ever made with all the other equatorial telescopes in the country combined.

Mr. Walker remained but fourteen months at the Observatory. Circumstances which it is needless to recount, but which can easily be imagined by any one, at all conversant with astronomy, who will read the introduction and appendix to either of the two earlier volumes of Washington Observations, made his continuance at the Observatory impossible, and in March, 1847, he resigned his position. But his teachings and influence remained; and an increased number of able professors and astronomical assistants promised great scientific progress.

A large scheme of operations had been planned for the institution. Continual observations of the sun, moon, and fundamental stars were to be kept up by each of the three meridian instruments, and observations of all the moon-culminating stars of the Nautical Almanac by the Transit Instrument. The Prime-Vertical instrument was to be constantly employed in observations of certain special stars; for the measurement of parallax if possible; to observe as many stars of the first and second magnitude as might be; and to form a catalogue of declinations of stars passing near the zenith. The Equatorial was to furnish full observations of the relative positions, color, and magnitude of double stars, as Struve had already done in a much less favorable geographical position; of clusters and nebulæ; of occultations; of comets and newly-discovered planetary bodies. And, besides these, the three Meridian Instruments were to be actively engaged in zone observations, systematically organized, and extending as far as 45° S., at which parallel the observations were to begin.

At the close of 1845 the first volume of Washington Observations was published, bearing the date September 1, and under the name "Astronomical Observations made at the U.S. Naval Observatory." It was on the whole a very creditable work for American astronomy. Besides a fair amount of observations with the two transit instruments, in the meridian and the prime vertical and with the Mural Circle, it contained various important investigations of the errors and corrections peculiar to the several instruments,—investigations which must necessarily be made as preliminary to the successful employment of astronomical instruments, but which—especially the discussion of the various peculiarities of the Mural Circle—were carried out with remarkable ability. Mr. Walker's investigation of the latitude (which he fixed as 38° 53′ 39″.25 for the centre of the dome, a value which there has thus far seemed no occasion for modifying);—Professor Coffin's masterly discussion of the adjustments of the Mural Circle, a model dissertation of its kind; his expansion of Bessel's Refraction tables;—Mr. Walker's Comparison of the Standard Thermometers,—are all of great value. The instruments are redescribed and refigured; but all this material was so extraordinarily combined, was cemented with such unscientific phraseology, and interspersed with such unscientific ideas, that the volume seems not to have received the credit, nor its results the confidence, to which they are fairly entitled.

In 1851, the second volume of Observations appeared, the name of the institution being changed upon the title-page to "National Observatory." This volume comprised all the observations of the year 1846, excepting the zones, and contained numerous observations of sun, moon, planets, and comets, together with the observed positions of nearly six hundred stars. The volume for 1847, which was published in 1853, contains nearly the same amount of results as its predecessor, but, like that, omits the zone observations. The volume for 1848 was issued in 1856, the name of the institution being again changed to "U.S.N. Observatory,"—the Secretary of the Navy having in 1854 directed the discontinuance of the word "National," inasmuch as it was in no strict sense a national institution, though pre-eminently a naval one,—the expenses being defrayed entirely through the Navy Department, and a clause appended by Congress to one of the annual appropriations having provided that its Superintendent shall be an officer of the Navy, not below the grade of lieutenant. This volume contained none but astronomical matter, and not far from the same amount as the other. Finally, the fifth volume was issued in 1859, and contains the observations of 1849 and 1850 combined; in which years, besides observations of the wandering bodies, the places of four hundred and four fixed stars were determined.

No other observations than these were published during the Superintendency of Commander Maury; but the zones observed by the Meridian Circle in 1846 were reduced under the direction of Mr. Ferguson, and published at the close of 1860.

During the memorable days of April, 1861, Commander Maury fled from the Observatory under the mistaken apprehension that sundry treasonable acts of his had already been discovered. Only two hours previous to his flight he had waited upon the Secretary of the Navy at his office, and given no intimation of any desire to resign, or of any disloyal sentiment. It was subsequently found that the preparations for his departure had been for some time going on; but at the last his haste was so great that sundry documents were left behind which completely disclosed the fact that, although an officer of the U.S. Navy, he had been engaged in treasonable correspondence with the enemy. As soon as the facts became known to the Department, he was by order of the President formally dismissed from the service of the United States, and Commander (now Captain) J. M. Gilliss, the original builder of the Observatory, was appointed to his place.

During the sixteen and a half years of Commander Maury's superintendence, very large sums were annually voted to the Observatory, for various purposes connected with its hydrographical and astronomical operations, and for the reduction of observations. A large corps of assistants, both naval and astronomical, were constantly on duty, and much hard work was unquestionably done. The series of admirable observations made with the Mural Circle by Professor Coffin, until his eyesight failed under the labor; his able discussions of results and management of reductions until his separation from the Observatory in 1856; the elegant investigations and refined methods of Professor Hubbard, until his health, too, gave way under the task; and the sound judgment and learning with which he enriched and assisted the Observatory, until his death in the summer of 1863 deprived American science of a bright ornament; the very extensive series of observations of planets and comets which Mr. Ferguson carried on with the Equatorial, with remarkable skill and rare assiduity, for some fifteen years; the ingenuity of Professor Keith; the unwearying devotion and accurate observation of Professor Yarnall;—these, and the exertions of other able and zealous men, all contributed towards the value of the results. But interspersed with these were the observations of many others, who had neither taste for astronomy, knowledge of its simplest laws, nor acquaintance with the nature of instruments. When ordered to the Observatory by the Navy Department, they obeyed the order; when directed by the Superintendent to observe, they observed as well as they could; nor are they to be blamed if their observations are not of high value. Only the mode of administration can be censured, which called on those neither fitted for the task by taste or education, to perform duties entirely out of the line of their profession, and which by its total lack of system failed to provide the requisite instruction, or even so to arrange the work that its value should not be entirely dependent on the ability and conscientiousness of the observer. And it is, moreover, a flagrant ground for censure that the observations of an institution claiming to rank in the first class should remain unreduced for ten, twelve, and even fifteen years, while hundreds of thousands of dollars appropriated by Congress and available for the purpose were expended in performing work of very questionable value and of very certain inaccuracy.

The present Superintendent of the Observatory took charge of the institution at the close of April, 1861, and in February, 1862, the volume of observations for the year 1861 was sent to the printer. In the prefatory notice, Captain Gilliss says:—

"On taking charge of this establishment at the close of April last, I found that the following observations, made prior to the 1st of January, 1861, had not been prepared for the press, though considerable progress had been made in the reduction of the Mural Circle and Equatorial Observations:—

Transit Instrument, 1851–1860, both inclusive.
Mural Circle, " "
Meridian Circle, " "
Equatorial, " "
Magnetical Observations with Declinometer, Vertical Force, Instrument and Dip Circle, from July, 1842, to October, 1844.
Meteorological Observations, from July, 1842, to December, 1860.

"The zone and magnetical observations were discontinued at the dates last named for each, and the Magnetical Instruments were never mounted after their removal from the building formerly occupied near Georgetown.

"It being physically impossible for the small corps of observers to compute their current observations and prepare this mass of work for printing within any reasonable period, a proposition was submitted to Hon. Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy, for authority to place the astronomical portion in charge of a competent astronomer not connected with the Observatory. Appreciating the fact that early publication measurably enhances the value of observations, the honorable Secretary recommended the measure to the favorable consideration of Congress; and, the necessary authority having been granted by that honorable body, a corps of copyists was at once employed to transcribe on properly ruled forms all the observations contained in the record-books.

"The progress already made in the computations secures the publication of a volume immediately after the present one can be passed through the press. After the copyists shall have completed the zone sheets, they will be employed in reducing the magnetical and meteorological observations; and should no unforeseen event occur to cause delay, the whole of the observations will be presented to the public within three years.

"Commencing with the year 1861, it is designed that the meteorological observations shall constitute part of each annual volume."

The zone observations here referred to were made with each of three meridian instruments; and only those made with one instrument—the Meridian Circle, in the year 1846—had been reduced. But nearly one-half the work of reduction for the zones observed with other instruments in that year had also been completed, and as it will probably be within bounds to estimate the labor required for completing the reduction of these eighteen sets of zones as being equal to that of reducing twelve volumes of the other current observations, it will be safe to say, that, while but six out of the sixteen years' current observations had been reduced, only one-ninth part of the zone reductions had been completed, although these observations were not continued after the year 1851. None of the meteorological or magnetical observations had been prepared at all.

A careful examination of the data upon which the zone reductions must be based, led to the rejection of the zones for 1850 and 1851 in total, as not possessing the requisites for successful computation. The amount of computation to be done was thus very much reduced, and the entire mass of remaining observations is now ready for the printer,—with the exception of those zones which, although not containing within themselves all the elements required, can yet be provided with them by observations now making for the purpose.

It would be unjust not to mention in this connection that the Equatorial observations of Mr. Ferguson had for the most part already undergone a preliminary reduction by that gentleman himself; and that Professor Yarnall had in like manner, of his own accord, done much towards preparing his own observations with the Mural. Still, at least five-sevenths of all the astronomical work of the Observatory remained unreduced in April, 1861, as well as the whole of the meteorological observations. The magnetic instruments were not employed, as has been stated.

The volume for 1862 was ready for the printer on the 1st of January, 1863; and but for the difficulty of obtaining promptness from the Government printing-office under the present circumstances, not only this but all the observations of the omitted years would long since have been published. The observations in 1861 give the observed positions of the sun, moon, planets, and about 1680 fixed stars. Those in 1862 embrace the positions of the moon at all hours, the sun, three comets, sixteen asteroids, all the large planets, many double stars, and 2267 fixed stars. And it is believed that these observations are inferior in accuracy and correctness of reduction to none made at any Observatory existing. There is also an elaborate discussion of the longitude of the Observatory, as deduced from all the moon-culminations observed since 1845, and a series of correct illustrations of the aspects of Mars and of one of the comets as seen with the Equatorial.

Among the important duties of the institution is that of furnishing to all Government vessels the requisite charts and instruments for navigation,—chronometers, sextants, compasses, spy-glasses, log and sounding apparatus, &c. The balance of the appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1861, which remained unexpended when the present Superintendent took charge at the end of April, sufficed to procure the reduction of all the observations, and to equip all the vessels called into service by the emergencies of the war. During the past year the establishment has kept five hundred vessels supplied with charts and instruments, being ten times the number which the whole Navy counted before the war; and, best of all, this has been done under the now established policy (for which we may thank the zeal of the Superintendent and the enlightened views of the Navy Department) that the productions of American artists shall always be preferred, that the best mechanical talent in the country shall be stimulated to the construction of the instruments, until we may now proudly say that better nautical instruments are made at home, and for a less price, than ever came to us from Europe.

The amount expended upon the "Wind and Current Charts" by the Observatory under its late Superintendent was about $330,000. If they were accurately prepared, and only proper material used, three times the amount would not have been too much to pay. But the Navy Department has recently referred the subject of their continuance to a committee of the National Academy; and, if rumor speaks true as to the result at which they have arrived, it may well be doubted whether science, navigation, or American reputation abroad have been advanced by the charts alluded to.

Such has been the history of the Naval Observatory. While on the one hand it may, perhaps, be questioned whether the advancement of science and the intellectual progress of the United States might not have been better subserved by an institution on a less restricted basis, by a truly national Observatory, whose officers should be appointed solely with reference to their scientific attainments without regard to naval commissions, we may find much cause for satisfaction that it is at present under the charge of an experienced observer, and that its present astronomical assistants are fitted for their positions both by taste and education. It is probably at this moment making a larger amount of good observations than any observatory in existence, the quality of the work as well as its quantity being carefully regarded, and the constant aim being to direct the energies of the institution to such objects as the present condition of astronomy most distinctly indicates to be desirable. The number of assistants is less by more than fourteen than the average number employed by the late Superintendent.

During the year 1847, a dwelling for the Superintendent was erected immediately east of the Observatory; and in the following year the east wing was extended twenty-four feet, so as to connect it with the former building. The room thus added is used for the chronometers and other instruments belonging to the Navy. Of the four rooms on each floor of the central building, one is occupied as a library-room and office for the Superintendent; two are filled with charts properly arranged for distribution to ships of the Navy, and the remainder on the first and second floors are assigned to the assistants. A standard clock by Kessels, and a standard barometer by Green, are mounted in the office of the Superintendent. One room of the basement has been fitted as a workshop for the machinist; instruments returned from ships and needing repairs are temporarily placed in a second one; and the other two are used for store-rooms. All of them, together with the separating halls, are heated by iron pipes through which hot water circulates from a boiler under the residence of the Superintendent.

The present instruments of the Observatory are those with which it was originally provided, although most of them have since undergone some mechanical or optical modification, in every case by an American mechanician. With a short description of these, drawn from the Introduction to the Observations for 1861, and with an account of the routine and personnel of the Observatory, we will close this sketch.

"The Meridian Transit Instrument is in the west wing. It has an object glass of 5.3 inches diameter, with a focal length of eighty-six inches and an axis forty-two inches long between the bearing points of its pivots. It was made by Ertel & Son, of Munich, and is mounted on monoliths of granite split from the same block, and which are wholly isolated from the floors and building.

"There are two clocks at present in this room. The one in use was made by Parkinson & Frodsham for the old Naval Observatory, and is supported by wood clamps to a granite pier, south and east of the Transit Instrument. It has Graham's dead-beat escapement, with jewelled pallets and mercurial compensation-pendulum, the usual means for altering the length of the rod and putting it in beat, and an index attached to the base of the stirrup that supports the mercurial cylinder, which indicates the arc of vibration upon a divided scale secured to the back of the case. Its pendulum index has been wrought to a delicate knife-edge, which at every vibration passes, as suggested by Saxton, through a globule of mercury supported on a slender bracket projecting from the divided scale. There are wires leading to a galvanic battery and register, for the record of observations upon a Morse fillet.

"The other clock was designed by Dr. Locke, made by Messrs. Howard & Davis, and put up in 1850. It is secured to the west face of the pier originally intended for the Mural Circle.

"The Mural Circle is in the east wing. It is five feet in diameter, and is mounted upon the east face of a sandstone pier. It has a conical axis three feet long, with friction-rollers under the eastern end, connected with rods which pass between the circle and face of the pier, and thence over the top to counterpoises within the cavity of the pier.

"The circle and radial bars, twelve in number, are part of the same casting. The latter are strengthened on their backs by edge bars, and united midway by a second concentric circle. It is divided into 5′ spaces upon a band of gold, inlaid upon the rim perpendicular to its plane, and into whole degrees upon a platina band near the gold one. Each of the latter is numbered. The reading is by six equidistant microscopes secured to the face of the pier, and illuminated through apertures in the same by a gas lamp west of it.

"The telescope is a cylinder, secured to the circle both at the centre and at the extremities. Its object-glass is four inches in diameter and five feet in focal length. Troughton & Simms were the makers.

"In the same room, and east of the Mural Circle, is the Meridian Circle, an instrument originally made by Ertel & Son, and remodelled and furnished with new circles by Mr. Wm. J. Young, of Philadelphia. The material changes, from the description of it given in the volume of Observations for 1846, are the substitution of circles forty inches in diameter for the defective ones of thirty inches, and the removal of the clamp from one of the circles to the axis.

"The clock in this room is placed south of, and equidistant from, the two circles. It was made by Mr. Chas. Frodsham, of London, and is similar in its construction to that of the west wing. But, instead of the single knife-edge, its pendulum index carries a small crutch with two knife-edges, which at each vibration impinge simultaneously upon globules of mercury in separate receptacles of the bracket, whereby the galvanic circuit is closed without passing it through the pendulum. A recording apparatus has been arranged for the instruments of this room.

"The other room of the east wing is wholly devoted to nautical and other instruments for naval purposes. Cases to contain the chronometers, and shelves, &c., are so disposed as to accommodate the largest number and facilitate their examination or distribution. The clock used in rating the chronometers was made for the old Depot of Charts and Instruments by Messrs. Parkinson & Frodsham, and is similar to that of the west wing. It is mounted upon a granite pier, in the southwest corner of the room, and, except the Kessels' clock, its performance is more satisfactory than that of any other one belonging to the establishment. To facilitate and render more certain the comparison of chronometers when noise renders the beat inaudible, it is provided with an electro-magnetic battery, connected by wires with a heavy-sounding tilt-hammer placed near the chronometer cases, which strikes seconds audibly at each impact of its pendulum index with the mercury globule.

"The Transit in the prime vertical is in the north room of the south wing. The telescope has an aperture of 4.85 inches, and a focal length of seventy-eight inches. It is attached to one extremity of an axis forty-two inches long, the other extremity carrying a counterpoise. The pivots of the axis are of fine steel, 3.5 inches in diameter, and are hollow. The telescope and its counterpoise are outside of the supporting pier, but their weights are transferred to the bearing points of the Ys by levers and other counterpoises within the pivots and axis. Its pier is a wide monolith, whose central portion has been cut out for the accommodation of a reversing apparatus of special construction.

"The instrument has not been in use for several years, and such had been its neglect that it was necessary to dismount and grind out the oxidation of its pivots and make other extensive repairs. These were very successfully performed by Mr. William Wurdemann and the machinist of the Observatory, and observations in the prime vertical are now made.

"The clock was made by Charles Frodsham, and is mounted against a granite pier placed east of the prime vertical transit instrument. Instead of glass, it has a steel cylinder for the mercury of its pendulum, and the pendulum-rod screws into a cap covering the upper part of it. The pendulum index has a single knife-edge, like the clock of the west wing.

"The other room of the south wing is in use for library purposes, the piers erected in 1846 for an instrument of unsuccessful design having been removed.

"The Equatorial Instrument under the dome is mounted upon a massive granite pedestal, which rests upon a hollow conical pier whose foundation is nine feet below the ground-line. The instrument was made by Messrs. Merz & Mahler, with an object-glass of 9.6 inches, and focal length of fourteen feet three inches. The finder has an object-glass of 2.6 inches diameter, and focal length of thirty-two inches. The hour and declination circles are, respectively, fifteen and twenty-one inches in diameter. The telescope may be kept in motion by clock-work, and differential measures are made with a micrometer microscope, constructed from a design by the same distinguished optician. The instants of observation are recorded by chronographic apparatus connected with the clock in the south wing.

"A comet-seeker, made by Messrs. Merz & Mahler, stands within the rotunda when not in use. It has an object glass of 3.9 inches aperture, and thirty-two inches focal length, and eye-pieces with magnifying powers ranging from twelve to fifty times. It is equatorially mounted on a shaft of brass supported upon a tripod having the ordinary adjusting screws, and has hour and declination circles each of five inches diameter, whose divisions read by means of verniers to 1'. Its telescope is of deal, with a veneering of mahogany. It is accurately balanced in every position.

"There are substantial supports outside the rotunda, from one or the other of which all portions of the heavens may be seen, and a level platform covers the roof of the building for the greater convenience of the observer with the comet-seeker.

"For the purpose of giving correct time to the city, a staff has been placed on top of the dome, and a large but light ball is hoisted ten minutes before twelve o'clock of each day except Sunday. The pulley is connected with an electro-magnetic battery after the ball is up, and the circuit is broken by the assistant in the chronometer-room at the instant of noon."

The charts and nautical books are arranged in two rooms and the hall of the second story. They are under charge of Commander Whiting and Professor Pendleton, U.S.N. Each chart has its number, and all are arranged so as to promote the most expeditious and safe selection. More than 20,000 sheets per year have been distributed since 1861.

The chronometers and nautical instruments are in the east room of the east wing. They are under charge of Mr. John R. Eastman, Aid, who compares all chronometers at noon with the standard clock, makes up rates of those on hand at the end of each month, and selects the instruments for vessels to be equipped. He is responsible for the workshop, where all instruments returned from vessels and needing repairs are put in order, and thus a great saving to the Government is annually effected. Mr. Clark, a most thorough mechanician, is kept constantly employed on these repairs and incidental injuries to the astronomical instruments. He has one laborer to assist him.

Measuring the Hundredth Part of a Second.

As a matter of popular information for the benefit of those who read and wonder at the accounts of astronomical observations which record the movements of the heavenly bodies to the hundredth part of a second of time, we extract from a pamphlet issued by one of our colleges the following description of the instrument and the method by which that wonder is performed.

The elegant instrument of Prof. W. C. Bond, known as the "Magnetic Register," or "Spring Governor," is one, by and upon which, through the influence of electro-magnetism, the instant of time at which an observation takes place can be precisely recorded. By means of very delicate machinery regulated by the "Spring Governor," a contrivance at once peculiar and beautiful, a horizontal cylinder, thirteen inches long and six in diameter, is made to revolve with great uniformity, precisely once per minute of sidereal time. Around this cylinder is clamped a sheet of paper; and upon this rests a glass pen filled with ink, which, as the cylinder turns from under it, marks a line from end to end of the sheet. This line, in length, is the exact measure of the duration of one minute of time. Upon the opposite end of a delicate lever, to which the glass pen is attached, is a small vertical iron bar, known as an "armature," resting close in front of, but not in contact with, the "poles" of a soft iron horseshoe magnet. This magnet is coiled with wire, and is in the circuit of a galvanic battery, which circuit is also, by an ingenious arrangement, made to pass through a fine steel spring, dipping into a globule of quicksilver directly beneath the pendulum of a sidereal clock. Attached to the lower extremity of the pendulum is a small ivory index, which, at every vibration, drives the little spring out of the mercury, but instantly on passing, allows it to return. In this manner the circuit is almost instantaneously broken and closed, at the termination of each second of time; and this "break" and "make" of circuit are at once answered by the pen, in obedience to the action or rest of the magnet with which it is connected, thus dotting upon the sheet, as it revolves, the sixty seconds constituting the minute of its revolution. The movement of the "armature" from the magnet during the instantaneous release of the latter from the influence of the galvanic circuit, is effected by a little bow spring; and, in order that the pen shall not return upon the lines already described, the whole magnet is moved forward on a miniature railway, by means of a cord passing round the axle of one of the main wheels of the "Spring Governor." By means of this instrument and a "break circuit" key, always near his hand, the observer, by simply touching a delicate spring, is enabled to record with the utmost degree of precision in among the second marks of the clock, the time of any observation he may wish to obtain, to the hundredth part of a second.

Products of Agriculture in the Loyal States for 1859, '62 and '63.—The Frosts of the Summer and Fall of 1863.

In the NATIONAL ALMANAC for 1863, we gave the tables from the Census Report of 1860, showing the amount of the agricultural products of 1859. In this article we shall briefly exhibit the progress of American Agriculture since that year.

As the crops of 1859 were not made known, by the publication of the Census returns, until about a year ago, no estimates of the crops of 1860, and 1861, have been made. But, upon data furnished by that publication, and by other means, the Department of Agriculture has formed an estimate of the principal crops of 1862, and, from information derived from its extensive correspondence among farmers, and taking the estimates for the crops of 1862 as a basis, that Department has calculated the leading crops of 1863.

In the following table, these crops, for the years 1859, 1862 and 1863, are given for the loyal States, and by them the progress of our agriculture, since the Census of 1860 was taken, will be seen.

For the purpose of exhibiting more clearly the injuries suffered from the extraordinary frosts of 1863, the table separates the crops into Summer, Fall, and Miscellaneous.

A comparison between the years 1859 and 1862 exhibits a high state of agricultural prosperity. This, however, cannot be attributed altogether to regular advance, but, to some extent, to the fact that the crop of 1859, of which the Census was taken, was below an average crop, whilst that of 1862 was the best ever before produced. The crop of Tobacco is the only one exhibiting a decrease, and this was caused by the war in Kentucky and Missouri, which States, in 1859, produced 133,188,628 lbs. One-fourth of this was deducted in the estimates for 1862, on account of the war. The Tobacco crop, in 1859, of all the States, was 429,364,751 lbs., and that of the loyal States, in 1863, 267,302,770 lbs., a difference of 162,061,981 lbs., showing that, greatly as this crop has been increased, it may yet be further increased with profit.

The aggregate of the summer crops of 1863 surpasses that of 1862, large as it was. But the fall crops, with the exception of Tobacco, are less, and especially the national crop of Corn. This decrease is attributable to two causes, the drought of early summer in Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, and to the early and destructive frosts of August 30th and September 18th. The Tobacco crop, also, was much injured by the first of these frosts, but as much of it had been harvested before the frost, and the acreage planted much greater than that of 1862, the yield exceeded that of 1862.

The frosts in the Mississippi Valley, during the summer and fall of 1863, are so remarkable, and were so destructive, that a more particular reference to them is demanded.

Drought and cold seem to be associated. "The cold winter," says Mr. Flint, in his article on the climate of New England, "of 1697, resembling that of 1641, preceded a summer marked by 'a sore and long-continued drought' in July and August. In 1748 the drought was intense in New England; and this summer was followed by so hard a winter that 'the suffering was intense.'" In 1749 there was another severe drought, and this summer was succeeded by a winter so hard "that it was difficult to keep cattle alive." In 1761 there was another "melancholy dry time;" the winter following "long and dreary;" and the summer of 1762 accompanied by a drought of "terrible severity." Without referring to any more instances during the earlier history of the country, we may cite the droughts of 1854 and 1856, and the winters following these years, as still fresh in the recollection of all, for their intense severity.

In the Mississippi Valley, the spring of 1863 was unfavorable generally, on account of severe drought in May and June, and, in extensive districts, continuing into July. The drought, in the Eastern States, gave way, in June, to favorable rains; but, in many parts of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Ohio, it continued in great severity during June, and part of July. When rain fell in these States, it was succeeded, about the middle of July, by an extensive frost in the west and north-western States, "sufficiently severe, in low situations, to injure corn, sorghum, and tomatoes."

Favorable weather followed this frost, during which the fall crops rapidly advanced, and promised a favorable yield. The weather, generally, was very warm. But, on the 22d of August, the thermometer rapidly fell in Minnesota, and, in less than a day, the change was twenty-three degrees. It continued to descend, and, on the morning of the 29th, ice formed, about an eighth of an inch in thickness, and corn was killed in places. In Nebraska, Iowa and Wisconsin, the fall, during the same days, was more than thirty-two degrees. In Kansas and Missouri the change was as great, but took place between the night of the 23d and that of the 30th. In Illinois, Indiana and Michigan, the fall, in the thermometer, was to the same number of degrees, although the time was between the 24th and 31st. But the cold air was so far mitigated, when it had reached the middle of Ohio, as to be of little injury to the crops.

The atmospherical conditions, immediately preceding these changes, were strong winds, blowing from the south-west, veering to the west, then to the north-west, and settling due north. They blew with violence over Lake Superior, and exhibited all the characteristics of a cold storm. The destruction by this frost was very irregular; one field was destroyed, whilst an adjoining one was untouched, showing that warm and cold currents of air were in contact, but not blended in a uniform temperature. In low places, unprotected by fogs, the crops suffered most, because the cold air, being heaviest, flowed into low places, displacing but not mixing with the warm air over them. The uplands suffered least, for the warm air, elevated by the cold air underneath, spread over them. Hills protected crops lying immediately south of them, by checking the progress of the cold air coming from the north. All these phenomena indicate that the cold air came from the extreme north. But meteorology cannot satisfactorily determine the causes that brought it southwards. When general rains fall, the change from vapor to rain, in condensation, liberates an immense latent heat, which rapidly raises the temperature of the air into which it passes, causing its rapid ascension. The motion would extend to the air beneath, especially when warm, and the vacuum thus created would be filled by the cold air from the north. Again, when the atmosphere next to the earth is greatly heated, a similar ascension would be the result, producing a vacuum which would be filled in a like manner. In these changes, the surrounding atmosphere becomes implicated, resulting in the general displacement noticed. Or it may be that terrestrial magnetism and the electrical condition of the air and earth are the chief causes. In the Monthly Report of the Agricultural Department, it is said, that "changes, similar in kind, though less distinctly marked, so far from being unusual, are exhibited in the meteorological records of every season." This is true of the climate of the Mississippi Valley, which having no mountain range to intercept the north and north-west winds, or any warm air of ocean currents to mitigate them, is exposed to the greatest extremes of atmospheric changes. But frosts, so untimely and so severe, are, fortunately, seldom experienced there.

After the frost of the 30th of August, the weather continued cool for several days, during which the crops made but little progress in maturing, and the earth rapidly cooled. But on the 13th of September a rapid elevation of the temperature took place, reaching, in Nebraska, to eighty-three degrees. But, on the 16th, it rapidly fell, and, on the 18th, had fallen forty-six degrees below the temperature of the 13th. On the 18th, the frost was general throughout the West, and, on account of the cooling of the earth, far more destructive than the frost of August It had a similar progress to that one: the winds were the same, occupying about two days in passing from the remote western States to the eastern, and receiving the same modification of temperature in their passage. The causes producing these frosts were apparently the same. They were preceded by great heat, rains following, accompanied with high winds, which changed rapidly from the south to the north by the west.

On the 22d of October, a snow fell over nearly all of the West, commencing in Utah on the 18th, at Green Bay, in Wisconsin, on the 22d, at Fort Riley, Kansas, at St. Paul, Minnesota, in Illinois and Indiana on the same day, changing to rain in Ohio and eastward, and reaching the ocean about the 24th. This snow seems to have been attended with the same peculiarities as the frosts. At Green Bay, it fell to the depth of one foot, and in Indiana of about three inches.

Since then, the weather was favorable to the recently-sown crops for 1864, and for all farm-work. Pastures were in good condition, and farm-stock required no other food up to the middle of December.

Relative Progress in Agriculture of the Loyal and Disloyal States. from 1850 to 1860.—Progress of the whole Country from 1793 to 1861.

From the Annual Report of the Agricultural Department for 1862, we take the following extract. It is from the report of Mr. Bollman, Chief Clerk of the Statistical Division of that Department, to the Commissioner of Agriculture, in which, from the Census statistics of 1850 and 1860, he comments on the great agricultural prosperity of the country during the decade between these years.

No one, he says, can examine the tables of these statistics without making a comparison between the progress of the sections of our country now known as the loyal and disloyal States, so that he may see the causes, if any exist, which have led to a rebellion now desolating so many portions of the South, and consigning to unknown and premature graves so many American citizens.

The following table will aid in instituting such comparison. It shows the per cent. increase, from 1850 to 1860, of the principal agricultural productions of both sections:

	Loyal States.		Disloyal States.
Live-stock.....	348¼	per cent.	249½	per cent.
Value of same.....	209½	"	194	"
Corn.....	55⅔	"	16⅘	"
Wheat.....	67	"	91	"
Tobacco.....	112½	"	118	"
Cotton.....	.....	"	213	"
Wool.....	131½	"	17	"
Hay.....	36	"	451½	"
Value of farms...	93	"	136	"
Total increase.....	935⅔	"	1,083⅘	"

Great as has been the agricultural prosperity of the country during the last decennial period between 1850 and 1860, we see that the South has not only shared in it, but has outstripped the North. Such prosperity fully sustains the declarations of Mr. Stephens, in his reply to Mr. Toombs, when the former was opposing the secession of Georgia from the Union. He said;

"I notice, in the Comptroller General's Report that the taxable property of Georgia is $670,000,000 and upwards, an amount not far from double what it was in 1850. I think I may venture to say that, for the last ten years, the material wealth of the people of Georgia has been nearly if not quite doubled. The same may be said of our advance in education, and everything that makes our civilization."

And, speaking more generally for the South, he asks:

"Have we not at the South, as well as at the North, grown great, prosperous, and happy under the operation of the general Government? Has any part of the world ever shown such rapid progress in the development of wealth, and all of the material resources of national power and greatness, as the Southern States have under the general Government, notwithstanding all its defects?"

In his oration, on the occasion of laying the corner-stone of the Capitol extension, Mr. Webster gives a comparative table to exhibit our unexampled progress from 1793, when the corner-stone of the Capitol was laid by Washington, to 1851, when that of its extension was laid. We take a few of the matters from this table, and carry them up to 1861, the year of the rebellion:

Exports of Breadstuffs, 1863.

The annexed statistics of the annual export of breadstuffs for a series of years is from the Circular of Mr. Edward Bill. The export trade of this country, in breadstuffs, to Great Britain and Ireland for the past three years, has greatly exceeded that of any former period, and its importance is duly estimated by all reflecting minds. The tables are made up to the end of the cereal year, and may be relied on for their general accuracy. In addition to the English and continental shipments, the clearances to Mexico, Brazil, and other South American ports, the West Indies, British Provinces, etc., for the last year amount to 1,325,143 bbls. flour, 85,174 bush. wheat, 599,894 bush. corn, 283,598 bush. oats, 50,889 bush. barley, 15,374 bush. rye, 134,280 bbls. corn meal, 6364 bbls. rye flour, and 29,340 bush. peas.

Unproductive	397,000,000 =	1,934,611,000

The public property—palaces, churches, hospitals, prisons, bridges, forts, arsenals, artillery, dock-yards, military, naval, and ordnance stores, ships of war, and the like—he valued at eighty-nine millions of pounds.

These aggregates are the results of the most comprehensive and carefully-made exploration, and the best thought-out array of the subjects of the calculation that have yet been made. The later and more fashionable "authorities," however, reject his method and his conclusions, having generally agreed to cut down his aggregate of the private property of the empire to twenty-one hundred millions of pounds,—a reduction of nearly twenty-five per cent.—at which sum we have felt compelled to state the wealth of the nation at the time, in order to keep it in some sort of harmony with the received estimates for earlier and later periods. McCulloch says of Colquhoun's "Wealth, Power, and Resources of the British Empire," "This work enjoyed for a while a considerable degree of popularity, to which it certainly had very slender claims. It is, from beginning to end, a tissue of extravagant hypotheses and exaggerations;" and, accordingly, the author has gone into the biographical dictionaries with a badly-damaged reputation and out of credit with the more recent British writers and their copyists. Pablo Pebrer, the very best of them, indeed, takes Colquhoun's items and values for 1812 as a basis of his own for 1833, de claring that the estimates are even too low; but, overborne by the prevailing doctrines of the "dismal school," he deserts his data and his convictions, and simply adds thirty-three and a third per cent. for the increase of twenty years, for no assignable reason except that McCulloch had said, "sixty years is the shortest time in which the capital of an old and densely-peopled country can be expected to be doubled." But, according to Lowe and Porter, the wealth of the kingdom nearly doubled in eighteen years—from 1823 to 1841; according to Porter and Levi, it increased 50 per cent. in seventeen years, at which rate it would double in about twenty-nine years. Porter's estimate for 1841 is an increase over the amount at which these people put the valuation in 1812, at a rate which would double in thirty-two years. Levi's £6,000,000,000 in 1858 is an increase of 185¼ per cent. in forty-six years, and would be 126¼ per cent. on Colquhoun's estimate, if his "extravagant hypotheses and exaggerations" were accepted as the true valuation of 1812. Nothing can save these calculators from still greater extravagance than they charge upon Colquhoun, but their admission that his statement is moderate and just. Thus McCulloch's sixty-year period of doubling is totally demolished, even by the showing of those who have permitted themselves to be overruled by it. Pebrer quotes a report of the House of Commons in 1830, which showed that in Ireland the increase of wealth was far greater than of population. He knew that this was also true of France. He even states the general opinion of all the economists of the productive school in confirmation; yet he submits so far to the "authorities" as to assign a much lower rate of increase in the wealth than in the population of the United Kingdom for the period from 1812 to 1833.

Leone Levi, one of the latest and most approved of this sect of economists, puts the increase of the nation's wealth at 122 per cent. in the period 1800 to 1841, and at 50 per cent. from 1841 to 1858, an accurately even rate of accumulation,—for as 41 is to 122, so is 17 to 50. This is arithmetic, not enumeration, estimation, or appraisement. A period, one-half of which elapsed before the modern improvements in manufactures and agriculture were fairly introduced, cannot approach such equality of wealth-producing power with that which covers all the productive agencies brought into service between 1841 and 1858.

The estimates which, for want of authorities, we have supplied, are made in conformity with the doctrines and data of those quoted in the table. The results show that no concordance can be effected, and help to expose the absence of theoretic and practical truth, in the principles and process which they adopt.

All the English statisticians exclude the British national stocks or funds, and all bonds, mortgages, acceptances, and other evidences of domestic debt, from their estimates of the people's wealth. Lowe rejects jewelry, household furniture, and ornaments; he admits the houses that twenty millions of people live in, and the lumber they are made of, but he excludes the wearing-apparel they live in, while he puts the ready-made manufactures at as high a figure as Colquhoun does. McCulloch's definition of capital excludes jewelry, but embraces race-horses; with him it is nothing but "that portion of the produce of industry which may be made directly available, either for the support of human existence, or the facilitating of production." This is what capital means in the current language of tradesmen; but he gives it as the true definition in the science of political economy. Pebrer includes the industry of a nation in his definition as if he intended to capitalize it, but, of course, he gives only the value of implements and machinery, and not of the men and women that employ them in production.

Statisticians are generally held to be eminently practical people; on the contrary, they are more given to theorizing than any other class of writers, and are generally less expert in it.

2. The annual products of industry and capital, as stated in percentage of the capital-wealth of the British Empire, look as if they might be true, and might also afford a law of the relation. They hold a pretty regular proportion to the given capital through all the periods tabled, declining in proportion as capital increases, which is doubtless true; but, closely examined, these annual incomes appear to come by arithmetical rules, or are at least controlled by them. They decline from 15 to 10 per cent. of the capital in sixty-five years with tolerable regularity, but there is no law of the subject in them, for they are certainly not true facts. When the distributive share of each person in the product of the year is examined, it is manifestly inadequate at once to the current support of the people and the constant accumulation of wealth, though taken at its lowest statement.

We conclude that the authorized estimates of the capital and annual income of the British people need reformation, and, especially, that the doctrines of Malthus and Ricardo must be discarded by their statisticians if the facts and figures of universal experience are ever to get allowance.

3. Capital wealth and annual product of the United States and of the loyal States:—

The first attempt to obtain the data by actual investigation was made by the United States Marshals in 1840. Since that time we have official valuations more and more complete at the end of each census decade. That these three inventories of the property of the Union are all defective in the matters intended to be embraced, and understated also in valuation, is well known. There is not an item in which they are suspected of overstatement.

We are indebted to Professor Tucker for his digest of the Census of 1840, and to him and the Secretary of the Treasury (Mr. Guthrie) for the like service in 1850. The valuation of property in 1860 for the Union and for the loyal States, we have from the Census Bureau. From the official returns of both 1850 and 1860, we have subtracted the value of the slaves, which was included in the official aggregates, holding them, for all the purposes of our inquiry, as producers and consumers of wealth, and not as property, otherwise than the laborers of any other country are a part of their national wealth and resources.

The property value of the loyal States at midsummer, 1863, we have estimated by adding to its amount in 1860 the average increase of the decade ending that year, and not at the market-prices ruling in 1863.

The estimates for the other periods in the table for which no authority is quoted, are our own, under guidance of such data as we could command.

The value of the year's products in 1860 is obtained by taking the agricultural products of that year (given in quantity in the preliminary report of the Bureau, but not priced) at 90 per cent. increase upon those of 1850; by subtracting from the value of the manufactures one-third for the raw materials, which are included in the estimate of the agricultural values; and by adding 400,000,000 for the profits of commerce.

We have not room, here, to describe the process by which we obtain the year's product for 1860 in the loyal States. No labor or care has been spared in obtaining it.

The annual product put down in the table to the United States in the several periods, is in all instances greatly below the truth. The share allowed to each person stands at $62.28 in 1840, and at $86.41 in 1850; but the expenditure or consumption per head, in these years, cannot be estimated at less than $100; and the consumption per head in 1860 was at least equal to the amount allowed by the stated production of the year. Beside this deficiency of provision for the current subsistence of the people, there is the accumulation of capital wealth to be accounted for, amounting to 2,410,000,000 in the former period, and to the enormous sum of 8,009,000,000, or an increase of 130 per cent., in the latter.

We need not stop here to estimate the spontaneous growth of our national wealth, or that enhancement of value which occurs in real estate by the rapid settlement of our wild lands, and almost as rapid growth in the value of the fixed property in the older States, which, of course, would account for a very considerable part of the apparent disparity between the property value and the annual production, because an unquestionable deficiency in the reported products occurs in the following particulars, for which the Census-takers are not responsible:—

They take no account of the current consumption of our agriculturists and of their families and employees. In 1840, this class amounted to three-fourths of the total population, and approached the same proportion in 1850; nor are any manufacturing or mechanical products of the year returned whose annual value falls below $500. Beside all this, which probably amounts to one-fourth of the total annual product, no account is taken of the labor employed in clearing and improving land, in building railroads, canals, houses, manufactories, steamships, and other vessels; nor of the labor employed in coal-mines; nothing of the products of the fine arts, nor of a large portion of the products of the useful arts; all of which may be very safely stated as equal to half the value of the agricultural and manufacturing products noticed by the Census-takers. Some of these appear in the valuation of the property of the country in the decennial Census appraisements, and help to swell the obvious disparity. The very considerable increase of the values of 1863 over those of 1860, is owing to the fact that the growth of wealth in the loyal States is so much greater than the average enhancement in the whole Union before the severance of the estimates given in the tabular statement. The most surprising of our statements are precisely those which have been most carefully considered and best verified.

4. Population column. No official enumeration of the people of England, Wales, and Scotland was made previous to the year 1801, and no complete enumeration in Ireland till 1821. The population of the United Kingdom for other years stated, is obtained by calculation.

The population of the United States for every Census-year, is the official return for the date. For other years it is estimated by Tucker's rule of 3 per cent. increase per annum, except for the loyal States in 1863, to which his rule does not apply. In time of peace, with immigration at its average rate, the loyal States would have had a population of 24,500,000 in June, 1863; but allowing half a million for loss by the casualties of war, deficiency of births, and of customary immigration,—considerably too large an allowance,—would leave 24,000,000 as we have stated it. In the number given to the loyal States in 1860, the Census returns for that year are exactly followed, the counties which now constitute West Virginia being included.

5. British debt. The authority for the amount of British debt and annual charge (interest and management), is the financial reports presented to Parliament and published by order of the House of Commons, except for the year ending March 31, 1863, which is taken from the Royal Almanac for 1864, in which, however, the capital of the unfunded debt is not given. We have calculated it from the rates of interest which its items severally bear.

It must be observed that the Exchequer bills required to meet deficiencies of the last quarter of the current year, and which are issued in the first quarter of the ensuing year, are not included in the first statement of the debt and interest. This deficiency was, in March, 1862, nearly 2,000,000 pounds sterling. Moreover, very considerable differences of the total amount of the debt and annual charge are met with in the best authorities. Some of them capitalize the terminable annuities, adding the amount to the "debt;" some charge them to the annual interest account, and some overlook them. Properly they have no principal, nor do they represent the interest of cash borrowed and paid into the Exchequer. They generally express the depreciation of loans, or part of the depreciation of loans sold at a nominal price above their market value. Generally, they are compensatory payments. Nevertheless their arithmetical principal is as much a part of the debt proper as are the consols, which are perpetual annuities, have no principal demandable by the holders, and whose capital is simply the market-price at which they sell at the broker's board. They differ from the United States debt in this, that the Exchequer is under no contract to pay or reimburse the capital of the debt at any time.

The very considerable variance of the debt and annual charge in 1858 and 1861, was occasioned by the expiry of terminable annuities in 1859 and 1860.

The increase of the capital of the debt in 1858 over its amount in 1850 was produced by a loan of £16,000,000 taken in April, 1855, by the Messrs. Rothschild at the rate of £100 in consols for every £100 cash subscribed, and a terminable annuity for thirty years of 14*s.* 6*d.* for every £100 of stock, —that is, at the rate of 3.725 per cent. for thirty years, and 3 per cent. thereafter. This is reckoned as equivalent to a loan in consols at 87½, which is the same thing as saying that the loan was contracted at 3.425 per cent. The increase of the debt in 1863 over the amount in 1860–1, may be accounted for by an excess of expenditure over ordinary revenue in 1861 and 1862, resulting in 1863, in an increase of the total debt of about $15,000,000.

The annual charge in 1863 was lessened as compared with that of 1858 upon a nearly equal principal, in part by the expiry of terminable annuities, charged as interest, and in part by the reduced rate of interest on the floating debt in the latter year; bank interest ranging through the fiscal year 1858 at 5 to 10 per cent, and in the year ending March, 1863, at 2½ to 3 per cent., and in the money-market falling from 12 per cent. in the former to 6 and 5 in the latter; besides, 5,000,000 of Exchequer bonds outstanding in 1858 were reduced to £418,300 in 1863.

These statements are made to caution the reader against authors who report the debt and charge from official summaries. Upon turning from such tabular statements to the account of annual expenditure published under the same official sanction, it will be found that the amount of the annual charge sometimes varies as much as £2,000,000.

6. United States debt and interest. Our debt is official for every period stated. For 1863 it is given as it stood on the books of the Treasury on the 1st of October. It is treated in the other columns of the table as chargeable upon the people and property of the loyal States only. And the annual interest stated is the amount which the principal would carry for the year ending October 1, 1864, if the principal remained so long unchanged. The proportion of this interest to the annual income of the year, is stated at $1\frac{6}{10}$ per cent. This would be true if the annual income of the people were correctly given; but if, as we suppose, this is put down at two-thirds of its real amount, the burden of interest upon the people's income would be something less than nine-tenths of 1 per cent.

The proportion of the total debt of the United States to the private property of the loyal States, stated at 8¼ per cent. nearly, means that the value of our property in 1863, at the prices ruling before the rebellion, if standing at the amount given in the property-column twenty years hence, or at the maturity of the debt, would be as $100 to $8.77 of debt, and takes no account of the enhancement of our wealth in the mean time. What that shall be when the debt is to be reimbursed, cannot now be foretold or even imagined. If it shall increase during the two next decennial periods following the year 1863, at the rate of the period between 1850 and 1860, the sum will be above 70,000,000,000, or double the present computed value of Great Britain and Ireland; and a debt of 2,000,000,000 would then be less than 3 per cent. upon the principal of the wealth pledged for its ultimate discharge, while the burden of its interest upon the annual income of the country would be lessened in corresponding proportion.

If we take the estimated wealth of Great Britain to be equally underrated in 1816 and in 1858, we see how the burden of national debt declines relatively to the value of the property which must pay it. In these forty-two years the incumbrance fell from 40 to 13 per cent. of the national wealth, while the capital of the debt was reduced less than 3,000,000 on 4,200,000,000, or the burden fell from 40 to 13, while the debt fell only as from 40 to 37, or, in other words, the debt of 1858 would have been a charge of 37½ per cent. on the property of 1816, but was only 13.4 per cent. of the property of 1858. The debt of the United States in 1816 was a charge of 7 per cent. on the property of that day; in 1860 it would have been no more than nine-tenths of 1 per cent.; and a debt of 1,222,000,000, which is 8¼ per cent. of the computed wealth of the loyal States in 1863, would, at a rate of increase in valuation in the next twenty years no greater than occurred in the last ten years, sink to $1\frac{6}{10}$ per cent.

Our tabular statement, with these hints, is submitted as a study in financial statistics. Exhaustive tabulation is a sort of cross-harrowing of the subject, which is its best and most searching exploration, and the best method of getting at the use and value of the data.

General Remarks.

The increase of the total population of the United States in the ten years, 1850–60, was 35.52 per cent.—of the total population of the free States, 41.62 per cent.; of the loyal States, 40.22 per cent.; of the total population of the rebel States, 25.37 per cent.; of the free population of the rebel States, 26.32 per cent.; of the slave population of the rebel States, 23.5 per cent.; of the whole slave population of the Union, 23.38 per cent.; and of the total free colored population, 12.3 per cent.

The increased value of the property of the United States in the same period (1850—1860) was 129.7 per cent.—of the property of the free States, 124.52 per cent.; of the loyal slave States, 132.04 per cent.; of the rebel slave States, 139.76. (The value of the slaves in neither case included.) The greater increased per cent. of the wealth of the slave than of the free States, in the decade, is mainly attributable to the quantity of cotton produced in the period, and the price it commanded. From 1840 to 1850, the exports of cotton to foreign countries were valued at $533,000,000, and at an average of 7.7 cents per pound; in the period 1850 to 1860, the exports amounted to $1,236,000,000, at an average of 10¼ cents per pound. To this must be added their exports of tobacco, rice, and breadstuffs and provisions, and the amount of all these articles sold to the North-

States. But to understand the value of this greater increase as expressed in percentage, it must be recollected that the capital wealth of the rebel States in 1850 was but $2,289,000,000, slaves included, while that of the loyal States was $4,846,000,000,—the latter having increased their capital $6,050,000,000, the former but $2,913,000,000,—the Census valuation of the slaves being embraced in these aggregates. But the character of this enhanced wealth is also a matter of prime importance in estimating its worth as a measure and index of prosperity. The real estate of the rebel States, as reported by the marshals in 1860, was 43 per cent. and the personal 57 per cent. of their property; while in the loyal States the real was 66 per cent., and the personal but 34. The average ratio of real to personal estate in New York, Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania, is 75 per cent. of the total, or $\frac{75}{100}$ against $\frac{43}{100}$, the average of the rebel States. South Carolina, Georgia, and North Carolina have but 30 per cent. of their wealth in real estate, and 70 in personal. The proportion of fixed to floating capital in a nation is the truest measure of its real wealth and of its grade of civilization. Among savages land is worth little, and its improvements nothing; real property scarcely exists. In the highest civilization and greatest prosperity, real estate preponderates, and its degree of excess over personal, measures and expresses the national welfare.

UNITED STATES SANITARY COMMISSION.

Shortly after the commencement of the present war, a letter was addressed by the Acting Surgeon-General (Dr. R. C. Wood) to the Hon. Simon Cameron, Secretary of War, asking for the appointment of "A Commission of Inquiry and Advice in respect to the Sanitary Interests of the United States Forces." Dr. Wood states that the sudden and large increase of the army has created an immense pressure upon the Medical Bureau, and the Commission is intended to act "in co-operation with the Bureau in elaborating and applying such facts as might be elicited from the experience and more extended observations of those connected with armies, with reference to the diet and hygiene of troops, and the organization of military hospitals, etc.;" that "this Commission is not intended to interfere with, but to strengthen the present organization, introducing and elaborating such improvements as the advanced stage of medical science might suggest, more particularly as regards the class of men who, in this war of sections, may be called to abandon the comforts of home, and be subjected to the privations and casualties of war." Five gentlemen were named as suitable members of the Commission.

The Secretary of War authorized the appointment of this Commission, June 9th, 1861, and ordered it "to direct its inquiries to the principles and practices connected with the inspection of recruits and enlisted men; the sanitary condition of the volunteers; to the means of preserving and restoring the health, and of securing the general comfort and efficiency of troops; to the proper provision for cooks, nurses, and hospitals; and to other subjects of like nature." He orders it also to communicate to the Department and the Medical Bureau, "from time to time, such observations and results as it may deem expedient and important."

The Commission thus created was recognized by an order (June 16th, 1861) from the then Surgeon-General C. A. Finlay, enjoining upon all medical officers of the army and volunteers to "render every facility for such objects, and to give the Commissioners admission, when on visits of inspection, into all Hospitals, Regimental and General," which order was afterwards approved by Hon. E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War, March 7, 1862.

The energies of the Commission were first directed to a thorough inspection of the Camps and Hospitals of the Army. To this end a corps of medical experts was formed, composed of those who had devoted time to hygiene and other subjects bearing upon the well-being of troops. Regiments were not only visited on their entrance into service, but at stated periods afterwards; errors of diet, or treatment of the men, were pointed out to the officer, and assistance rendered in every way to enable the latter to obtain the greatest possible efficiency from his command. Wherever, through ignorance or fraud, on the part of Quartermasters and Commissaries, the soldier was deprived of such advantages as were his due, the defect was examined into, traced to its cause, and then pursued until redress was obtained from the proper authority.

As the war advanced, it was found that all the supplies which could be collected by the Government would be inadequate to the wants of the sick and wounded. The people were desirous of aiding in the great contest for freedom, each according to his or her ability. To distribute their contributions, without the help of an organization thoroughly trained and skilled in military life, would result in annoyance to medical officers, and would insure detriment to discipline. The Commission then undertook this task of distribution,—becoming the recognized almoners of a nation's good will to her soldiers. The distribution has always been preferably made in accordance with the written statement of a medical officer as to the existence of want. In this way it has acted, even in its relief work, as a body supplementary to the regular Medical Bureau. Its business is not fault-finding, but relief-bringing,—to prevent suffering wherever possible,—and, wherever suffering is found, to aid the regular medical officers to alleviate it in such ways as they may indicate.

We do not dwell upon certain new features grafted upon the Medical Bureau, through the influence of the Commission, in which particular it has simply given intelligible utterance to the feelings of the people, whose representative it is. Its operations, in this respect, show a wonderful contrast with the opposition to reform encountered by the English in the Crimean War, on the part of their own authorities. Bound down by the technicalities of customs, whose spirit had long since been evaporated, the shortcomings of the Commissariat and other departments of the British Army were the cause of much suffering, and yet redress was slow and tiresome. Our own rules have become much more pliant. Where they can be proven to be clogs or hinderances, they are abolished, or substituted by others better adapted for the emergency. Our war is for National existence; and while no expense is spared in carrying out all its details, that which is involved in supplying the wants of the men is styled extravagance by no one.

The Commission has distributed clothing, concentrated food, fresh vegetables, stimulants, reading matter, etc., to the value of $7,000,000. This has been raised all through the land. It has come in gold and silver bars from California and Nevada, in contributions from patriotic Americans living abroad, and from the aged sires, anxious mothers, and warm-hearted sisters of the soldiers now toiling in the field. Little sewing circles, in villages, have reckoned it a great privilege to contribute their mite to the soldier, and have consigned it to the Commission with full confidence that it would reach some one whose needs it would supply. The prayers of thousands have been poured forth in its behalf.

Our space prevents us giving more than a very brief outline of the modus operandi of this peculiar auxiliary to the great war. The work of the Commission is carried on under two general heads—Inspection and Relief. For the first, a corps of medical officers, known as Sanitary Inspectors, has been created, whose members are distributed through all the great Armies of the United States. Their business is to carry on a regular series of inspections of the troops and Hospitals, so as to keep the Chief of Inspection informed of their condition. In making these inspections, it is expected that they confer directly with the officers in charge, and aid them, by advice, or otherwise, in any emergencies that may require such aid. Wherever defects occur, their business is especially to solicit remedial means from the officer directly in charge, and, if this source of relief fail, then to report the case to others higher in authority. They are not sent to pry out the weak points, but to aid in strengthening such. These duties, which may be called advisory and preventive, do not constitute the whole of the Inspector's duty. He has also scientific duties, comprising the collection of statistical data, the examination of local causes of disease, the effects of certain kinds of clothing, food, of long marches, etc., etc., upon the men, and other subjects calling forth a high order of professional training.

The work of Relief is divided into two kinds, that which is rendered in accordance with the order of a medical officer, and that which is given directly to the soldier, separate from his command or hospital, and which is styled Special Relief. For the due execution of the first, the Commission has regular Special Relief Agents in every army, and others who visit hospitals likely to be in want of necessary articles. The people demand that no soldier suffer, if help can reach him: These Relief Agents are their ministers. They do not only visit comfortable hospitals in out-of-the-way places of security, but live in the Army, and are found on the battle-field, as at the battle of Gettysburg, dispensing comforts, while the balls are whistling around their heads. In some armies, an agent lives in each corps, is supplied with a large wagon, kept constantly full of such supplies as are needed in the field, and shares the hardships of the soldier's life. This plan is adopted in the Army of the Potomac, where, under the direction of Dr. Lewis H. Steiner, Chief Inspector, and J. Warner Johnson, Field Superintendent, it has been quite successful. By constant association with the officers of a corps, the agent becomes fully able to detect wants, and is enabled to satisfy them with the greatest promptness and certainty.

The general purpose of the Special Relief work of the Commission is best set forth in the Report of the Special Relief Agent at Washington, made at one of the meetings of the Board:

1st. "To supply to the sick men of the newly-arrived regiments such medicines, food, and care as it is impossible for them to receive in the midst of the confusion, and with the unavoidable lack of facilities from their own officers. The men to be thus aided are those who are not so sick as to have a claim upon a general hospital, and yet need immediate care to guard them against serious sickness."

2d. "To furnish suitable food, lodging, care and assistance, to men who are honorably discharged from service, sent from general hospitals, or from their regiments, but who are often delayed a day or more, sometimes many days, before they obtain their papers and pay."

3d. "To communicate with distant regiments in behalf of discharged men whose certificates of disability, or descriptive lists, on which to draw their pay, prove to be defective;—the invalid soldiers, meantime, being cared for, and not exposed to the fatigue and risk of going in person to their regiments to have their papers corrected."

4th. "To act as the unpaid agent or attorney of discharged soldiers who are too feeble, or too utterly disabled, to present their own claim at the paymaster's office."

5th. "To look into the condition of discharged men who assume to be without means to pay the expense of going to their homes, and to furnish the necessary means where we find the man is true, and the need real."

6th. "To secure, to disabled soldiers, railroad tickets at reduced rates, and, through an agent at the railroad station, see that these men are not robbed or imposed upon by sharpers."

7th. "To see that all men who are discharged and paid off do at once leave the city for their homes; or, in cases where they have been induced, by evil companions, to remain behind, to endeavor to rescue them, and see them started, with through tickets, to their own towns."

8th. "To make reasonably clean and comfortable, before they leave the city, such discharged men as are deficient in cleanliness and clothes."

9th. "To be prepared to meet at once, with food or other aid, such immediate necessities as arise when sick men arrive in the city, in large numbers, from battle-fields or distant hospitals."

10th. "To keep a watchful eye upon all soldiers who are out of hospitals, yet not in service, and give information to the proper authorities, of such soldiers as seem endeavoring to avoid duty, or to desert from the ranks."

In the business of the Special Relief Department, both East and West, are enlisted many energetic, whole-souled men and women, who take great pleasure in thus contributing to the needs of our men. There may be some persons who will cavil at this work, and who sneeringly ask, where are the officers of the Medical and other Departments, that such a work as this of Special Relief is required?

To meet such, Mr. Knapp thus speaks in the Report already alluded to: "The fact is simply this: that while the Medical Department has made a larger and wiser provision for the sick and wounded than the world ever before saw; there is not, and cannot be, a minuteness of detail, and a waiting at every corner, to give to a fainting soldier a cup of water, such as friends at home, in their anxious love, ask for. Yet this work needs to be done, and, therefore, we, who are simply the people's heart and bounty, do the work. But if the Medical Department were to attempt it, in all its minutiæ of detail, their power for their own hundred-fold greater work would be weakened in a way that would find no justification."

The Sanitary Commission has also a Hospital Directory, in which arrangements are made for supplying information relative to all patients in the Army Hospitals. This information is furnished gratuitously.

The statistical material collected from all parts of its work is submitted to proper discussion by an accomplished Actuary, and the results are communicated, from time to time, to those for whose use such results are obtained.

A large number of monographs, on special subjects of interest to medical officers, have been prepared, so as to place, in the hands of the surgeon in the field, compendious epitomes of the most modern information, and these are gratuitously distributed.

The original organization of the Commission owes much to the first General Secretary, F. L. Olmsted, Esq., who labored with great zeal in its service. "Its officers now are working with a quiet enthusiasm, which could not be obtained for money, or any other reward; and every employee will find it a source of incalculable pleasure, in the future, that he once labored in its ranks, at the command of a great people, whose souls' heartiest wish and desire was, that no suffering should exist in the Army of the Union, that might be prevented by anything procurable through money or kind words."

THE PUBLIC LIBRARIES OF THE UNITED STATES.

UNTIL within a few years, the public libraries of America were neither so numerous nor so important as to render their statistics interesting. A young nation, whose independent existence dates back less than a century, and acting as the pioneer of civilization in so broad a territory, could not be expected speedily to rival the great repositories of learning which adorn so many of the capitals of Europe. Where Government patronage is wholly wanting, and not even the accessions of a copy-tax are enjoyed by a single library, whatever has been done toward the foundation or increase of collections is due to individual liberality or associated enterprise.

When due allowance is made for all the obstacles, the growth and extent of our public collections will compare favorably with those of any country. True, we have no one library which rivals or approaches that of the British Museum, with its 600,000 volumes, or even the Bodleian Library at Oxford, with its 300,000; but neither have our libraries any of the adventitious advantages enjoyed by those institutions, of receiving copies of every thing published in the United Kingdom free of cost. If our largest libraries must look with envy upon the 900,000 volumes, besides 500,000 pamphlets, of the Imperial Library at Paris (now the largest collection in the world), that feeling may be tempered by the reflection that its splendid facilities for amassing books, in the centre of European civilization, with four centuries of opportunity since the invention of printing, and the uncounted spoils of monkish and church libraries which it has absorbed, furnish abundant reason for its superiority. If we are reminded of the fact that twelve libraries in Europe exceed 300,000 volumes each, while not one in the United States has yet reached 150,000, we may be partially consoled by the reflection that the former are chiefly the growth of Government patronage, built up by sovereigns from the taxation of the people; while the latter are the free-will offerings of liberal-minded men to the cause of letters.

Neither should it be forgotten that the mere numerical extent of libraries is a most unsafe criterion of their real value. Some, at least, of the Continental libraries, which reckon their stores by the hundred thousand, are chiefly vast repositories of mediæval rubbish, with little or no additions from the science and literature of modern times. Such fossil collections are rather catacombs of extinct and forgotten literature, than living libraries, keeping step to the spirit of the age and the progress of mankind. It may at least be claimed for American libraries that they are not accidental growths, nor to any extent repositories of useless knowledge. If not large, they are tolerably select, and have been formed, for the most part, with a view to the highest utility, and with some general unity of plan.

In the "American Almanac" for 1837 was published the earliest statistical table of American libraries which has been met with. Its brevity induces us to place it on record, as affording a suggestive comparison with the tables that are to follow.

Libraries in the United States which contain as many as 10,000 Volumes each.

Philadelphia (Library Co.)	44,000
Cambridge University	42,000
Boston Athenæum	29,100
New York (Society)	25,000
National, Washington	24,500
Charleston, S.C.	15,000
Andover Theological Seminary	13,000
Baltimore	12,000
Georgetown College	12,000
Antiquarian Society, Worcester	12,000
New York Mercantile	11,400
New York Apprentices'	10,500
St. Mary's College (Baltimore)	10,500
Virginia University	10,500
Yale College	10,000
New York Historical Society	10,000
Philosophical Society, Philadelphia	10,000
Maryland State, Annapolis	10,000
South Carolina College	10,000
Boston Library	10,000

In the quarter of a century which has elapsed since the above table was prepared, the reader cannot fail to remark a progress which is commendable in itself, and a prognostic of still higher results to come. Yet so little apparent advance had been made in the importance of collections, or the public information as to their extent, that we find an American Secretary of State, as late as the year 1850, replying to a circular of a committee of Parliament designed to elicit information respecting the statistics of libraries throughout the world, in the following terms:—

"DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON,
"July 18, 1850.

"I regret to be obliged to inform you that, soon after the receipt of Mr. Crampton's note (soliciting "certain authentic information with regard to public libraries in the United States"), an attempt was made to obtain the particular information desired, but without success; and that, with every disposition to do so, the Department finds that it has no means of gratifying the wishes of Her Majesty's Government in this respect.

(Signed) "J. M. CLAYTON."

Yet the attempt to gather information as to certain libraries on British ground appears to have been equally fruitless; for we find the commissioners stating, in their voluminous report, that "respecting the majority of the Oxford libraries, Her Majesty's commissioners failed to obtain accurate information either as to extent or accessibility, although they made repeated efforts."

The first organized attempt to collect the full statistics of libraries in this country was commenced in 1849, under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution, by Prof. C. C. Jewett, and the results were published in 1851, in an octavo volume of 207 pages. Though necessarily meagre in extent, owing to deficient returns and other causes, the work of Prof. Jewett affords a highly interesting record of numerous libraries, with details of the history of the more important. It embraces but forty distinct libraries which numbered upwards of 10,000 volumes each.

In 1859 was issued "A Manual of Public Libraries, Institutions, and Societies in the United States, by William J. Rhees,"—a work originally designed as a continuation of Professor Jewett's Smithsonian Report, but expanded beyond the expected limits, and forming a volume of 687 pages. The information it embodies, though very valuable and full as regards many libraries, is very incomplete, as may be seen from the fact that, while it gives the names of 2902 libraries of all sizes, it records the number of volumes in only 1338 of them, leaving the large proportion of 1564 unreported. The failure to respond to circulars of inquiry was the cause of this deficiency. Its statistics of the size of libraries, dating as far back as 1857, and in many instances still earlier, are now chiefly valuable for purposes of comparison.

In the table now published, the brevity so essential in a work of this kind excludes all mention of libraries numbering less than 10,000 volumes; while it precludes any attempt to commemorate the history, merits, or peculiarities of any of the collections. The thousands of school-libraries, so widely diffused in this country that in many States one is placed in every school-district (those of New York alone numbering, in 1862, 1,206,075 volumes), would require a volume for the mere record of their statistics.

The church, parish, and Sunday-school libraries—which exist in still greater numbers, and the aggregate contents of which have been estimated at from five to six millions of volumes—can receive but a passing mention.

The countless private libraries of the country—many of them of great extent and value—must also remain unnoticed, save by the remark that, in Dr. Wynne's volume entitled, "The Private Libraries of New York," are found notices of over forty collections of 4000 volumes and upwards; while the number exceeding 10,000 volumes approaches a dozen. The same remark would hold good with regard to the private collections of Boston and its vicinity; while in all parts of the country noteworthy collections of special value attest the zeal and the taste of scholars and amateurs.

If we compare the list of libraries now given with the table of British and foreign libraries of 10,000 volumes and upwards given in the "Encyclopædia Britannica" (1856), article "Libraries," we find the following result:—

Libraries of over 10,000 volumes in Great Britain and Ireland in 1856	43
Libraries of over 10,000 volumes in France in 1856	38
Libraries of over 10,000 volumes in the United States in 1863	104

If we should extend the comparison to smaller collections, it would be found that libraries accessible to the people exist in this country in far greater number than in either France or England, whose population and rank best entitle them, among the European nations, to a comparison with our own. While there are fewer great libraries in the United States, books are much more widely diffused among the people.

The statistics following have been derived from the officers of the libraries themselves, and are up to November, 1863, except in the case of those marked with an asterisk, from which no reports have been received. The figures for these latter have been taken from the latest accessible source of information,—generally the (unpublished) census returns of 1860.

An attempt has been made to correct the most prevalent source of error in the enumeration of libraries, by calling for a statement of pamphlets as distinguished from bound volumes. It is obviously unfair that libraries which are largely composed of tracts and pamphlets should reckon them against other libraries whose stores consist wholly of bound books.

In the column of information respecting catalogues, a very commendable efficiency will be observed, in comparison with the great European libraries, only one of which (the Bodleian) has a printed catalogue at all approaching completeness.

The statistics regarding the number of attendants employed in libraries, although collected, are not here given, as they fail to afford a fair basis of comparison as to the staff requisite to administer the affairs of a large library. For example, the Boston Public Library has a staff of eighteen officers, while the Astor Library and the Library of Congress employ six officers each. The difference is accounted for in the fact that the former is a lending library, circulating probably more books than any other public institution in the world; while the two latter are libraries of reference chiefly. The statistics as to the time of opening of the different libraries are omitted, for similar reasons. The collection of statistics as to the circulation of the lending libraries, and the average number of readers at all libraries, was relinquished because of the universal ill success which has attended attempts to collect specific information upon points which are usually unrecorded, and therefore subject to very wide conjecture.

In stating the size of college or university libraries, only those actually possessed by the institutions are intended, the society-libraries of the students being left to stand by themselves. Thus, Harvard University is properly credited with the libraries of its Law, Medical, and Theological departments, in addition to its miscellaneous library of 104,000 volumes,—swelling its aggregate to 140,000; but no account is taken of the various society and club libraries at Cambridge, which would carry it still higher. The foundation of the same library is given as 1764, instead of 1638, as often stated; because the first library, dating back to the origin of Harvard University, was totally destroyed by fire in 1764, and the formation of the present collection dates from that year. For a similar reason, the Library of Congress, which was burned by the British army in 1814, is reckoned as founded in 1815, when Mr. Jefferson's library was purchased to form the basis of the present collection. The latter library, it may be remarked, has been singularly unfortunate, having again lost 30,000 volumes by fire in 1851,—which partially accounts for its numerical disadvantage in the present table. But the United States will never possess a public library which can fitly be called national, until Congress shall take a more liberal view of the value and importance of such a collection.

Some of the libraries embraced in the table are not "public libraries" in the strict sense of the term, being designed for the special use of members of the institutions whose names they bear. Yet, with regard to all of them it may be said that, for purposes of reference or more extended study, access to their stores is not difficult for any one to obtain.

STATISTICS OF MORTALITY AND SICKNESS IN THE ARMY.

REPORT OF ASSISTANT SURGEON J. J. WOODWARD, UNITED STATES ARMY.

[Illustrated by Diagrams.]

In accordance with instructions from the Surgeon-General, directing him to prepare a brief statement of some of the more important facts with regard to the influence of season and region on the camp diseases of the army, as exemplified by the statistics of the first year of the rebellion, Dr. Woodward submitted the following, under date of September 2, 1863:—

The compilation of the medical statistics of the year ending June 30, 1862, has now been completed for some time, and the manuscript of the first volume of the medical history of the war, of which these statistics form a part, will, it is believed, be ready in time to be laid before Congress at its approaching session.

Elaborate statistical tables, with accompanying diagrams, have been compiled separately for each of the great armies in the field, all of which have important bearings upon the subject now under consideration. To present these tables would, however, require a volume of some size, and is, therefore, out of the question at present; I therefore merely offer certain general facts with regard to a few points of interest, such as the mortality rates, the general sickness rate, and the prevalence of a few of the most important diseases during the first year of the war.

MORTALITY RATES.

The general mortality rate of the armies of the United States during the first year of the rebellion was 67.6 per thousand of mean strength, including with deaths from disease those from wounds and injuries. The mortality from disease alone was 50.4 per thousand; that from wounds and injuries of every kind, 17.2 per thousand.

In contrast with these results, it may be stated that the average annual mortality from disease alone, in the United States Army, during eighteen years of peace, was 24 per thousand; in the United States Army during the Mexican War, 103.8 per thousand; in the British Army during the Crimean War, 232 per thousand; in the British Army during the year 1859, 9 per thousand. It appears, therefore, that although the mortality of the army from disease during the first year of the present rebellion was far heavier than that of our own or of the British Army in time of peace, it was much less than that of the armies engaged in the Mexican or the Crimean Wars.

The following table exhibits the monthly mortality rates of the army from July 1, 1861, to June 30, 1862. The armies have been consolidated, for the purpose of comparison, into three great divisions. The first consists of the troops operating on the Atlantic coast between the Appalachian range and the sea, and includes the Army of the Potomac and the various coast expeditions. The annual mortality from disease alone among these troops was 33.40 per thousand of mean strength.

The second consists of the troops operating in the central basin of the continent, between the Appalachian and the Rocky Mountains, and includes Western Virginia, the armies under Generals Buell, Grant, and Pope, the department of Missouri, with the scattered troops in Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico, and the Northwest. The annual mortality from disease alone in this region was 82.19 per thousand.

The third division consists of the troops on the Pacific slope, between the Rocky Mountains and the sea. It includes those serving in Northern and Southern California, Oregon, and Washington Territory. The annual mortality rate was 10.76 per thousand.

It will thus be seen that on the Pacific slope the mortality rate was three times less than on the Atlantic coast, while that of the latter region was twice and a half less than that of the troops serving in the central region.

The small amount of mortality on the Pacific coast is worthy of attention. The rate is hardly greater than that attributed by British and New England statisticians to young men of similar ages in private life. This exemption is in part due, there can be no doubt, to the fact that on the Pacific coast our troops found themselves under conditions much more closely approximating those of peace than of war. But the rate is so much less than has ever been known in the whole United States Army in time of peace, that an idea of the superior healthfulness of the Pacific coast is at once suggested. The greater mortality of the central region, as compared with the Atlantic coast, would appear to hold a close relationship to the great prevalence of malarious disease in the valleys of the Mississippi and its tributaries which is indicated by the Tables III., IV., and V., showing the monthly rates of camp fever, of intermittent fever, and of diarrhœa.

The three great regions above contrasted differ not only in their annual mortality rate, but the relations of mortality to season are also quite different.

Thus, on the Atlantic coast, the mortality, after falling off in September, steadily increased during October, November, and December, diminished through January and February, and then steadily increased again through March, April, May, and June.

In the central region the mortality rates became gradually greater from July, 1861, to March, 1862, diminished in April, increased again in May, and diminished in June.

On the Pacific coast a much more fluctuating course was pursued, and quite unlike either of the others, as will be shown in the following table:—

General Prevalence of Disease.

The difference between the three regions above contrasted is not so conspicuous in the general sickness rates as in the mortality; yet the whole number taken sick in the central region was greater than on the Atlantic coast, and in this, again, greater than on the Pacific. In the first, the number taken on sick report during the year was 3368.14 per thousand of mean strength, in the second, 2748.83, and in the third, 2586.60. It will thus be seen that in each of these regions a large proportion of the troops must have been taken sick several times during the year.

Table II. exhibits the monthly ratio of "taken sick" for each of the three regions. It does not indicate the "constant sickness rate," but the total number taken on sick report during the month. The monthly fluctuations exhibited by this table are, of course, much less instructive than those of individual diseases; they serve, however, to indicate a gradual improvement in the sanitary condition of the army during the war.

It would be exceedingly interesting were it possible to present a table representing the "constant sickness rates" for the same period; but the imperfect data in the Surgeon-General's Office for the first year of the war do not afford the means for computing such a table in a reliable manner.

[Diagram II., on page 711, illustrates this table. It is drawn on a scale different from that of the monthly rates, but is otherwise similar. The three regions are marked by the same shading as in Diagram I.]

Camp Fever.

Under the head of camp fever, all the cases reported to the Surgeon-General's Office as typhus, typhoid, common continued, and remittent fevers, are here included. Of these several categories it may well be doubted how far the cases reported as typhus were really of that character. From the details furnished by sanitary reports, it appears probable that, with perhaps rare exceptions, what was regarded as typhus was, in fact, of a very different nature; severe typhoid fever, with cerebral complications, and congestive intermittents, in scorbutic constitutions being shown, in some cases at least, to have been regarded as typhus. This error was not, however, very widely diffused, the whole number of cases reported as typhus amounting to but a few hundred. As for the cases reported as common continued fever, the vast majority appear to have been different only in degree of severity from those reported as typhoid or remittent. Moreover, while a certain amount of uncomplicated enteric and remittent fever certainly did occur, especially at

DIAGRAM I.—Monthly Mortality Rates.

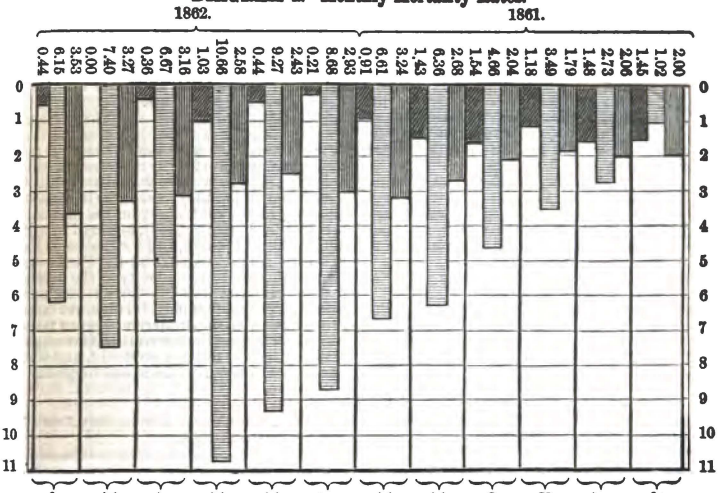

DIAGRAM II.—Monthly Sickness Rates.

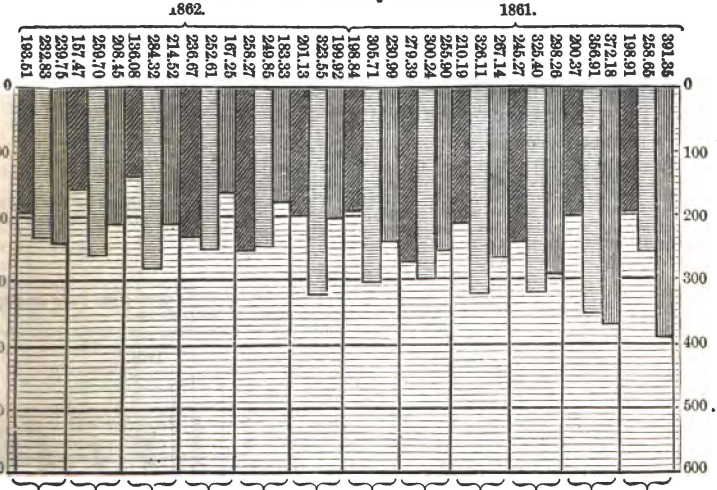

The three regions referred to in the text are distinguished by the direction of the lines of shading, thus,— the commencement of the war, the vast majority of the camp fevers of the army were of a mixed character, exhibiting undoubted enteric phenomena, variously combined with the periodicity and other peculiarities of malarial disease, and still further modified by the tendency to incipient scurvy which is the ordinary concomitant of camp diet. To indicate this mixed nature, the term "typho-malarial fever," which I had the honor to suggest to the Department in June, 1862, appears appropriate, and at the present time is coming into very general use.

A correct understanding of the nature of these fevers is of the utmost importance, as they play a conspicuous part in the mortality of our armies. During the year under consideration, 44.5 per cent. of all the deaths from disease were due to camp fevers.

An examination of Table III. shows that the frequency and mortality of camp fever differ considerably in the three great regions. On the Atlantic border the annual ratio of cases was 238.99 per thousand of mean strength, and the ratio of deaths to cases was 71.9 per thousand, or one death to every 13.9 cases. In the central region the annual ratio of cases was 319.94 per thousand, and the ratio of deaths 101.8 per thousand cases, or one in 9.8. On the Pacific coast the annual ratio of cases was only 60.95 per thousand, and the ratio of deaths to cases 45.2, or one in 22.1. The severity of camp fevers in these several regions is thus shown to differ as considerably as their frequency.

An inspection of the table, or of the accompanying diagram, at once exhibits the autumnal character of the disease. On the Atlantic coast the monthly number of attacks steadily increased until November, 1861, then as steadily diminished until March, 1862; after which they once more increased in frequency. In the central region the maximum was attained in September, 1861, followed by a gradual diminution till March, and a subsequent increase, as on the Atlantic coast. On the Pacific coast, although there is less regularity in the fluctuates, it will be observed that October was the maximum month. The most superficial observer cannot fail to be struck with the similarity between these three waves and those of the intermittent fevers, of whose malarial nature there is no doubt, and which are illustrated in the next table and diagram.

[Diagram III. illustrates this table. It is on a different scale from I. and II.; but the three regions are marked by the same shading.]

Intermittent Fever.

Intermittent fever, although a very frequent affection, has not been the cause of any great mortality. On the Atlantic border the annual ratio of cases was 195.94 per thousand of mean strength, the rate of deaths to cases 6.0 per thousand, or one to 165.9. In the central region the annual ratio was 375.34, the deaths 5.9 per thousand cases, or one to 170.0. On the Pacific coast the annual ratio was 151.68 per thousand of mean strength, and no deaths.

The distinctly autumnal character of the disease is well shown in the following table, and accompanying Diagram IV.

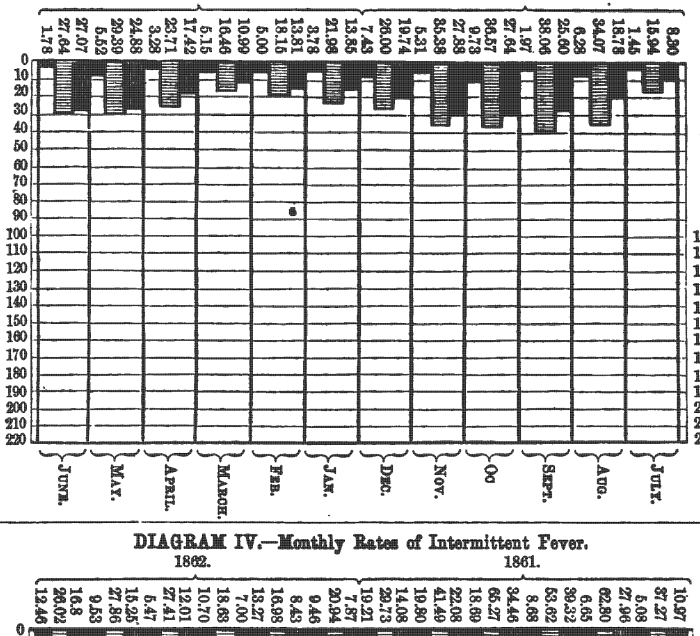

DIAGRAM IV.—Monthly Rates of Intermittent Fever.

Atlantic coast. Central region. Pacific coast.

Diarrhœa and Dysentery.

Diarrhœa and dysentery caused about one-fourth of all the sickness reported. On the Atlantic border more than half the army suffered, and in the central region the number of cases almost equalled the mean strength. Although not nearly so fatal as camp fever, affections of this class were an important cause of the mortality of our army. In the chronic cases, though most generally called diarrhœa, and not dysentery, the colon was the seat of the chief lesion. The most characteristic post-mortem appearance was a thickened, softened condition of the mucous membrane, with pigment deposit and enlargement of the solitary follicles, frequently terminating in ulceration, the ulcers being sometimes punctiform, sometimes extensive and irregular. In this condition the small intestine frequently participated more or less, but often presented nothing abnormal.

It appears from Table V. that the annual ratio of diarrhœa and dysentery on the Atlantic coast was 646.01 cases per thousand of mean strength, in the central region 994.77 per thousand, and on the Pacific coast 319.64. The relative mortality was, in the Atlantic region, 2.1 deaths per thousand cases, or one in 483; in the central, 9.6 per thousand, or one in 103.8; on the Pacific, 0.9 per thousand, or one in 1159.

Catarrhal Affections.

Catarrhal affections of every class were exceedingly common, attacking nearly one-half the forces in the field. The relative frequency in the three regions of the country appears to have been about the same:—on the Atlantic border 456.47 per thousand of mean strength, in the central region 427.20 per thousand, and on the Pacific slope 407.61. In all, the frequency of these affections increased greatly during the winter and diminished during the warmer months, the maximum month being January for the Atlantic and central, and February for the Pacific region. A large proportion of the severer catarrhal cases occurred as sequelæ to camp measles. The vast majority of the simple catarrhal cases terminated in recovery, the deaths being one to every 1127.8 cases on the Atlantic coast, one to every 560.0 cases in the central region, and no deaths occurring from this cause in the Pacific region. A certain number of these catarrhal cases, however, terminated in pneumonia, and thus a part, at least, of the mortality of catarrhal affections is reported under that head. The annual rates of pneumonia for the three regions were as follows:—On the Atlantic coast, 25.7 cases per thousand of mean strength, the deaths being 131.1 per thousand cases, or one death to every 7.6 cases; in the central region the cases were 64.2 per thousand of mean strength, the deaths 239.2 per thousand, or one to every 4.1; on the Pacific slope the cases were 20.9 per thousand of mean strength, the deaths 13.1 per thousand cases, or one to 76.

Reliability of the foregoing Ratios.

In conclusion, a few remarks may be made upon the reliability of the statistics from which the foregoing ratios are deduced. It is frankly admitted that the data in the Surgeon-General's Office, from which the statistics of the first year of the war were compiled, are exceedingly incomplete. No systematic effort appears to have been made to secure reports of sick and wounded prior to June, 1862, when already fourteen months of the war had elapsed. The existing reports, referring to the three-months men, are too few to enable the statistician to deduce any reliable ratio of sickness and mortality for that force; and for a long time after the three-years volunteers were mustered into the service, many of their surgeons persistently neglected to furnish the reports required by regulations. In fact, up to the close of the first year of the war the sick reports received at the Surgeon-General's Office never represented, for any one month, more than two-thirds of the army actually in the field. In carefully attempting to compile the statistics of the several armies for the first year of the war, it has not been possible, therefore, to secure a perfect record for any one of them; the figures never represent the whole force, but always merely a certain number of the component regiments: nevertheless, so far as they go, it is believed that these statistics are as accurate and reliable as any medical statistics heretofore published; and, although it has not been possible to represent the whole army by them, they correspond to so vast a host that they possess high value in themselves, and may fairly be assumed to approximate in the closest manner the results which would have been attained had the reports been complete.

In fact, the number of regiments reporting is so great that the statistics from which these ratios have been prepared may safely be said to be the largest medico-military statistics yet ever compiled.

Great efforts have been made during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1863, to secure completeness in the medical statistics; and these efforts, although not crowned with perfect success, have had the effect of rendering the reports for that year comparatively complete; and the work of compiling them is progressing as rapidly as is possible with the clerical force employed.

It is believed that, as the attention of the medical officers in service is now fully directed to the effort being made to compile these statistics, their hearty co-operation may be relied upon, and that the figures for the present year may be hoped to be as nearly complete as can be expected from any great army in time of war.

CONGRESS.

THE legislative power granted by the Constitution of the United States is vested in a Congress, which consists of a Senate and House of Representatives. The Congress must meet at least once in every year, which meeting must be on the first Monday in December, unless they by law appoint a different day.

The Senate of the United States is composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof for six years. At their first meeting under the Constitution, the Senators were divided into three classes, so that the terms of one-third of the Senators might expire every second year. By this means one-third of the Senate is renewed biennially. No person can be a Senator who is under thirty years of age, nor unless he has been nine years a citizen of the United States, and when elected an inhabitant of the State for which he is chosen. When vacancies happen in any State, temporary appointments may be made (if the Legislature be not in session) by the Executive of the State, until the next meeting of the Legislature. The Vice-President of the United States is President of the Senate, but has no vote unless they be equally divided. The Senate is required to choose also a president pro tempore, who presides in the absence of the Vice-President or when the latter shall exercise the office of President.

The House of Representatives is composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several States. No person can be a Representative who is under twenty-five years of age, nor unless he has been seven years a citizen of the United States, and, when elected, an inhabitant of the State for which he is chosen. Representatives are apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, which numbers are ascertained by an actual enumeration, or census, of all the inhabitants, made within every term of ten years. When by this means the whole number of free persons is ascertained, excluding Indians not taxed, there is added to such number three-fifths of all other persons, and the aggregate thus found is the representative population. By the law of 23d of May, 1850, under which the existing apportionment of Representatives was originally made, it was enacted that the number of Representatives in Congress should be 233, that the representative population determined by the census of that year and thereafter should be divided by said number 233, and that the quotient so found should be the ratio of representation for the several States. The ratio thus ascertained under the census of 1860 was 124,183; and upon this basis the 233 Representatives were apportioned among the several States, one Representative for every district containing that number of persons; giving to each State at least one Representative. Subsequently, by the act of March 4, 1862, the number of Representatives from and after March 3, 1863, was increased from 233 to 241 by allowing one additional Representative to each of the following States, viz.: Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Minnesota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Vermont.

Besides Senators and Representatives, there is a class of members of Congress, called Delegates, who sit in the House and represent the organized Territories of the United States. These Delegates may present subjects for legislation and address the House, but, not representing States, they have no votes. In the present Congress there are nine, —one each from the Territories of Washington, New Mexico, Utah, Nebraska, Colorado, Nevada, Dakota, Arizona, and Idaho.

Under the law of August 16, 1856, the compensation of a Senator, Representative, or Delegate in Congress is $6000 for each Congress, at the rate of $3000 per annum, and mileage at the rate of $8 for every twenty miles of estimated distance by the most usual road from his place of residence to the seat of Congress, at the commencement and at the end of every session; but this mileage is allowed for two sessions only in each Congress. The compensation of the Speaker of the House is double that of a Representative, and the President pro tempore of the Senate, when there is no Vice-President, is entitled to the compensation allowed by law to the Vice-President, $8000 per annum.

The times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives are prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but Congress may at any time by law alter such regulations, or make new ones, except as to the places of choosing Senators. No Senator or Representative can, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under authority of the United States, which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States shall be a member of either House during his continuance in office.

Political Classification of the House of Representatives.

Parties are now so intermingled that a political classification of the members of Congress is a difficult and delicate work. In the distinction here attempted, the vote for Speaker on the 7th of December, 1863, is taken as the basis. It is assumed that the members who voted for Mr. Colfax are cordial and uniform supporters of Mr. Lincoln's administration. Hence they are classed as Administration members; their names, including that of Mr. Colfax, who did not vote, are printed in Roman letters. Those who voted for other persons than Mr. Colfax, it is assumed, are opposed to Mr. Lincoln's administration. Hence they are classed as Anti-Administration; their names are printed in italic characters. The names of those who did not vote are printed in SMALL CAPITALS (excepting those of Mr. Colfax and Mr. Stebbins); while it may be an error to class them with the opponents of the administration, they are still placed in that column as being perhaps less thorough and uniform supporters than those in the Administration column. With these explanations, the classification is submitted as being drawn upon the sharpest line the subject admits of, and as one that is designed to be rigidly impartial.

Nearly all of these private acts, &c., appropriate money specifically as to the objects of the appropriations, but in most cases indefinitely as to the sums granted. It is therefore impossible to state the aggregate of appropriations made.

INTERNAL REVENUE OR EXCISE, AND DIRECT TAX LAWS.

PRIOR to the year 1861, the present generation of Americans were unaccustomed to any other modes of raising moneys for the support of the Government of the United States, than by duties on foreign goods imported, and by the sale of the public lands. Other means, however, had been used during the earlier periods of our national career. Under the power granted in section 8 of Article I. of the Constitution, Congress had many times exercised the power "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States," by imposing direct taxes and internal or excise duties similar to those in operation at this time. On these subjects no less than seventy-five acts were passed, extending from 3d of March, 1791, to 23d of December, 1817, when excise or internal duties were abolished. The whole amount realized to the Treasury by the operation of those laws was $34,995,340. The highest amount collected in any one year was in 1816, when it reached $9,378,344. Great difficulty attended the collections, and some of the taxes and duties did not reach the Treasury until 1836. The people of the United States were comparatively poor in those days. It may serve to indicate our advance in wealth and in tax-paying power to state in this place that there was collected during about six months of active operations of the present laws, an amount exceeding by fifty per cent. the aggregate collections from similar sources during our whole previous history. The receipts from internal revenue in the year 1863, to September 30, were $53,625,678 46.

The following will serve to show the relative productiveness of the several sources of revenue prior to the passage of the laws of 1861-2-3.

Aggregate revenue of the United States from 1789 to 1861, from the following sources:—

From Duties on Imports	$1,575,152,579
" Sales of Public Lands	175,817,960
" Internal and Direct Taxes	34,995,340

The excise and direct taxes, now in process of levy and collection, are authorized by the following acts and parts of acts of Congress.

To provide increased revenue, &c	Aug. 5, 1861.
For the collection of direct taxes in insurrectionary districts, &c	June 7, 1862.
To provide internal revenue, &c	July 1, 1862.
Increasing temporarily the duties on imports, &c. (sections 24, 25)	July 14, 1862.
To impose additional duties on sugars, &c	July 16, 1862.
Joint resolution amending act of July 1	July 17, 1862.
To amend the act to provide internal revenue, &c	Dec. 25, 1862.
To amend the act for the collection of direct taxes in insurrectionary districts, &c	Feb. 6, 1863.
To provide ways and means, &c. (section 7)	Mar. 3, 1863.
To amend the act to provide internal revenue, &c	Mar. 3, 1863.

In addition to the foregoing authorizations, there should be added the "notice of the Secretary of the Treasury, postponing the operation of the law," dated July 23, 1862, and the proclamation of the President declaring certain States and parts of States to be in rebellion, dated July 1, 1862.

The essential parts of the latest amendments to the laws are in the following summary.

THE UNITED STATES.

THE existence of the United States of America as a separate and independent nation usually dates from July 4, 1776, when the second Continental Congress passed the Declaration of Independence, dissolving all connection with Great Britain. The colonies, however, were virtually under their own government from the time of the meeting of the second Continental Congress, May 10, 1775, which body continued its sittings during the greater part of the Revolutionary War, and had the general direction of affairs. The powers of this Congress were not defined,—there was no settled form of government; but, their authority being of a revolutionary or provisional character, they exercised such as the necessities of the times required. The REVOLUTIONARY GOVERNMENT continued until the Confederation was organized, the articles for which were adopted by the Congress as early as November 15, 1777, but were not finally ratified by all the Colonies until March 1, 1781. On the following day (March 2, 1781) Congress assembled under the Confederation. The CONFEDERATE GOVERNMENT was intended to be perpetual; but it was soon found to be so defective, inefficient, and even powerless, that a convention of delegates was called to meet at Philadelphia on the 14th of May, 1787, "for the sole and express purpose of revising the Articles of Confederation, and reporting such alterations and provisions therein as shall render the Federal Constitution adequate to the exigencies of the Government and the preservation of the Union." The CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT was the result of the deliberations of this convention; for they adopted, on the 17th of September, 1787, that great and wise charter known as the Constitution of the United States. Eleven of the States having ratified this Constitution, Congress, on the 17th of September, 1788, resolved that it should go into operation on Wednesday, the 4th day of March, 1789.

The powers granted by this Constitution are distributed among three separate and distinct bodies,—the legislative powers being vested in a Congress; the executive power, in the President; and the judicial power, in one Supreme Court, and such inferior courts as Congress may from time to time ordain and establish.

EXECUTIVE GOVERNMENT.

[For organization of State Department and distribution of duties, see National Almanac for 1863.]

This Department, established July 27, 1789, was originally styled the Department of Foreign Affairs, but by an Act of Congress approved 15th September, 1789, it is denominated the Department of State, and the principal officer therein is called the Secretary of State. The Secretary is charged with all duties relative to correspondences, commissions, or instructions to or with our foreign ministers or consuls; negotiations with public ministers from foreign states or princes; and with such other matters respecting foreign affairs as the President shall assign to the Department. He is also charged with the duty of receiving and preserving the Enrolled Acts of Congress, and with the publication of printed copies of them. He is made by law the custodian of the seal of the United States, and it is his duty to affix the said seal to all civil commissions, and other instruments and acts, whenever he has the special warrant of the President therefor.

INTERCOURSE WITH FOREIGN NATIONS.

By the Act of Congress of August 18, 1856, "To regulate the Diplomatic and Consular Systems of the United States," the Ministers and other Diplomatic Agents of the United States in foreign countries are paid by salaries, and the outfit is abolished.

CAPTAIN JAMES M. GILLISS, Superintendent of the Naval Observatory	Massachusetts	.....

For a period of about nine years after the present Government of the United States was organized, there was no Navy Department. The executive duties growing out of the management of the naval forces had been committed by Congress to the War Department by an act approved August 7, 1789. It was not until April 30, 1798, that a separate Department was created for the purpose, when the act of that date provided for "an executive department under the denomination of the Department of the Navy, the chief officer of which shall be called the Secretary of the Navy." [For organization of Navy Department and distribution of duties among the Bureaus, see National Almanac, 1863.]

The Congressional legislation of 1862–63 did not materially change the laws governing the Navy. Beyond the authority given to the President to appoint a commissioner to codify the naval laws, and the annual appropriation bills, there is scarcely any thing worthy of note. Among the principal appropriations are the following:—

For pay of commission, warrant, and petty officers and seamen, including the engineer corps of the navy	$14,734,332 70
For the construction and repair of vessels of the navy	9,298,000 00
For the purchase and building of additional steamers, repairs of the same, charter of vessels, extra labor and materials, and repairs of vessels on foreign stations	15,000,000 00
For two armor-plated sea-steamers of the first class	3,000,000 00
For the purchase of hemp and other materials for the navy	320,000 00
For fuel for the navy, and for the transportation and expenses thereof	2,690,000 00
For the equipment of vessels in the navy, viz.:—
For the purchase of various articles of equipment, canvas, leather, cables, and anchors, and furniture and stores in the masters', boatswains', and sailmakers' departments	2,000,000 00
For provisions for commission, warrant, and petty officers, and seamen, including engineers and marines attached to vessels for sea-service	5,417,745 00
For the construction and repair of machinery for vessels in commission	5,775,000 00
For surgeons' necessaries and appliances for the sick and hurt of the navy, including the engineer and marine corps	157,500 00
For cannon of all descriptions, field and boat howitzers, gun-carriages, shot, shell, and equipment of all kinds, powder, purchase of nitre, small arms, ordnance labor at navy-yards, freight, transportation, books, inspecting-instruments, watchmen, assistants, for fabrication and inspection of guns, and contingent expenses of ordnance and Ordnance Bureau	6,300,000 00
For repairs and additions to ordnance machinery in shops, and for the establishment, by purchase or hire, of two magazines, and repairs and additions thereto	150,000 00
For compass-stations and magnetic deviations, books, binnacles, flags, signals, logs, sand-glasses, leads, longitudes, tables of navigation, determination of meridian distances, and experiments with night-signals	149,000 00
For contingent expenses of the navy	100,000 00
For contingent expenses of the Bureau of Yards and Docks	679,000 00

ORGANIZATION OF THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

This Department was originally organized under an act of Congress, approved 2 Sept. 1789, which provided that "there shall be a department of treasury, to consist of the following officers:—a secretary of the treasury, to be head of the department, a comptroller, an auditor, a treasurer, a register, and an assistant to the secretary." From that small beginning, in 1789, has grown the present vast establishment.

It is the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to digest and prepare plans for the improvement, increase, and management of the revenue, and for the support of public credit; to prepare and report estimates of the public revenue and the public expenditures; to superintend the collection of the revenue; to prescribe the forms of all public accounts; to grant warrants for moneys paid out of the Treasury in pursuance of appropriations by law; and, generally, to perform all such services relative to finance as he shall be directed to perform. Under this definition of his duties in the organic act, and under various laws enacted since, the Secretary of the Treasury has charge of all public moneys COLLECTED, and the supervision of all public moneys DISBURSED; he has charge of all operations connected with borrowing money on the credit of the United States; of the management and discharge of the PUBLIC DEBT; of the collection of the CUSTOMS and EXCISE duties and DIRECT TAXES; of all matters relating to COMMERCE and NAVIGATION; of the MINTS and the coinage of money; of the preparation, authentication, and issue of BONDS, NOTES, SECURITIES, or other evidences of debt due by the United States; and of reports on the condition of the BANKS.

In addition to the foregoing purely fiscal affairs, the Secretary is charged with the general supervision of the survey of the coast, of the light-house establishment, of the marine hospitals, and of the construction of certain public buildings.

Under the Secretary, whose duties are already defined, the distribution of duties among the accounting and finance affairs of the Department is as follows:—

The First Comptroller prescribes the mode of keeping and rendering accounts for the civil and diplomatic service, as well as the public lands; revises said accounts, after they are reported by the First and Fifth Auditors, to determine whether the disbursements are made according to law, and certifies the balances thereon; he passes upon and countersigns all requisitions for money for the civil and diplomatic and public land service, and countersigns all warrants on the Treasury made by the Secretary.

The Second Comptroller prescribes the mode of keeping and rendering the accounts of the Army and Navy Departments, and the Indian and Pension Bureaus; revises said accounts, after they are reported by the Second, Third, and Fourth Auditors, to determine if the disbursements are made according to law, and certifies the balances thereon; and he passes upon, and countersigns, all requisitions on the Treasury for money for the War, Navy, Indian, and Pension service.

The Commissioner of the Customs prescribes the mode of keeping and rendering the accounts of the customs revenue and disbursements, and for the building and repairing custom-houses, &c., and revises and certifies the balances arising thereon.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue superintends the collection of the excise and other internal taxes, prescribes the mode of keeping and rendering account of the revenues and disbursements connected therewith, decides upon the interpretation of the provisions of the tax law, approves or disapproves of the appointment of deputy collectors and assistant assessors, and pronounces upon the sufficiency of the bonds of the collectors and their deputies.

The First Auditor receives and adjusts the accounts of the customs revenue and disbursements, appropriations and expenditures on account of the civil list and under private acts of Congress, and reports the balances to the Commissioner of the Customs and the First Comptroller, respectively, for their decision thereon.

The Second Auditor receives and adjusts all accounts relating to the pay, clothing, and recruiting of the army, as well as the armories, arsenals, and ordnance, and all accounts relating to the Indian Department, and reports the balances to the Second Comptroller for his decision thereon.

The Third Auditor receives and adjusts all accounts for subsistence of the army, fortifications, military academy, military roads, and the quartermaster's department, pension claims arising from military services previous to 1816, and for horses and other property lost in the military service, and reports the balances to the Second Comptroller for his decision thereon.

The Fourth Auditor adjusts all accounts for the service of the Navy Department, and reports the balances to the Second Comptroller for his decision thereon.

The Fifth Auditor adjusts all accounts for diplomatic and similar services performed under the direction of the State Department, and reports the balances to the First Comptroller for his decision thereon.

The Sixth Auditor adjusts all accounts arising from the service of the Post-Office Department. His decisions are final, unless an appeal be taken in twelve months to the First Comptroller. He superintends the collection of all debts due the Post-Office Department, and all penalties imposed on postmasters and mail-contractors for failing to do their duty; he directs suits and legal proceedings, civil and criminal, and takes legal measures to enforce the prompt payment of moneys due to the department, instructing attorneys, marshals, and clerks relative thereto; and receives returns from each term of the United States courts of the condition and progress of such suits and legal proceedings; has charge of all lands and other property assigned to the United States in payment of debts due the Post-Office Department, and has power to sell and dispose of the same for the benefit of the United States.

The Treasurer receives and keeps the moneys of the United States in his own office and that of the depositories, and pays out the same upon warrants drawn by the Secretary of the Treasury, countersigned by the First Comptroller, and upon warrants drawn by the Postmaster-General, and countersigned by the Sixth Auditor, and recorded by the Register. He also holds public moneys advanced by warrant to disbursing officers, and pays out the same upon their checks.

The Register keeps the accounts of public receipts and expenditures; receives the returns and makes out the official statement of commerce and navigation of the United States; and receives from the First Comptroller and Commissioner of Customs all accounts and vouchers decided by them, and is charged by law with their safe-keeping.

The Solicitor superintends all civil suits commenced by the United States (except those arising in the Post-Office Department), and instructs the United States attorneys, marshals, and clerks in all matters relating to them and their results. He receives returns from each term of the United States courts, showing the progress and condition of such suits; has superintendence of the collection of outstanding direct and internal duties; has charge of all lands and other property assigned, set off, or conveyed to the United States in payment of debts, all trusts created for use of the United States in payment of debts, power to sell and dispose of lands so assigned, &c., and power to release lands when payment is made in money.

United States Coast Survey.—The Coast Survey Office is charged with the superintendence of the survey of the Coast of the United States, and its Superintendent is the Superintendent of Weights and Measures.

NOTE.—The account for the fiscal year 1860–61 is corrected by taking the actual exports and imports of like quarters of the previous fiscal year as a minimum estimate for the last two quarters of the fiscal year 1860–61, of transactions which continued under the American flag, but which were not reported to the Treasury Department in regular quarterly returns. The quantities thus added are $161,611,905 of domestic exports, $500,000 of foreign exports, and $16,425,382 of imports.

Prior to 1821 the Treasury reports did not give a complete return of imports. To that period their value, and also the proportion of exports designated respectively as domestic and foreign, has been estimated from sources believed to be authentic. The total of exports is official from the first. From 1821 to 1863, inclusive, all values have been taken from official returns, with the exception above noted for omitted quarters of 1861 at certain Southern ports. L. E. CHITTENDEN, Register.

NOTE.—The account of imports and exports for the year ending June 30, 1861, is deficient from Southern ports, at which transactions were continued for a period, which gave $21,895,539 of imports in the same quarters of 1860. $20,500,000 have therefore been added to the account of imports for that year, and $500,000 to the account of foreign exports.

The distance at which a light is visible above the horizon at sea is proportional to the square root of its height. The effect of atmospheric refraction is to increase the distance of visibility by about the eleventh part of that which results from the consideration of the earth's curvature alone. The preceding table is calculated with regard to refraction, and shows the distance at which an object of a given height is visible above the sea horizon.

In order, then, to ascertain the distance of a vessel from a light just becoming visible, add the distance corresponding to the elevation of the light to that corresponding to the height of the observer's eye above the water.

Example 1.—Height of Cape Ann Light, 165 feet, visible..... 15.3 nautical miles.
Add for height of observer's eye on deck, 15 feet..... = 4.4 " "

Distance of light..... 19.7 " "

Example 2.—Height of Sankaty Head Light, 150 feet, visible..... 14.9 nautical miles.
Add for height of observer's eye at mast-head, 60 feet..... = 8.9 " "

SUPERINTENDENT, ALEXANDER DALLAS BACHE, LL.D.; salary, $6000.

Operations for the year 1863.

THE services at Port Royal and at the months of the Mississippi, referred to in the last report, were followed up in 1863 in the military department of North Carolina; on the coast of South Carolina and Georgia, particularly near Charleston, and at Tybee and Wassaw; in Louisiana, west of the Mississippi; and in the Mississippi and Yazoo Rivers, during the sieges of Vicksburg and Port Hudson. In the first-named department, besides the triangulation of the Neuse River by Assistant Fairfield, reconnoissance maps were made by Assistant West and Sub-Assistant Rockwell, while the enemy threatened Newbern and Little Washington. Charleston bar was surveyed by night and lighted and buoyed by Assistant Boutelle with the steamer Bibb, just previous to the naval attack of April, 1863. Port Royal bar was resurveyed by his party, and the buoys needed there and at other entrances on the coast of South Carolina and Georgia were set, and properly marked on the charts supplied from the office for the blockading squadron. A hydrographic reconnoissance was made by the Bibb, in December, 1862, of the channel into Winyah Bay, under the orders of Admiral Dupont.

Assistant Edwards, in this section, sounded out two important branches of the island passage between St. Helena and Port Royal sounds; examined the channels into Tybee roads; and pushed the hydrography of Wassaw sound, for which shore-line was furnished by a party under Sub-Assistant Dennis.

Six parties were actively and constantly engaged, during an average period of about six months of the surveying year, on the coast of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, and their labors were warmly commended by Major-General Foster and Admiral Dupont.

Sub-Assistant Dorr supervised the erection of additional earthworks at Jacksonville, Florida.

Under the protection afforded in the vicinity of Admiral Bailey's blockading vessels, the hydrography outside of the Florida keys was completed by a party under Acting Assistant Cordell, with the steamer Vixen. The same party sounded the main entrance and approach of Charlotte harbor.

Three topographers served with the army of Major-Gen. Banks (Assistant Oltmanns, Sub-Assistant Hosmer, and Mr. Lyman), and two, Sub-Assistant Fendall and Mr. Strausz, under the direction of Assistant Gerdes, with the fleet of Admiral Porter, and subsequently with the army of Major-General Grant. A minute topographical survey of the west bank of the Mississippi opposite to New Orleans for defensive purposes; reconnoissance maps of the middle districts of Louisiana and of the Red River as far up as Alexandria; the topography of the approaches to Vicksburg while the siege was in progress, and the survey of those of Port Hudson after the surrender of that port, are part of the results of their labors.

In the northern sections of the Atlantic coast the regular work of triangulation was carried on, reaching from Machias into Passamaquoddy Bay, on the coast of Maine, under Sub-Assistant Webber: from Blue Hill Bay towards Mt. Desert, by Assistant Fairfield; and above the mouth of Penobscot River, by Assistant McCorkle. For the connection of primary bases, it was continued by Mr. Bache's own party on the coast of Connecticut; additional work to connect with it was done by Assistant Blunt, east of the Hudson; and the verification work, on the coast of New Jersey, was extended to the vicinity of Manasquam Inlet, by Assistant Farley.

The detailed topography of Eastport harbor was prosecuted by Sub-Assistant Dennis; that of the coast of Maine, from Winter harbor eastward, by Sub-Assistant Rockwell. The topography of the western side of the entrance and that of the western shore of Penobscot Bay, near Camden, by Sub-Assistants Ferguson and Dorr; that of the passages between the Sheepscot and Kennebec Rivers was completed by Sub-Assistant Iardella, and the detailed survey of the vicinity of Harpswell Neck, Maine, continued by Assistant Longfellow.

The hydrography of the year in the northern sections embraced additional lines of deep-sea soundings, and the development of rocks and ledges near Portland entrance and off the coast of Maine, by Lieut. Commander Phelps, with the steamer Corwin; that of Rockland harbor, by Assistant Edwards; the in-shore hydrography, which includes the approaches to Muscongus Bay and Penobscot Bay (western approach), by Acting Assistant Cordell, with the steamer Vixen; that of the northern part of Casco Bay, by Assistant Gerdes; that of the Hudson River, completed by the party of Messrs. Harding and Strausz; a development of ledges off the eastern end of Long Island, and re-examination of part of New York harbor for the pilot commissioners, by Lieut.-Commander Phelps; one near the Delaware breakwater, for the engineer department, by Capt. Patterson, hydrographic inspector of the Coast Survey; and soundings off the coast of Maryland, and completion of the hydrography of the Potomac River, by Lieut.-Commander Phelps.

On the Atlantic and Gulf coast, of nineteen assistants, fourteen sub-assistants, and twenty-two aids engaged in field-work or in hydrography, twelve assistants, seven sub-assistants, and ten aids rendered service in connection with military and naval operations; and most of those who so co-operated were also employed in duty on other parts of the coast.

The number of hydrographic maps and charts issued from the office of the survey during the year ending October 31, 1863, was 29,300, of which 14,000 were delivered to the naval service, and 2000 to mariners employed in transportation for the Government. The remainder were either furnished to the military authorities, or distributed by Coast Survey officers in the squadron to which they were attached, or disposed of to the merchant marine. The number of maps of the war localities published, distributed, or sold, was 16,700.

Expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1863, $304,400; appropriations for the year ending June 30, 1864, $306,000; estimates for the year ending June 30, 1865, $306,000.

The National Currency Act.

The banks named in the foregoing list are established under authority of an act of Congress, approved Feb. 25, 1863, entitled "An Act to provide a National Currency, secured by a Pledge of United States Stocks, and to provide for the Circulation and Redemption thereof." The first section establishes a separate bureau in the Treasury Department, which shall be charged with the execution of all laws respecting the issue and circulation of a national currency secured by United States bonds, the principal officer of which bureau shall be denominated the Comptroller of the Currency. Sections 5 and 6 enact that associations for carrying on the business of banking may be formed by any number of persons, not less than five, which persons shall make a certificate specifying—

1st. The name assumed by such association.

2d. The place where its operations of discount and deposit are to be carried on, designating the State, Territory, or district, and also the particular city, town, or village.

3d. The amount of its capital stock, and the number of shares into which the same shall be divided; which capital stock shall not be less than fifty thousand dollars; and in cities whose population is over ten thousand persons, the capital stock shall not be less than one hundred thousand dollars.

4th. The names and places of residence of the shareholders, and the number of shares held by each of them.

5th. The time when such association shall commence.

6th. A declaration that said certificate is made to enable such persons to avail themselves of the advantages of this act.

The said certificate shall be acknowledged before a judge of some court of record, or a notary public, and the acknowledgment thereof certified under the seal of such court or notary, and shall be transmitted, together with a copy of the articles of association which shall have been adopted, to the Comptroller of the Currency, who shall record and carefully preserve the same in his office.

Thirty per cent. of the capital must be paid in before commencing business, and the remainder in instalments of ten per cent. every two months.

When the preliminaries are complied with, the Comptroller of the Currency, is authorized to issue a certificate to the association, under which it may commence the business of banking.

Section 15 requires that every such association shall deposit with the United States Treasurer United States interest-bearing bonds to an amount equal (at least) to one-third of its paid-up capital, whereupon the association shall have delivered to it circulating notes of the United States to the amount of ninety per cent. of the market value of the bonds deposited.

The notes so authorized to be delivered are limited, by Section 17, in the aggregate amount to be delivered to all the National Banking Associations, to $300,000,000, of which $150,000,000 are to be apportioned among the States, Territories, &c., according to representative population.

The whole act embraces sixty-five sections, the greater part being devoted to details of regulation of the banking associations provided for, and for the issue, regulation, protection, and redemption of the national currency.

* There were no banking institutions in 1862-63, at these places.

UNITED STATES MINT.

ESTABLISHED APRIL 2, 1792.

"Congress shall have power to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin."

"No State shall coin money."—Constitution, Article I. Sections 8–10.

In execution of the power above granted, Congress, on the 2d of April, 1792, enacted that a mint for the purpose of national coinage be, and the same is, established at the seat of government of the United States. The seat of government was then at Philadelphia; and subsequent acts of Congress continued the mint in that city.

The officers of the mint are—a Director, a Treasurer, an Assayer, a Melter and Refiner, a Chief Coiner, and an Engraver. These officers are appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The DIRECTOR has the control and management of the mint, the superintendence of the officers and persons employed, and the general regulation and supervision of the several branches. The TREASURER receives all moneys for the use or support of the mint, and all bullion brought to the mint for coinage; he has the custody of the same except while legally in the hands of other officers; and on the warrant of the Director he pays all moneys due by the mint, and delivers all coins struck at the mint to the persons to whom they are legally payable. The ASSAYER assays all metals used in coinage, and all coins, whenever required by the operations of the mint or instructed by the Director. The MELTER AND REFINER conducts the operations necessary to form ingots of standard silver and gold suitable for the Chief Coiner. The CHIEF COINER conducts the operations necessary to form coins from the ingots, &c. delivered to him for the purpose. The ENGRAVER prepares and engraves with the legal device and inscription all the dies used in the coinage of the mint and its branches.

Besides the mint at Philadelphia, Congress has from time to time established branches and an Assay Office at the following places:—

At New Orleans, for the coinage of gold and silver	3d March, 1835
At Charlotte, North Carolina, for the coinage of gold only	3d March, 1835
At Dahlonega, Georgia, for gold only	3d March, 1835
At San Francisco, California, for gold and silver	3d July, 1852
At Denver, Colorado Territory, for gold and silver	21st April, 1862
At Carson City, Nevada Territory, for gold and silver	3d March, 1863
At New York City, an Assay Office for the receipt, melting, refining, parting, and assaying of gold and silver bullion and foreign coin, and for casting, the same into bars, ingots, or disks	3d March, 1853

The branches at New Orleans, Dahlonega, and Charlotte have not been in operation since 1861.

BRIEF HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE DEPARTMENT.

What is now called the Post-Office Department was established in 1789 as the "Post-Office," and subsequently as the "General Post-Office," under the power given to Congress by the Constitution "to establish post-offices and post-roads." The first act of Congress briefly declares that "there shall be appointed a Postmaster-General," and that his powers and salary and the compensation to the assistant or clerk and deputies, and the regulations of the office, shall be the same as they were under the Congress of the Confederation. This refers the origin of our Post-office system to the old Confederation and beyond. There is, however, but little publicly known of its early history, although the General Office is in possession of some very interesting and valuable materials on the subject. The first recorded notice of any attempt in the colonies to convey letters by post, relates to the petition of certain Boston merchants to the Court, and the subsequent appointment of John Hayward, in 1677, "to take in and convey letters according to their direction." This appears to have been the first postal arrangement in America. By gradual but untraceable growth, local arrangements like the above became general; but there was nothing like system until 1710, when the British Parliament authorized the Postmaster-General "to keep one chief letter office in New York, and other chief letter offices in each of Her Majesty's provinces or colonies in America." Deputy Postmasters-General for North America were subsequently from time to time appointed by the British Postmaster-General. Colonel Spottswood was one of these in 1737, as in that year he appointed Benjamin Franklin Postmaster of Philadelphia.

Franklin was subsequently employed as comptroller of several post-offices, and, in 1753, was made Postmaster-General jointly with William Hunter. Down to that time the American office had never paid any thing to that of England. Franklin and Hunter were promised £600 a year between them if they could make that amount out of the profits of the office; and this Franklin's fertility of resources and initiative mind enabled them, after some time, to do. The improvements in the mails which he introduced were at first so expensive that the office sunk £900 in four years. But after that it began to pay both him and the Crown a handsome revenue. In 1774, when he was dismissed, it was yielding a clear revenue to the British Treasury of £3000 per annum, just three times as much as the yield from the Post-Office of Ireland at the same time. Speaking of this progress of the office under his management and of his dismissal, Franklin quaintly observes, "Since that imprudent transaction they [the British Ministry] have received from it—not one farthing."

On the 26th of July, 1775, the Continental Congress ordained that a Postmaster-General be appointed for the United Colonies. Under this ordinance, Benjamin Franklin was unanimously chosen Postmaster-General. He was allowed $1000 per annum for himself, and $340 for a secretary and comptroller. The Articles of Confederation of 1788 gave to Congress "the sole and exclusive right and power of establishing and regulating post-offices from one State to another, throughout all the United States, and exacting such postage on the papers passing through the same as may be requisite to defray the expenses of an office." Very little progress was made under the Confederation. It was the "Post-Office" system thus imperfectly traced from its first perceptible beginnings that was continued by the act of September 22, 1789, above noted. Under that act we have the earliest reliable statistics of its operations, commencing in 1790. Its subsequent progress and present condition are exhibited in the statistical tables hereto appended.

Condition and Operations of the Post-Office Department for the Year ending June 30, 1863.

The following statement is condensed from the Report of the Postmaster-General dated Oct. 31.

Number of Post-Offices.—The whole number of post-offices remaining established on the 30th of June, 1863, including the suspended offices in the insurrectionary States, was 29,047, showing an increase over the preceding year of 172. Postmasters are appointed at 550 of these offices by the President, and at 28,497 by the Postmaster-General.

Finances.—During 1863 the financial condition of the department was one of increasing prosperity, the actual postal revenue nearly equalling the entire expenditures,—the latter amounting to $11,314,206.84, and the former to $11,163,789.59, leaving a deficiency of but $150,417.25. There is, therefore, good reason to expect that within a brief period the department will become self-sustaining.

Comparison of receipts and expenditures for 1860, 1862, and 1863.

The postal expenditure in 1860, the year immediately preceding the rebellion, was	$14,874,772 89
The postal expenditure in 1863	11,314,206 84
Excess of expenditure in 1860	3,560,566 05
The actual revenue from postal receipts in 1863 was	$11,163,789 59
The same in 1860	8,518,067 40
Excess of revenue in 1863	$2,645,722 19

Showing that while the annual cost of postal service was three and one-half millions less than when it was uninterrupted throughout the Union, the receipts therefrom were increased to the extent of more than $2,600,000.

The expenditures of 1863 were	$11,314,206 84
The expenditures of 1862	11,125,364 13
Increase in 1863	$188,842 71
The actual revenues of 1863 were	$11,163,789 59
The actual revenues of 1862	8,299,820 90
Increase in 1863	$2,863,968 69

From the above comparison of the receipts and expenditures of the last two fiscal years, it appears that the increase of expenditure in 1863 bears but a small proportion to the increase of the revenue, the one being about 6½ per cent. of the other.

Stamps and Envelopes issued.—The value of the stamps issued (1863) was $9,633,384; of stamped letter envelopes, $634,821; and of stamped newspaper wrappers, $20,545. The aggregate value of the issue of the year under notice, as compared with that of the preceding year, shows an increase of $2,503,608.

Value of Stamps sold.—The total value of stamps and stamped envelopes sold by postmasters during the year, as ascertained from the records of the Auditor of the Treasury, for this department, was $9,624,529.62, which exceeds, by $2,714,397.73, the sales of the previous fiscal year.

Dead-Letters.—The whole number of ordinary dead-letters of every description received and examined during the year was 2,550,416, being 268,398 more than in the preceding year. The number of these letters which contained money was 18,527, and the value of their contents was $77,861.31, showing an increase over the number of letters of this class received during the previous year of 8052, or 76 per cent., and an increase in the amount of money enclosed of $31,324.42, or 67 per cent.

Of these letters, there were registered and mailed for delivery to their respective owners during the last fiscal year, 18,219, of which 15,048, containing $63,627 72, were finally delivered.

The number of dead-letters covering deeds, bills of exchange, drafts, and other valuable papers, received, registered, and returned for delivery to the writers, was 8332, and the aggregate nominal value of their contents was $1,544,247.81, being a decrease in the number of this class of letters, as compared with the previous year, of 1431, and in the value of the enclosures, of $645,172.19. Of these letters, 7559 were delivered to the owners.

During the year, 16,763 valuable letters or packages of a third class were received and registered. Of these, 12,579 were sent out for delivery, 10,918 of which contained daguerreotypes or photographs, 761 articles of jewelry, and 897 miscellaneous articles. Out of the whole number sent from the dead-letter office for delivery, 8273 were restored to the writers or senders.

Under the authority given to the Postmaster-General by the act approved January 21, 1862, 1,007,255 ordinary dead-letters, not evidently worthless, were placed in new envelopes and returned to the offices where originally mailed, to be delivered to the writers. Of this number, 4898 were sent to banks and insurance companies, 89,612 to business firms, and the remainder to individuals. Of the whole number sent out for restoration to the writers, 287,211, being about 25 per cent., were again returned to the department.

After deducting from the whole number of letters sent out, such as were returned a second time, and those sent free of postage, including hospital letters, &c., there remained 692,220 letters on which dead-letter postage was collected at six cents each, yielding a gross revenue to the department of $41,533.20, which exceeds by $21,533.20 the aggregate compensation of the clerks employed in sending out these letters.

Foreign Dead-Letters.—The number of dead-letters returned unopened to foreign countries during the year was 137,145, and the amount of unpaid postage thereon was $8,281.40. The number received in the same condition from foreign countries was 51,619, on which the unpaid postage amounted to $1,479.53.

Special and Local Agents, Route Agents, and Baggage-Masters.—The number of special agents in the service at the close of the fiscal year was sixteen, whose aggregate salaries amounted to $26,500. The number of route agents was 387, at an aggregate compensation of $289,260; the number of baggage-masters in charge of through or express mails was 93, at an aggregate pay of $7440; and the number of local agents was 45, at a compensation of $27,824.

Letter-Carriers.—The law authorizing the free delivery of mail-matter by carriers took effect on the 1st day of July, 1863. About that time the system was put in operation at 49 of the larger offices, with a competent corps of carriers to each, numbering in the aggregate 449, at an aggregate annual compensation of $300,680.

Foreign Mails.—The aggregate amount of postage (inland, sea, and foreign) upon the mails exchanged during the year with Great Britain, Prussia, France, Hamburg, Bremen, and Belgium, was $1,224,675.21; an increase of $90,579.39, as compared with the preceding year. Of this amount, $757,038.99 was collected in the United States, and $467,636.22 in Europe: the excess of collections in the United States being $289,402.77.

The total postages upon mails exchanged with the British North American provinces was $225,743.30, being an increase of $47,989.79 over the amount reported for the previous year. Of this amount, $124,480.45 was collected in the United States, and $101,262.85 in the British provinces. Excess in favor of the United States, $23,217.60.

The total postages upon the mails conveyed to and from the West Indies amounted to $54,997.24.

The amount of United States postages on the mails exchanged with Central and South America, via Aspinwall and Panama, was $15,078.26. The total cost of the United States transatlantic mail steamship service was $332,840.80; being the aggregate amount of the sea postage on the mails conveyed. The earnings of the several steamship lines were as follow:—

The Liverpool and New York and Philadelphia Steamship Company, performing fifty three round trips between New York, Queenstown, and Liverpool	$180,076 54
The Canadian line of mail steamers, performing fifty-two round trips between Portland and Liverpool, and Quebec and Liverpool	72,643 40
The North German Lloyd Steamship Company, performing fourteen and one-half round trips between New York and Southampton	46,229 91
The New York and Hamburg Steamship Company, performing thirteen round trips between New York and Southampton	33,234 95

Transportation Statistics.—Exhibiting the service as it stood on the 30th of June, 1863, in the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Ohio, Western Virginia, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri, Kentucky, California, Oregon, Kansas, and the Territories of New Mexico, Utah, Nebraska, Washington, Colorado, and Dakota, at which time there were in operation in those States and Territories 6161 mail routes, the number of contractors being 5595. The length of these routes was 139,598 miles, and the mode of service divided as follows, viz.:—

Steamboat	4,744
All other conveyance	112,702

The annual transportation of mails was 56,226,015 miles, costing $5,740,576, divided as follows, viz.:—

Railroad, 22,871,558, at $2,538,517,—about 11 cts. a mile; steamboat, 2,004,771, at $224,542,—about 11¼ cts. a mile; all other conveyance, 31,349,686, at $2,977,463,—about 9½ cts. a mile.

Compared with the service of the 30th of June, 1862, the length of routes is increased 5585 miles, with an annual increase of transportation of 2,793,490 miles, at a decrease in cost of $113,258, being about two per cent.

To the cost of transportation ($5,740,576) there should be added the salaries and pay of route agents, local agents, mail messengers, &c.,—in all, $496,046.06,—making the total cost of service in 1863, $6,236,622.06.

International Postal Conference.—In July, 1863, at the invitation of the Post-Office Department of the United States, a postal conference was held at Paris to consider the subject of greater uniformity of administration in international postal affairs. The conference was attended by delegates representing the Post-Office Departments of France, Great Britain, Austria, Belgium, Costa Rica, Denmark, Spain, Italy, the Netherlands, Portugal, Prussia, Switzerland, the Sandwich Islands, the Hanseatic League, and the United States; the last named being represented by the Hon. John A. Kasson, who first made the suggestion of such an interchange of views. The result of their deliberations was the adoption of a code of thirty-one rules, to be recommended to their several governments as the bases of action in making postal treaties or conventions. The system suggested in these thirty-one rules has already been adopted by the governments of Belgium, Italy, and the United States. About one-half of the rules affect matters of administration exclusively; those which have a popular interest are noticed in the subjoined summary, and, if generally adopted, they will greatly facilitate international postal intercourse, by reducing the present cumbrous system of complex rates and weights, and conflicting rules and regulations, to something like simplicity and uniformity. Section 1 divides all matter, to be carried by international mails, into six classes,—ordinary letters, registered letters (two classes), corrected proof-sheets, &c., samples of merchandise, &c., and printed matter. Section 2 recommends that prepayment should be optional, but that unpaid letters should pay additional postage. Sections 4, 5, and 6 recommend the prepayment of registered letters and printed matter, and that matter fully prepaid shall be delivered without any additional charge whatever. Sections 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 recommend the adoption of the French metrical decimal system of weights in all international postal affairs, and that the standard weight for a single-rate letter shall be 15 grammes (about ½ oz.*), and for a single rate for the other classes (except printed matter) 40 grammes (a little less than 1½ oz.), leaving the standard for printed matter for future adjustment. Sections 13, 14, 15 recommend an additional charge upon registered letters, and the payment of indemnity in case of the loss or abstraction of such letters or of their contents. Sections 27 and 30 suggest the adoption of international money-order arrangements, and that provision be made for a class of letters, denominated "urgent," to be delivered by express messengers. The other sections refer exclusively to details of administration. If the code of rules thus described shall be adopted, it will not only simplify international postal affairs, but open the mails to the transmission of printed and other matter in many cases where such matter is now excluded.

Franking Privilege.

Authority to frank mail matter is conferred upon and limited to the following persons: First, the President of the United States, by himself or his private secretary. Second, the Vice-President of the United States. Third, the chiefs of the several executive departments. Fourth, such principal officers, being heads of bureaus or chief clerks of each executive department, to be used only for official communications, as the Postmaster-General shall by regulation prescribe. Fifth, Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States, including delegates from Territories, the secretary of the Senate and clerk of the House of Representatives, to cover correspondence to and from them, and all printed matter issued by authority of Congress, and all speeches, proceedings, and debates in Congress, and all printed matter sent to them; their franking privilege to commence with the term for which they are elected, and to expire on the first Monday of December following such term of office. Sixth, all official communications addressed to either of the executive departments of Government by an officer responsible to that department: Provided, That in all such cases the envelops shall be marked "official," with the signature thereto of the officer writing the communication. Seventh, Postmasters have also the franking privilege for their official communications to other postmasters: Provided, That in all such cases the envelope shall be marked "official," with the signature of the writer thereto, and for any and every such endorsement of "official" falsely made the person making the same shall forfeit and pay three hundred dollars. Eighth, petitions to either branch of Congress shall pass free in the mails. Ninth, all communications addressed to any of the franking officers above described, and not excepted in the foregoing clauses, must be prepaid by postage stamps. Franking privilege limited to packages weighing not exceeding four ounces, except petitions to Congress and Congressional documents, and publications or books procured or purchased by order of either House, or of the two Houses; and except, also, seeds, cuttings, roots, and scions, the weight of the packages of which may be fixed by regulation of the Postmaster-General.

[The following explanations and instructions concerning the changes in the franking privilege, made by the foregoing section, have been issued by the Postmaster-General.

Communications may be franked by the President (by himself or secretary), by the Vice-President, and by each member of the cabinet, without being certified to be "official."

The fourth class of franks can only cover official correspondence, and the words "official business" must be upon the envelope and signed by the official franking. For such official correspondence the franking privilege is allowed to the following officers:—the First and Second Comptrollers of the Treasury; the Solicitor of the Treasury; the Auditors of the Treasury; the Treasurer of the United States; the Register of the Treasury; the Assistant Secretary of State; the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; the Assistant Secretary of the War Department; the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; the Commissioner of the General Land Office; the Commissioner of Customs; the Commissioner of Patents; the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; the Commissioner of Pensions; the Assistant Postmaster-General; the Adjutant-General of the Army; the Quartermaster-General; the Inspector-General; the Commissary-General of Subsistence; the Paymaster-General; the Chief Engineer; the Surgeon-General; the Colonel of Ordnance; the chiefs of bureaus of the Navy Department; and the Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent of the Coast Survey; the Superintendent of the Census; the Commissioner of Agriculture; the Commissioner and Deputy Commissioner of the Internal Revenue; the Provost-Marshal General; the chief clerks of the Executive Departments; Senators and Representatives in Congress of the United States; Delegates from Territories; the secretary of the Senate, and clerk of the House of Representatives.

Attention is specially directed to the sixth clause of this section, which changes the former law. All correspondence addressed to any executive department, or any officer in it, must now be prepaid, except official communications written by some officer of the department, or an officer under its control or responsible to it; and in such cases, under the words "official business" on the envelope, the officer must sign his name with his official designation. All other persons, and all officers writing to departments with which they are not connected, must prepay their postage. All communications to the President not written by a public officer, and all to the Vice-President, must be prepaid.

The seventh clause of this section prohibits all franking by postmasters, or to them, except upon their official communications to the Department, and to each other. In such cases the envelope should bear the certificate "official business," signed by the postmaster writing. Postmasters can no longer receive printed matter free.

The weight of packages of seeds, cuttings, roots, and scions, to be franked, is limited to thirty-two ounces.]

Soldiers', Marines', and Sailors' Letters.

These, when duly certified, may be sent to destination without prepayment.

Mailable Matter divided into Classes.

Matter to be carried by mail is divided into three classes. The first class is letters, embracing all correspondence, wholly or partly in writing, except book manuscripts and proofs; the second is regular printed matter, embracing all mailable matter exclusively in print, regularly issued at stated intervals; the third embraces all other mailable matter, including all pamphlets, occasional publications, books, book manuscripts and proof-sheets, maps, prints, engravings, blanks, flexible patterns, samples, sample cards, phonographic paper, envelopes, wrappers, cards, paper, plain or ornamental, photographic representations of all types, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, and scions.

Matter not enumerated in the second or third class, and to which no specific rate of postage is assigned, is charged with letter postage if forwarded.

Letters uncalled for, and Dead Letters.

The Postmaster-General is authorized to regulate the times at which undelivered letters shall be sent to the dead-letter office, and for their return to the writers; and to have published a list of undelivered letters,—by writing, posting, or advertising,—in his discretion. If advertised, it must be in newspaper of largest circulation, regularly published within the delivery. If no daily paper is published within delivery, then list may be advertised in daily paper of adjoining delivery. One cent to be paid publisher for each letter advertised. Letters addressed in foreign languages may be advertised in journal of that language most used. Such journal must be in same or adjoining delivery.

Dead letters, containing valuables, shall be registered in Department; and if they cannot be delivered to person addressed or to writer, the contents, so far as available, shall be included in receipts of Department, subject to reclamation within four years; and such letters, containing valuables not available, shall be disposed of as the Postmaster-General shall direct.

Foreign dead letters remain subject to treaty stipulations.

The postage on a returned dead letter is 3 cents, the single rate, unless it is registered as valuable, when double rates are charged.

Uncalled-for letters, on which the writers have endorsed their names, with request to return said letters if not delivered within a specified time, not exceeding thirty days, shall be returned as requested, 3 cents additional for each single rate to be collected on delivery.

Letters not called for where addressed, may be forwarded with additional charge of postage therefor.

Registration of Valuable Letters.

The Postmaster-General is authorized to establish a uniform plan for the registration of valuable letters or packets, and to charge a registration fee therefor not exceeding 20 cents in addition to postage. Such registration shall not be compulsory, nor shall the Department be made liable for the loss of such letters or packets. Upon delivery of such letters, return receipts shall be sent to the writers, showing the particulars of delivery, and such receipts shall be legal evidence of delivery.

Ship Letters.

On all letters conveyed in any vessel not employed in carrying mails from one port or place to another port or place in the United States, or from foreign countries, the Postmaster-General is authorized to cause to be paid 2 cents each; and such letters shall be deposited in the post-office at the place of arrival. If for delivery within the United States, every such letter shall be rated with double postage. No fees shall be allowed for letters collected by a carrier on a mail route.

Postmasters, their Appointment, Duties, &c.

Postmasters, at offices where the commissions are less than $1000 a year, shall be appointed by the Postmaster-General; where commissions are over $1000, the President shall appoint. The postmaster must reside within his district of delivery. Postmasters, and all persons hereafter appointed to be employed in care or conveyance of the mails, must, before entering upon duty, take and subscribe an oath or affirmation of fidelity to the Government (act of 2 July, 1862), faithfully to perform all duties. Every postmaster shall keep record of all stamps and envelopes, and of all books, blanks, or property received from his predecessor or from the Department, and of all receipts in money for postages, box-rents, or otherwise; which records shall be delivered to his successor. All postmasters shall render full accounts, quarterly, of all transactions, to be verified by sworn statement.

Letter-Carriers, their Compensation, &c.

Letter-carriers shall be employed as the Postmaster-General shall direct, at a compensation not exceeding $800 a year, which may be increased to $1000 at offices where the income will allow, on proof of the carrier's fidelity, diligence, and experience. Carriers must give bond. Deliveries shall be made as frequently as the public interest may require. No carrier's fee or extra postage shall be charged on letters delivered or collected by carriers. Separate accounts must be kept of the expenses of the carrier service, and of the receipts from local mail matter; and all such expenses must be paid from the income of the office employing the carriers. Letter-carriers may be employed, under contract between postmaster and publishers, to deliver newspapers, periodicals, circulars, &c., but such contracts must be first approved by the Postmaster-General; and the Postmaster-General may also provide for delivery by such carriers of small packets, not exceeding four pounds each, at the rate of 2 cents for each 4 ounces.

Branch Offices and Pillar Boxes for deposit of Letters for the Mails.

These may be established by the Postmaster-General when deemed necessary. The person in charge of branch office shall be appointed, and have same salary as letter-carrier, and shall give like bond; and he may be authorized to sell stamps.

Wrappers for Printed or other Matter.

The manner of wrapping matter not subject to letter postage or lawfully franked, may be regulated by the Postmaster-General, so that the same may be conveniently examined by postmasters, who may remove the wrappers. If not so wrapped, the same shall be subject to letter postage.

Publishers may be required to make Affidavit.

This may be done to ascertain whether paperr, &c. are deposited in the mails by such publishers, to be sent unpaid to others than subscribers. Lists, &c. may be demanded. If papers, &c. are so sent, or publisher refuses to take such oath, the offender, on conviction, shall be fined $50, one-half to go to the informer.

Printed Matter not called for.

This may be disposed of, by regulation of the Postmaster-General, for the benefit of the Department; but the publisher shall be notified when the subscriber neglects or refuses for a month to take paper or periodical from the post-office.

Newspaper Deliveries by Route Agents.

Newspapers, &c., not received from nor to be delivered at any post-office, may be received from and delivered to publishers and news agents at the car or steamer, on terms regulated by the Postmaster-General.

Compensation to Postmasters near Military Camps.

If unusual business is performed by such postmasters, reasonable compensation and clerical service may be allowed.

Limit of Weight of Mailable Matter.

Unpaid Postage or Box-Rent.

This must be paid in all cases before delivery.

Explanations concerning Foreign Letter Postage.

French Mail.

The rates by "French mail" are in full to destination, except to the following places, viz.:—Aden, Batavia, Ceylon, China, cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, via Austria, countries to which correspondence can be sent via Suez, countries beyond seas via France other than those enumerated, East Indies, Gibraltar, Hong Kong, Java, Mauritius, Montenegro, Penang, Portugal, Isle of Re-Union, Servia (except Belgrade), Shanghai, Singapore, and Spain. The limit of prepayment to Spain, Portugal, and Gibraltar, is Behobia; the limit of prepayment to Servia (except Belgrade), to Montenegro, and cities of Turkey in Europe, except as herein mentioned, "via Austria," is the frontier of Turkey and Austria; the limit of prepayment to Aden, East Indies, Ceylon, China, and other countries, via Suez, are the seaports of the Indies, or of the Sea of China to which the English packets ply; and to places beyond seas, other than those designated, the limit is the port of arrival in the country of destination.

Letters may be forwarded in the French mails to Moldavia, Wallachia, and Turkey in Europe, by way of France and Austria; but the postage thereon must in all cases be paid at the place of destination.

How Foreign Letters are rated as to Weight.

Letters for the German States via Bremen and Hamburg, and for the British North American provinces, are rated by the same rule as domestic letters; viz.: one rate is charged for every half-ounce or fraction thereof.

Letters by the French mail are rated thus:—one rate for every quarter-ounce or fraction thereof.

Letters to all other foreign countries are rated by a different rule, that it is important to observe; viz.: one rate for a half-ounce, two rates for an ounce, and, after the first ounce, two rates for every ounce or fraction of an ounce.

Registration of Foreign Letters.

Valuable letters addressed to Germany or any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union, by the Bremen line via New York, or by the Prussian closed mail via New York and Boston, as also letters addressed to Great Britain and Canada, will be registered, on the application of the person posting the same, in the same manner as those deliverable in the United States, provided that the full postage chargeable thereon to destination, together with a registration-fee of twenty cents on each letter to Great Britain or Ireland, and five cents on each letter to the other places mentioned above, is prepaid at the mailing office.

Postage to British Provinces by the Ocean Route.

Steamers of the Cunard line sail from Boston twice each month, touching at Halifax, and when letters are sent by that conveyance for Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Cape Breton, and Prince Edward's Island, the United States postage is five cents the single rate, to be prepaid. The inland rate is collected on delivery. On newspapers by this route, the postage is two cents each.

Routes of Transmission.

Letters intended for transmission in the open mail to England should bear the direction, "Open mail via England;" if for transmission in the French mail, they should be directed, "Via France in French mail;" if for transmission by closed mail to Prussia, they should be directed, "Via Prussian closed mail;" if for transmission in the closed mail to Belgium, they should be directed "Via Belgian closed mail;" and if for transmission by the New York and Bremen line to Bremen, or by the New York and Hamburg line to Hamburg, they should be directed, "Via Bremen," or "Via Hamburg."

Explanations concerning Postage on Printed Matter for Foreign Countries.

To or from Great Britain and Ireland, in United States and British Mails.

Newspapers, two cents each, without regard to weight; pamphlets and periodicals, two cents each if not weighing over two ounces, and four cents an ounce or fraction of an ounce if exceeding two ounces,—which is the United States postage only; but pamphlets weighing over eight ounces, or periodicals weighing over sixteen ounces, are chargeable with letter postage. Books, and all other descriptions of printed matter, are subject to letter rate of postage. Neither pamphlets nor periodicals are entitled to conveyance in the British mail, through England, to countries on the continent of Europe.

To or from France, Algeria, or in French Mail, or via England.

Newspapers, periodical works, books stitched or bound, pamphlets, catalogues, papers of music, prospectuses, circulars, and all other kinds of printed matter, addressed to France, Algeria, or cities of Turkey, Syria, and Egypt, in which France has post-offices (viz.:—Alexandria, Alexandretta, Beyrout, Constantinople, Dardanelles, Galatz, Gallipoli, Ibraila, Ineboli, Jaffa, Kerasound, Latakia, Messina, in Asiatic Turkey, Mitylene, Rhodes, Salonica, Samsoun, Sinope, Smyrna, Sulino, Trebizond, Tripoli in Syria, Tultcha, Varna, and Volo), can be despatched to France direct, or by way of England, on prepayment of the United States postage; viz.: newspapers, two cents each; periodical works, catalogues or pamphlets, one cent an ounce or fraction of an ounce; and all other kinds of printed matter the same as domestic rates; to be in all cases collected in the United States, whether sent or received. France, in like manner, collects its own postage on all kinds of printed matter, whether sent or received.

To or from the German-Austrian Postal Union, in the Prussian Closed Mail.

Newspapers sent in the Prussian closed mail are chargeable with a postage of six cents each, prepayment compulsory, being in full to destination to any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union. Newspapers received come fully prepaid at same rate of postage, and are to be delivered without charge. No provision is made for the transmission of other articles of printed matter in the Prussian closed mail at less than letter rate of postage.

To or from Germany, via Bremen or Hamburg Mail.

Newspapers sent from the United States by the Bremen or Hamburg line, three cents each; prepayment required. This pays to any part of the German-Austrian Postal Union.

Newspapers received by the Bremen or Hamburg line are in like manner prepaid in Germany. On pamphlets, magazines, and other printed matter, one cent an ounce or fraction of an ounce must be prepaid at the mailing office when sent from, and collected at the office of delivery when received in, the United States. This is the United States postage only.

To Belgium, in the United States and Belgian Closed Mail.

Newspapers, gazettes, and periodical works:—

Five cents for each package, the weight of which shall not exceed three ounces, and an additional rate of five cents for each additional weight of three ounces or fraction of three ounces. Prepayment required.

Books, stitched or bound, pamphlets, papers of music, catalogues, prospectuses, advertisements, and notices of various kinds, printed, engraved, lithographed, or autographed:—

Five cents for each package of the weight of one ounce or fraction of an ounce, and so on, in the same proportion, for packages of greater weight. Prepayment required.

The above rates are in full of the postage to destination. In like manner similar printed matter received from Belgium comes fully paid, and is to be delivered without charge.

To the West India Islands (not British) except Cuba, Central America (except Aspinwall and Panama), and countries on the South Pacific Coast, in the United States and British Mails.

Newspapers sent, six cents each; prepayment required. On papers received, the rate to be collected is two cents only, the British postage being prepaid.

On pamphlets and magazines, to or from the West Coast of South America, the United States postage is four cents, to be paid in the United States.

British North American Provinces.

Newspapers and periodicals published in the United States and sent to regular subscribers in the British North American Provinces, or published in those provinces and sent to regular subscribers in the United States, are chargeable with the regular prepaid quarterly rates of United States postage to and from the line; which postage must be paid at the office of mailing in the United States on matter sent, and at the office of delivery in the United States on matter received. In like manner, such matter, if transient, is chargeable with the regular domestic transient printed matter rates to and from the line, to be paid at the office of mailing or delivery in the United States, as the case may be. Editors, however, may exchange free of postage.

☞ Newspapers and periodicals to foreign countries (particularly to the continent of Europe) must be sent in narrow bands, open at the sides or ends; otherwise they are chargeable with letter postage.

CHANGES AND REDUCTIONS IN THE RATES OF DOMESTIC POSTAGE IN FORMER YEARS.

The following will exhibit the principal changes and reductions in the rates of postage on domestic letters at various dates, from 1792 to 1863. The single rate for land transit is referred to in every case.

The revenue act of 28d December, 1814, added 50 per cent. to the rates last above; but the addition was repealed February 1, 1816, which restored the rates of 1799.

Act of April 9, 1816. Rates for a single sheet letter,—30 miles or under, 6 cents; 30 to 80 miles, 10 cents; 80 to 150 miles, 12½ cents; 150 to 400 miles, 18½ cents; over 400 miles, 25 cents.

Act of 3d March, 1855. Rates for a ½ ounce letter,—3000 miles or under, 3 cents; over 3000 miles, 10 cents.

Under this act prepayment was not compulsory, and after January, 1856, prepayment by stamps was required.

[The issue of postage stamps was first authorized by an act of 3d March, 1847, and subsequently by the act of 3d March, 1851.]

Act of 3d March, 1863. Rate for ½ ounce letter, 3 cents everywhere throughout the United States.

Tables exhibiting the Operation of the Various Laws reducing the Rates of Postage.

The tables subjoined show the direct annual postal revenue and postal expenditures, and the annual deficiencies of surplus for each year since 1839, in the United States, arranged in three tables,—the first embracing the last six years under the high rates (from six to twenty-five cents); the second embracing six years of the five and ten cent rates; the third embracing nine years of the three cent prepaid rate under three thousand miles. These tables also show the annual percentage of increase or decrease of revenue and expenditures, and the percentage of increase for each series of years. They stop at 1860,—that being the last complete year before our civil troubles.

Establishment and Organization of the Department of the Interior.

THIS department was established by an act of Congress, approved March 3, 1849, which created a new executive department of the Government of the United States, to be called the "Department of the Interior," the head of which shall be called the Secretary of the Interior. By this act the Secretary is charged with the duties of supervision and appeal in regard to the PATENT OFFICE, previously exercised by the Secretary of State; with the duties of supervision and appeal in relation to the LAND OFFICE, previously exercised by the Secretary of the Treasury; with the supervisory and appellate powers concerning the affairs of the INDIAN OFFICE, previously exercised by the Secretary of War; with the same powers in relation to the PENSION OFFICE, previously exercised by the Secretaries of War and the Navy; with the same powers over the marshals and others engaged in taking the CENSUS; also with supervisory powers over the accounts of the marshals' clerks and other officers of the COURTS of the United States, the Commission of PUBLIC BUILDINGS, the PENITENTIARY of the District of Columbia, and, by other acts, over other local institutions and affairs of the District. Under an act approved February 9, 1859, all duties, powers, and records connected with the subject of COPYRIGHT were transferred from the Department of State to the Department of the Interior, and by another act, approved on the 7th of February in the same year, copies of all copyright publications are required to be transmitted to the Secretary for deposit. This latter act also charged the Interior Department with the care and distribution of CONGRESSIONAL BOOKS and DOCUMENTS.

THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE.—This bureau was established 25th of April, 1812, as one of the offices of the Treasury Department, but was transferred (as already noticed) to the Department of the Interior in 1859. The head of the bureau is styled by law the Commissioner of the General Land Office; and it is his duty to superintend, execute, and perform all acts and things respecting the public lands of the United States, subject to the revision of the Secretary of the Interior. The duties embraced in that brief definition extend to every matter relating to the title, care, survey, management, sale, and conveyance of the public lands. The working staff of the Bureau, including those employed in the several land districts, is very large. Besides the Commissioner, Chief Clerk, and Recorder, named in the table of executive officers of the Interior Department, the following additional officers, clerks, &c. are employed. In the Office at Washington, a principal clerk of public lands, a principal clerk of private land claims, a principal clerk of surveys, each at a salary of $1800; a draughtsman, at $1600; 88 clerks, at salaries ranging from $1200 to $1800, and 25 messengers, laborers, watchmen, &c., at annual salaries of $600 and $700 each. There were in 1863 eleven land districts, for each of which there was a surveyor-general, at a salary of $2000 to $3000, and having a staff of from one to nine draughtsmen and clerks. At the same time there were 47 land offices in the Land States and Territories, at each of which there were a Register and Receiver, at salaries not exceeding $2500 per annum. Following this notice is a list of the districts, land offices, surveyor-generals, registers, and receivers.

The National Almanac for 1863 (page 215) contained a sketch of the origin and growth of the public land system of the United States, so full that we shall only refer in this place to the operations of the year just closed, and such other facts as may be of service by way of illustration. According to the surveys and estimates made prior to 1858, the public lands covered an area of 2,265,625 square miles, or 1,450,000,000 acres, embraced within the limits of the States and Territories existing at that time, as shown in the following table:—

States and Territories.	Sq. miles.	Acres.

Of the aggregate of 1,450,000,000 acres, as shown in the table, nearly the whole area in the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Michigan, Arkansas, Iowa, and Wisconsin has been disposed of, also large portions of the area of Florida, and considerable tracts in the other States and Territories. To the 30th of September, 1863, the whole quantity of land disposed of in various ways was 405,371,545 acres, of which 152,334,856 acres were sold for cash; leaving unsold and undisposed of, at that date, 1,044,628,455. This vast domain includes the extensive and rich mining districts of California, Nevada, Colorado, Oregon, Washington Territory, Idaho, Arizona, and New Mexico, referred to under the several Territories in this work. Since the commencement of the rebellion the operations of the General Land Office have been greatly reduced. During the year ending June 30, 1863, they were as follow:—

Land sold for cash	91,354	acres.
Bounty Land Locations	464,082	"
Swamp Land Grants	30,725	"
Railroad Grants	1,338,941	"
Homestead Grants	1,040,988	"
Total	2,966,690	acres.

On the 30th of September, 1863, the aggregate quantity of the surveyed public lands which were not disposed of in any way was 133,487,495 acres.

Operations under the Agricultural College Act.—By the act of 2d July, 1862, Congress made provision for "donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts;" the law authorizing the grant of 30,000 acres for each senator and representative in Congress, according to the apportionment by Census of 1860.

Under this law, the whole quantity which falls to the "loyal States" (accepting), in "place" and in "scrip," is as follows:—

1st. In "place"—acres, 1,500,000—that is, the States holding public lands within their limits are required to take such lands in satisfaction of their claims under the grant.

2d. In "scrip"—acres, 5,280,000—which the States not holding public lands are to receive and dispose of to assignees, who may locate according to certain stipulations in the act; the proceeds of sale to subserve the purposes of the law.

The States which had accepted prior to 30th September, 1863, are the following:—

Accepting lands in the State.

Iowa	240,000 acres.
Kansas	90,000 "
Michigan	240,000 "
Minnesota	120,000 "
Wisconsin	240,000 "
Total	930,000 acres.

Accepting in "Scrip."

Rhode Island	120,000 acres.
Illinois	480,000 "
Kentucky	330,000 "
Vermont	150,000 "
New York	990,000 "
Pennsylvania	780,000 "
New Jersey	210,000 "
Massachusetts	360,000 "
New Hampshire	150,000 "
Connecticut	180,000 "
Total	3,750,000 acres.

Operations under other Grants to 30th September, 1863.—Under the several grants named, the whole number of acres selected by the grantees, or disposed of by warrants and patents issued to the above date, was as follows:—

Swamp Land Act	57,923,737
Railroad Grants of 1856 and 1857	12,758,845
Military Services (Bounty Land)	64,976,772
Homestead Act	1,456,515

Cost, &c. of the Public Lands.—In the year 1850, John Wilson, then Commissioner of the Land Office, made a report on the cost of the public lands, including the purchase-money for Louisiana, Florida, &c., and also the cost of extinguishing the Indian title, for survey, management, &c. At that period the public lands sold and unsold covered an area of 424,103,750 acres, the cost of which for purchase-money and the extinction of the Indian title was $61,121,717, or an average cost of $14\frac{41}{100}$ cents per acre. Of this land there had been surveyed to the date of that report 304,448,627 acres, at an expense of $6,369,838, or an average of $2\frac{7}{100}$ cents per acre. To the same time there had been sold and disposed 140,387,837 acres, the cost of selling and managing which had averaged $5\frac{32}{100}$ cents per acre. From these figures we deduce the following as the average cost per acre of the public lands prior to 1850, including purchase-money, cost of survey, and cost of sale and management:—

	Cts. per Acre.
For purchase and Indian title	14.41
Surveying	2.07
Sale and management	5.32
Total cents per acre	21.80

PATENT OFFICE.

Established (as now organized) July 4, 1836.

The date above given is that of the act providing for an office to be denominated the Patent Office, the chief officer of which shall be called the Commissioner of Patents; but it is not to be understood that the Patent system of the United States dates from that time. Section 8 of Article I. of the Constitution empowers Congress to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries; and by virtue of this authority Congress passed an act as early as April 10, 1790, enabling inventors to secure their rights by letters patent. There was additional legislation in 1793, 1800, and in 1810, in which last-named year the President was authorized to have erected or purchased a separate building for the Post Office and "the keeper of the patents." In 1828, another building was authorized for the Post Office and Patent Office, and on the 4th of July, 1836, still another for the Patent Office alone. On the 15th of December of the same year, the old office was destroyed by fire. The building erected under the authority of the act of 1836 is that which occupies the G Street front of the magnificent pile of Patent Office buildings, which now extend over two entire blocks of the city of Washington. The force employed in the Patent Office consists of the Commissioner, Chief Clerk, 3 Chief Examiners, 10 Examiners, Disbursing Clerk, and Librarian, already named, with their salaries respectively, among the executive officers of the Interior Department; and, in addition, 8 assistant examiners, at a salary of $1800, 5 second assistant examiners, at a salary of $1600 each, a machinist at $1600, 6 clerks, at salaries of $1400 to $1600 each, 30 clerks and copyists, at salaries of about $1200 each, and a librarian of copyrights, at $1600. The subjoined statement and table exhibit the operations of the Patent Office and the receipts and expenditures of the establishment for the year 1863, and for every preceding year to 1837, the records prior to that time having been destroyed by the fire of December, 1836.

Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Established July 9, 1832.

An act of Congress, approved July 9, 1862, authorized the President to appoint a Commissioner of Indian Affairs, to have the direction and management of all matters arising out of Indian relations, subject to the revision of the Secretary of War (now Secretary of the Interior). The duties of the Bureau are administered by the Commissioner and Chief Clerk (already named, with their respective salaries, under the head of Executive Officers of the Interior Department), assisted by 27 clerks, at salaries ranging from $1200 to $1800, 1 draughtsman, at $1600, 2 messengers and 2 laborers, at salaries of $400 to $840 each; and several hundred superintendents, agents, clerks, interpreters, farmers, blacksmiths, schoolmasters, laborers, &c. in the Indian country, at salaries ranging from $2000 a year down to $20 a year. It is difficult to convey an adequate idea of the business of this Bureau in general terms, and the details are too numerous for the space that can be devoted to the subject. The greater part of the business of the Bureau relates to the fulfilment of treaty stipulations with the Indian tribes for the payment of annuities in money and in goods; in the regulation of the intercourse between the Indians and the traders; in efforts to introduce agriculture and some of the mechanic arts, and the rudiments of school education, among the more manageable tribes; in efforts to maintain peaceful relations among tribes inclined to hostilities, and, in general, such supervision as will conduce to their welfare. The treaties made previous to 1843 fill a large octavo of 612 pages, and those made since fill half as many more; the annual appropriation bill for the current year occupies 20 closely printed pages of Little and Brown's edition of the Statutes at Large, and the amount of money thereby appropriated is $2,117,962. These general statements may serve to convey some idea of the extensive details of the affairs managed by the Bureau.

* Year ending September 30. All the other years named are to December 31.

† The receipts fell off to so great an extent in 1861 that Congress appropriated in 1862 $50,855.49 to meet the deficiency.

Pension Office.

Established March 2, 1833.

The date above given is that of the act which first authorized the appointment of a Commissioner of Pensions. While the office created by this act was designed to be of short duration, it was continued by subsequent legislation until the 19th of January, 1849, when the office was made permanent on account of the large accumulation of business consequent upon the Mexican War. Originally the acts of the Commissioner of Pensions were subject to the supervision of the Secretaries of War and the Navy; but by the act of 3d March, 1849, establishing the Interior Department, the supervisory power is transferred to the Secretary of the Interior. It is the duty of the Commissioner of Pensions to execute, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, such duties in relation to the pension and bounty-land laws as may be assigned to him by the President. The affairs of the office are administered by the Commissioner and Chief Clerk (already named, with their salaries, under the head of Executive Officers of the Interior Department), assisted by 12 clerks at $1800 each per year, 30 clerks at $1600 each per year, 52 clerks at $1400 each per year, 50 clerks at $1200 each per year, 6 messengers at $700 to $840 each per year, 5 laborers and a watchman at $600 each per year. The Commissioner's estimate for salaries and office expenses for the years 1864–5, is $232,840.

The following statement will exhibit the number and character of the army pensioners on the rolls, June 30, 1863, and the annual amounts payable to said pensioners; also the same particulars estimated by the Commissioner for the years ending June 30, 1864 and 1865:—

On the 30th of June, 1863, the prize-money carried to the credit of the Navy Pension Fund amounted to $1,329,283; and it is proposed to pay the navy invalids and privateer invalids out of the proceeds of this fund, without asking for any further appropriations. It is estimated that the "navy widows, mothers, children, and sisters" on the pension rolls will be increased, by June 30, 1864, to 712, who will require an annual appropriation of $133,796.

Census Bureau.

Operating under the Act of May 23, 1850.

This important Bureau has no permanent establishment, although since 1850 it has been in existence under the act above specified. The working force of the office is now engaged upon the voluminous returns of the Census of 1860, for which an appropriation of $1,000,000 was made on the 26th of June in that year. It is under the superintendence of J. C. G. Kennedy, Esq.

The taking of the census in the United States is a matter of more consequence than in most other countries; for here it is of high political as well as economical importance. Representation and taxation in this country are apportioned according to numbers. The Constitution provides, in Section 2 of Article I., that "Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included in this Union according to their respective numbers;" and the same section directs that "the actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years." Under these provisions, and the laws passed in pursuance of them, the Census of the United States has been taken eight times from 1790 to 1860. As years rolled on, and our population and populated territory expanded by rapid growth, the work of enumeration increased in magnitude and importance, and the results have been of greater value, aside from their political necessity. Perhaps no better idea of the augmented labor necessarily bestowed upon the work, and of the increased value of the returns, can be given than by presenting a summary of the cost of the census for each of the several decennial periods. The Census of 1790 cost $44,377.28; that of 1800, $66,109.04; that of 1810, $178,144.67; that of 1820, $208,525.99; that of 1830, $378,545.13; that of 1840, $832,370.95; that of 1850, $1,318,027.53, exclusive of the expense of printing and binding, and some other expenses subsequent to the 30th of September, 1853. For the Eighth Census (1860) an appropriation of $1,000,000 has been made, as already mentioned. Each of the earlier censuses was provided for by a special act, as the necessity arose; but in 1850 Congress passed a general law on the subject, making provision for the Seventh, or any subsequent, Census, if no other law should be passed by the 1st day of January of the year when, by the Constitution, an enumeration is to be made. This law is specific and comprehensive in its directions, furnishing a complete chart to the marshals, to the Secretary of the Interior, to whom the returns are required to be made, and to the Superintendent, who is authorized by the same law to be appointed for the immediate supervision of the work. It also directs how the ratio of representation shall be ascertained, and the forms to be pursued in apportioning the Congressional Representatives among the States.

Since the issue of the National Almanac for 1863, no further publication of the statistics of 1860 has been made, and the only matter we can now add to the copious tables republished in that volume is contained in the following interesting statements of the nativities of the population of the United States, for which we are indebted to the courtesy of the Superintendent, who furnished them in advance of his report.

NOTES TO THE TABLES OF NATIVITIES.—The tables of nativities on this and the following pages present a great many subjects for curious as well as philosophic consideration. By reading each column downwards (from the top towards the bottom) the reader will be enabled to trace the course of migration of the native-born population of each State into the other States, and so get a clue to the geographical, political, industrial, and social preferences of the moving population of every State. Thus, taking the State of Alabama, it appears that while 35,578 of her native-born citizens moved into Mississippi, 34,193 to Texas, and 24,433 to Arkansas, only 4628 moved into the adjoining State of Georgia, and but 326 moved into all the new Territories combined. The footing of each column gives the whole number of native citizens of the particular State residing in the whole United States. Again, by reading the tables across from Alabama on the left, to the total column on the extreme right of the fourth page, the reader will be able to ascertain the proportions in which the population of each State is made up from the native-born citizens of the other States. Thus, while Alabama received but 2 of her residents from California, she received 83,517 from Georgia. Still again; the figures in the angle formed by the column under any State head, and the line of figures stretching to the right from the same State in the side column, show the number of native-born citizens of the State who remain in the State. Some of these movements, with their proportions, are shown in the following addenda to the tables; but others will occur to the studious reader. Similar addenda follow the table of nativities of our foreign-born population.

LEWIS BOLLMAN, of Indiana	Statistical Clerk	1600

AN ACT TO ESTABLISH A DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there is hereby established at the seat of government of the United States a Department of Agriculture, the general designs and duties of which shall be to acquire and to diffuse among the people of the United States useful information on subjects connected with agriculture in the most general and comprehensive sense of that word, and to procure, propagate, and distribute among the people new and valuable seeds and plants.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a "Commissioner of Agriculture," who shall be the chief executive officer of the Department of Agriculture, who shall hold his office by a tenure similar to that of other civil officers appointed by the President, and who shall receive for his compensation a salary of three thousand dollars per annum.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Agriculture to acquire and preserve in his department all information concerning agriculture which he can obtain by means of books and correspondence, and by practical and scientific experiments (accurate records of which experiments shall be kept in his office), by the collection of statistics, and by any other appropriate means within his power; to collect, as he may be able, new and valuable seeds and plants; to test, by cultivation, the value of such of them as may require such tests; to propagate such as may be worthy of propagation, and to distribute them among agriculturists. He shall annually make a general report in writing of his acts to the President and to Congress, in which he may recommend the publication of papers forming parts of or accompanying his report, which report shall also contain an account of all moneys received and expended by him. He shall also make special reports on particular subjects whenever required to do so by the President or either house of Congress, or when he shall think the subject in his charge requires it. He shall receive and have charge of all the property of the agricultural division of the Patent Office in the Department of the Interior, including the fixtures and property of the propagating garden. He shall direct and superintend the expenditure of all money appropriated by Congress to the department, and render accounts thereof, and also of all money heretofore appropriated for agriculture and remaining unexpended. And said Commissioner may send and receive through the mails, free of charge, all communications and other matter pertaining to the business of his department, not exceeding in weight thirty-two ounces.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of Agriculture shall appoint a chief clerk, with a salary of two thousand dollars, who in all cases during the necessary absence of the Commissioner, or when the said principal office shall become vacant, shall perform the duties of Commissioner; and he shall appoint such other employés as Congress may from time to time provide, with salaries corresponding to the salaries of similar officers in other departments of the government; and he shall, as Congress may from time to time provide, employ other persons, for such time as their services may be needed, including chemists, botanists, entomologists, and other persons skilled in the natural sciences pertaining to agriculture. And the said Commissioner, and every other person to be appointed in the said department, shall, before he enters upon the duties of his office or appointment, make oath or affirmation truly and faithfully to execute the trust committed to him. The Governor of Maine, and the Senators and Representatives, are chosen annually at an election held by the people on the second Monday of September. The Councillors, Secretary of State, Treasurer, Attorney-General, Adjutant-General, and Land Agent are chosen annually by the Senators and Representatives in joint convention. The Senate consists of 31 members, and the House of Representatives of 151 members; and both constitute the "Legislature of Maine." The Legislature meets annually, in regular session, on the first Wednesday in January. Each member of the Senate and House is entitled to $150 for attendance at a regular session, and $2 for every ten miles of travel. For attendance at an extra session the compensation is $2 per day. The Councillors are 7 in number, and are chosen to advise the Governor in the executive part of the Government. All male citizens of the United States of the age of 21 years and upwards, excepting paupers, persons under guardianship, and Indians not taxed, who have an established residence in the State three months next preceding the election, are electors of the State of Maine.

Judiciary.

The judicial power of Maine is vested in a Supreme Judicial Court, and such inferior courts as the Legislature may establish. The judges of the Supreme Court are appointed by the Governor, with the advice of the Council, and hold their offices for seven years.

The original jurisdiction of the Supreme Judicial Court embraces all suits in equity—all suits at common law—where the title to real estate is involved or where the damages demanded exceed twenty dollars.

It has jurisdiction of all criminal offences except those cognizable by a justice of the peace or a police or municipal judge.

Its appellate jurisdiction extends to all cases, civil or criminal, which may have been originally brought before inferior magistrates, and to appeals from the decrees of the Judge of Probate.

For the purpose of hearing questions of law and cases in equity, the State is divided into the Eastern, the Middle, and the Western Districts.

The Eastern District includes Aroostook, Washington, Hancock, Piscataquis, Waldo, and Penobscot counties.

The Middle District includes Somerset, Knox, Sagadahoc, Lincoln, and Kennebec counties.

The Western District includes Franklin, Oxford, Androscoggin, York, and Cumberland counties.

The Law Terms are held as follows:—

Eastern District at Bangor, on the fourth Tuesday of May.

Middle District at Augusta, on the third Tuesday of June.

Western District at Portland, on the third Tuesday of July.

For the trial of cases, civil and criminal, terms are held in every county at least twice in every year, and in some of the counties still more frequently.

State Debt.

On the 1st of January, 1863, the bonded debt of the State of Maine was..... $1,472,000

Debt incurred during the Aroostook War, and prior thereto.....	$449,000
Debt due on account of Massachusetts lands, bought in 1853.....	250,000

Prior to January 1, 1863, there had been paid on account of the debt $27,000; and during the year 1863 there was added of war debt $950,000, making the total debt of the State, January 1, 1864, $2,422,000.

Expenditure for War Purposes.

The total outlay from the Treasury on account of the war, up to the close of the past year, amounts to $1,127,767.52.

Primarily, the whole sum thus expended constitutes a claim against the United States, and up to January 8, 1863, accounts in detail, to the amount of $1,091,069.61, had been presented to the Federal Treasury for auditing and liquidation, leaving a balance of $36,697.91 to be presented. On these accounts the Secretary of the Treasury paid $320,000. He has further ordered the State to be credited with the payment of its share of the direct tax under the twenty million bill of August 5, 1861. This tax, after the deduction of 15 per centum for the State's assumption of its payment, amounted to $357,702.10, and its credit to the State, together with the $320,000 just named, make an aggregate payment, from the Federal Treasury, of $677,702.10 on account, leaving still a balance in favor of the State of $450,065.42, to be further increased, as just mentioned, by the sum of $36,697.91.

Railroads.

The abstract of railroad returns for the State of Maine, published March 17, 1863, is without essential dates, and so fragmentary as to be of little or no use for statistical purposes. It is, therefore, omitted.

[For last previous report, see National Almanac, 1863, p. 345.]

Maine Insane Hospital, Augusta—Dr. Henry M. Harlow, Superintendent.—On the 30th of November, 1861, there were 252 patients remaining in the hospital,—133 males, and 119 females. There were admitted in 1862, 125,—69 males, and 56 females; making a total under treatment to that time of 377,—202 males, and 175 females.

119 were discharged during the year,—74 males, and 45 females; leaving 258 patients in the hospital at the close of the year,—129 males, and 129 females.

The civil condition of the patients admitted during the year was as follows: 36 males and 30 females were married; 29 males and 21 females were single; 4 were widowers, and 5 were widows.

THE PUBLIC LANDS OF MAINE.—The State owns about 2,000,000 of acres of land, of which about one-fourth is timber land, and the other three-fourths are denominated "settling lands." The land agent paid into the treasury, during 1862, $25,777.27, from the proceeds of sales of these lands.

SCIENTIFIC SURVEY OF THE STATE.—The Legislature of 1861 passed a resolve providing for a Scientific Survey of the State. In January, 1863, the second report was made by the gentlemen employed on the survey. It is an octavo of 447 pages, embracing valuable papers on the geology of Maine, by C. H. Hitchcock, and on the botany and zoology of Maine, by Dr. E. Holmes and A. S. Packard, Jr.

AGRICULTURE.—By a recent act of the Legislature of Maine, assessors are required to make returns of the products of agriculture. Some of the tables made up from these returns are in the report of the Board of Agriculture for 1862, but, as 192 of the towns were not returned, the tables possess but little statistical value.

MAINE AND THE WAR.—From May 3, 1861, the date of muster of her 1st Infantry under the President's call for 75,000 volunteers for three months, until December 31, 1862, the date of the latest-printed Adjutant-General's Report, the State of Maine furnished to the armies of the United States 33,105 men, as follows: for three months 779, for nine months 7493, for three years 24,771, for defence of the State—coast guard—262, total 33,105. In addition to the foregoing, 5409 persons were reported to the Adjutant-General as enlisted in the organizations of other States, in the Regular Army, and in the Navy. The 33,105 above enumerated were organized into 28 regiments of infantry, 2 regiments of artillery, 1 regiment of cavalry, 6 batteries of artillery, 1 company of sharpshooters, and 4 companies of coast guards. Full details are in the annexed table.

NOTES.—(1.) In the 13th, 14th, and 15th Regiments of Infantry, and 1st Regiment of Mounted Artillery, many men were mustered into service by volunteer officers, on account of the absence, when required, of any Regular United States mustering officer.

(2.) In addition to the numbers furnished, as shown in the proper column, twenty-seven men were mustered in as Maine Volunteers for Corcoran's Brigade, but either re-enlisted into the United States regular service, or were transferred to the 7th Regiment,—and seven recruits have been mustered in for a Company of Cavalry authorized to be raised.

(3.) The 10th Regiment is mustered into service for two years from May 3, 1861, except Companies A and D, which are mustered in for three years from October 4, 1861.

(4.) The Regiments of Infantry from the 21st to the 28th, inclusive, are mustered into service for nine months.

MONEY CONTRIBUTED TO DECEMBER, 1862.—In addition to the money expended on account of volunteers directly by the State, viz., $1,127,767.52, there was expended by the cities, towns, and plantations of Maine, under authority of State laws, $233,845 for aid to soldiers' families. [See Table B, next page.] The Adjutant-General also reports that the various cities, towns, and plantations have disbursed more than a million and a half of dollars for bounties, &c. to fill the quotas of the State. Of the first sum of $1,127,767.52, all but $196,897.41 constitutes a claim against the General Government, $677,702.10 have been allowed and settled. The State bounty was $45.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S REPORT FOR 1862.—The report of General John L. Hodsdon, Adjutant-General of this State, is a large octavo volume of 1306 pages. It evinces great care and labor, and will prove to be hereafter a priceless record of the military and militia affairs of the State during the second year of the rebellion.

MILITIA OF MAINE; NUMBERS AND ORGANIZATION.—By an act of the Legislature approved March 19, 1862, the State provided for an original constitutional enrolment of the ununiformed militia from lists made by municipal authorities, as well as by other means. The mode of proceeding required by this act is, that aldermen of cities, selectmen of towns, and assessors of plantations shall annually, in April, make lists of all persons within their limits between the ages of 18 and 45 years, liable to enrolment. These lists must be filed with the municipal clerks, and copies sent to the Adjutant-General of the State, and to the Major-General of the division. Before the 1st of June in each year, the major-general of each division is required to appoint a suitable person, within the limits of every company, as orderly-sergeant, who acts ex officio as clerk of his company, and commands it until commissioned officers are elected. This officer must take the municipal lists made as above, and enter on company blanks all persons within his limits on said lists, and all others known to him as liable to enrolment, and, before the 10th of June, must certify his list to the Adjutant-General. Under this act an enrolment was made in May and June, and the rolls of 643 companies, comprising the names of 69,172 men, were returned to the Adjutant-General. This was but a comparative success, as the Census returns of the State for 1860, and the report of the Adjutant-General in 1861, showed that there were at that time in the State over 112,000 males between the ages of 17 and 40 years. In the following October a second enrolment was made under General Order No. 48 of Adjutant-General Hodsdon, and under this the names of 94,939 men were returned as liable to enrolment. At the same time returns were made of 38,514 names of persons who had entered the service of the United States during the war. The excess of this number over the number (33,105) returned in the table of volunteers, is accounted for by the return under the last enrolment of all persons enlisted in the organisations of other States and in the Regular Army and Navy.

The Governor, Councillors, and members of the Legislature are elected annually by the people on the second Tuesday of March. The Secretary of State, Treasurer, Commissary-General, &c. are chosen annually by the Legislature in joint convention. The Attorney-General is appointed by the Governor. No person who is not of the Protestant religion can hold the office of Governor, Senator, or Representative in the Legislature. Councillors, five in number (one from each of five districts), are chosen by the people to advise the Governor in the executive part of government. The Councillors and Governor have a negative on each other both in nominations and appointments to office. The supreme legislative power within the State is vested in a Senate and House of Representatives, and the two together are styled the General Court of New Hampshire. The General Court assembles annually in regular session on the first Wednesday in June. The Senators are twelve in number, elected by districts; the Representatives are one for every town, parish, or place having 150 ratable male polls, and one additional Representative for every additional 300 ratable male polls in excess of the first 150. Towns, parishes, or places having less than 150 polls are classed together and elect Representatives by turns. There were 333 Representatives in the Legislature of 1862–3. Every male inhabitant of a town, or parish with town-privileges, or place unincorporated, in this State, of twenty-one years of age (excepting paupers, or persons excused from paying taxes at their own request), has a right to vote in the town, &c. wherein he dwells.

State Debt.—The State Treasurer makes no specific report of the debt of New Hampshire. Since 1861, bonds and notes for moneys for war purposes and the temporary use of the State have been issued to the amount of $1,433,400. Some part of this has been repaid, but the exact sum it is difficult to ascertain from the published reports. Previous to 1861 New Hampshire owed no debt.

RAILROADS.—The Report of the New Hampshire Railroad Commissioners for 1863 contains no summary exhibit of the condition and movement of the railroads for the year; and the details given in the text of their report are not such as can be tabulated for purposes of comparison with preceding years. The number of roads was not increased during the year; but the traffic results are reported in general terms as of the most gratifying character, and as exhibiting the increasing prosperity of the State, although the country is at war.

On the 1st of May, 1862, there were in the asylum 188 patients, of whom 88 were males and 100 females. Since that time 101 were admitted,—45 males and 56 females. The whole number in the asylum during the year was 289,—133 males and 156 females. 69 were discharged, 32 males and 37 females; and 16 died, 7 males and 9 females.

The whole number discharged during the year was 69, and of these 30 were recovered, 22 improved, and 17 unimproved; showing the proportion of recoveries to be about 30 per cent. of the whole number of admissions, and 62½ per cent. of the number of recent attacks.

NEW HAMPSHIRE AND THE WAR.—From the 7th of May, 1861, to June 1, 1863, New Hampshire furnished to the armies of the United States 17,738 men. These were divided as follows, according to their terms of service: for 3 months, 780; for 3 years, 14,935; for 9 months, 2023; total, 17,738. Considered with reference to their organization, the above men composed 17 regiments of infantry, 1 battery of light artillery, and 4 companies of artillery. The 17th regiment was eventually consolidated with the 2d. Besides the above enumerated men the returns made to the Adjutant-General's Office show that 2702 men from the State had entered the service of the United States, either in the navy or in the organizations of other States, making the aggregate from New Hampshire 20,440 men. The quotas of the State under all the calls for troops to June 1, 1863, stood as follow:—

Call of April, 1861, for three-months men	780
Call of July 2, 1861, and July, 1862, for three-years men	13,507
Call of August 4, 1862, for nine-months men	5,053

The six Judges constituting the Supreme Court of Vermont are elected annually by the Legislature. A general term of the Supreme Court for the eastern counties is held annually on the east side of the mountains, at such time and place as the court shall designate, and in the same way an annual general term for the western counties is held on the west of the mountains. One term of the Supreme Court is also held annually in each county. Each Judge of the Supreme Court is a Chancellor. For all purposes except final adjudication, the Court of Chancery is always in session; and it holds, besides, two stated terms annually in each county. The Judges of the Supreme Court hold County Courts twice a year in each county, where one judge of the Supreme Court is assisted by two county judges, elected annually by the people of the counties respectively. Questions of law arising in the County Courts, and appeals from the degrees of a Chancellor, may be carried to the Supreme Court.

Assistant Judges of the County Courts.—Term of Office expires December 1, 1864.—Salary, a per-diem allowance.

Casualties in the Vermont regiments.—Reports from the regiments, &c. of three-years men remaining in the service at various dates in August and September, 1863, show that but 7884 men remain on the rolls, and that but 6150 were fit for duty. The regiments making these reports mustered originally (including recruits) 13,992 men: so that 6108 men have died from disease or from wounds, or have been discharged, or have deserted.

Extra pay.—The State of Vermont allows to each of her soldiers $7 per month in addition to the pay of the United States.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The report of Adjutant-General P. T. Washburn, dated October 3, 1863, is an octavo of 106 pages, and a very business-like document. General Washburn has also prepared a Register of the Commissioned officers of Vermont.

The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary, Treasurer, Auditor, and Attorney-General are chosen annually by the people, at "meetings" held for the purpose on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November. Councillors (eight in number), to advise the Governor in the executive part of government, are chosen by the people at the same time—the electors in each council district choosing one councillor. The political year commences on the first Wednesday of January. Senators (40 in number) and Representatives (240 in number), elected annually by the people, constitute the Legislature, and the style of that body is, "The General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts." The General Court assembles at least once a year, on the first Wednesday of January. Senators and Representatives are allowed each $300 for attendance at the regular sessions. Every male citizen of the age of 21 years, who has resided one year in the State and six months in his election district, and who has paid a tax within two years, has a right to vote: he must, however, be able to read the Constitution of the State in the English language. Paupers and persons under guardianship are excluded.

Insurance.

Life. (From the Report of the Insurance Commissioners, January 1, 1863.)

The amount insured by the 24 life-insurance companies legally doing business in this Commonwealth falls very little short of $200,000,000 in more than 75,000 policies. These companies hold cash funds, from premiums and interest thereon, to the amount of over $20,000,000. Their cash-income during the last year exceeded $6,000,000, and they paid more than $2,000,000 for losses by death. Notwithstanding the agitations of the times, their business continued rapidly to advance during the year. The amount of policies issued by these companies from November 1, 1861, to November 1, 1862, was over $38,000,000. Those of them that were doing business in Massachusetts the previous year made a net increase in 1862 of $13,000,000 in the amount insured, against a net increase of $2,000,000 in 1861.

The following are some of the aggregates reported for 24 companies in 1862:—Amount insured, $199,285,861; net present value of policies, $18,494,607; net assets, including capital, $28,392,660; receipts, including income of capital, $7,035,359; expenses, $325,322; claims of death against 23 companies, 720; amount, $2,623,670; ratio of loss to amount insured, 1.14; ratio of claims to whole number of policies, 1.09.

This State has a Board of "Commissioners of Alien Passengers and Foreign Paupers," who make inquiries concerning the proper place of "settlement" of paupers, or whether they have relatives who should be charged with their support. Commencing in 1859, they had examined 14,487 cases to the close of 1862, and they found settlements out of the State, or the means of support, for 1979 cases. So many of these were life cases of pauperism that they would have made a permanent addition of at least 1000 to the pauper population to be supported by the State, at a cost of $40,000 per annum. The ordinary system of supporting paupers by local establishments is also in use in Massachusetts; but there are no accessible reports of the numbers thus supported. In these town almshouses the cost per week for each pauper ranges from $1.10 in Franklin to $1.95 in Suffolk, in addition to the income of the almshouse farms.

The labor of the convicts is hired out by contract. This prison is conducted on the congregate or Auburn system.

Of these there were for three months 3736, for nine months 16,896, for three years 48,698: total, 69,330. This total is the footing up of the regimental and other muster rolls reported in detail by the Adjutant-General. * The date of departure in the fifth column is taken from pages 76–79 of the Governor's message, January, 1863. The language of the message is not specific, and it is therefore difficult to determine whether the date refers to the day of muster or the day of departure,—probably the latter.

The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, and Attorney-General are chosen annually by the people at an election held on the first Wednesday of April, for the year commencing the last Tuesday of May. The Auditor is elected by the Assembly. The Commissioner of Schools is appointed by the Governor, subject to confirmation by the Senate. The Senate consists of the Governor, who presides, the Lieutenant-Governor, and one Senator from each of the thirty-three towns in the State, and the Secretary of State is ex-officio Secretary of the Senate. The House of Representatives consists of 72 members. The Legislature holds its regular session at Newport on the last Tuesday of May, and a session, by adjournment, at Providence, in January following; and the official style of the body is, The Legislature of the State of Rhode Island. The pardoning power is vested in the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Every male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who has had a residence in the State two years, and in the town where he offers to vote for six months, and who is duly registered, is an elector for all civil officers, if further qualified as follows: he must have paid a tax of one dollar, or he must have done duty in a military company in this State, as an equipped member, for one day during the year. The judicial power of the State is vested in a Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as the Legislature may establish. The judges of the Supreme Court are chosen by the two houses of the Legislature, assembled in grand committee, and hold their offices until their seats are declared vacant by a resolution passed by a majority of all the members of each house.

A Court of Common Pleas in each of the five counties is held by a single judge of the Supreme Court. The Associate Judges of the Supreme Court divide this duty among themselves.

The following table gives the Clerks of the Supreme and Common Pleas Courts, and the Sheriffs for each county, with the post-office of each:—

The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, and Comptroller, are chosen annually by the people at an election held on the first Monday in April. Senators, 21 in number, and Representatives, 237 in number, chosen annually at the same time with the Governor, compose the Legislature, which is styled The General Assembly of the State of Connecticut. The Legislature holds at least one session annually, commencing on the first Wednesday in May, alternately at New Haven and Hartford. The Representatives are elected two for each town incorporated prior to the State Constitution of 1818, and one for each town organized since: the number (237) above given is the number in the present Legislature (1863–4). The Commissioner of the School Fund, and the Superintendent of Common Schools, are chosen by the Legislature. Every white male citizen of the United States who shall have attained the age of twenty-one years, who shall have resided in the State for a term of one year and in the town where he offers to vote six months, and who is of good moral character, is entitled to the privileges of an elector upon taking such oath as may be prescribed by law.

By act of May session, 1863, the Supreme Court of Errors consists of five judges, who are also judges of the Superior Court. The Superior Court consists of nine judges, including the judges of the Supreme Court of Errors. These judges are elected by the General Assembly, and hold office for eight years. The Constitution provides that no judge shall hold his office after he shall have attained the age of seventy years. The terms of Judges Hinman and Sanford are now limited by this provision.

The Supreme Court of Errors has final and conclusive jurisdiction of all matters brought by way of error or complaint from the judgments or decrees of any Superior Court in matters of law or equity, wherein the rules of law or principles of equity appear from the files, records, or exhibits of said court to have been mistakenly or erroneously adjudged and determined: it may take cognizance of all such matters, and carry into complete execution all its judgments, decrees, and determinations.

The terms of the Superior Court are held by one judge, except for the trial of capital offences, when a judge of the Supreme Court sits as president judge with the judge holding the court. The Supreme Court has chancery jurisdiction; but there is no other Chancery Court. Nine jurors may make a verdict in civil cases.

"When any boy under the age of sixteen years shall be convicted of any offence known to the laws of this State, and punishable by imprisonment, other than such as may be punishable by imprisonment for life, the court of justice, as the case may be, before whom such conviction shall be heard, may, at their discretion, sentence such boy to the State Reform School, or to such punishment as is now provided by law for the same offence.

"And if the sentence shall be to the Reform School, then it shall be in the alternative to the State Reform School, or to such punishment as would have been awarded if this act had not been passed."

A sentence must be for at least nine months; but no boy under the age of ten can be sent there. Any parent or guardian may indenture his or her boy to the school. The Eleventh Annual Report contains the following statistics, which are compared with those of the previous year.

The Lieutenant-Governor, Speaker of the Assembly, Secretary of State, Comptroller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, and State Engineer and Surveyor, constitute the Commissioners of the Land-Office. The same officers, except the Speaker and the Engineer and Surveyor, are the Commissioners of the Canal Fund. The Commissioners of the Canal Fund, the State Engineer and Surveyor, and the Canal Commissioners, compose the Canal Board. The State Engineer and Surveyor, Auditor of the Canal Department, and Canal Commissioners, constitute the Contracting Board.

Senators, 32 in number, are elected in single districts for two years. They are chosen the same year the Secretary of State is elected. The Lieutenant-Governor is President of the Senate, but has only a casting vote. Members of Assembly, 128 in number, are elected annually in single districts. These compose the Legislature, which assembles annually on the first Tuesday in January. The pay of Senators and members of Assembly is $3 per day for not over 100 days, and $1 for every 10 miles' travel. The Lieutenant-Governor, $6 per day. The general election is held on first Tuesday in November.

JUDICIARY.

1. Court for the Trial of Impeachments.

This court is composed of the President of the Senate (who is president of the court, and when absent the chief judge of the Court of Appeals presides), the Senators, or the major part of them, and the judges of the Court of Appeals, or the greater part of them. It is a court of record, and, when summoned, meets at Albany, and has for its clerk and officers the clerk and officers of the Senate. If the Governor is impeached, the Lieutenant-Governor cannot act as a member of the court. Two-thirds of the members present must concur for conviction. The judgment of the court extends only to removals from or disqualifications for office, or both,—the party being still liable to indictment.

2. The Court of Appeals.

This is the court of last resort. It has no original jurisdiction, but reviews the proceedings of all other courts which are the subject of appeal. It is composed of eight judges, of whom four are elected (one every second year) by the people at-large for eight years, and four selected each year from the justices of the Supreme Court having the hortest time to serve. These selections are made alternately from the first, third, fifth, and seventh and from the second, fourth, sixth, and eighth judicial districts. The judge (of the four chosen at large) whose term first expires presides as chief judge. Six judges constitute a quorum. Four terms are held each year, at Albany, commencing on the first Tuesday of January, fourth Tuesday of March, third Tuesday of June, and last Tuesday of November. Each judge has a salary of $3500 per annum. The court for 1864 is thus constituted:—

3. Supreme and Circuit Courts.

The Supreme Court has general jurisdiction in law and equity, and power to review judgments of the County Courts. For the election of the justices the State is divided into eight judicial districts, each of which elects four (except the first, which elects five) to serve eight years, with an annual salary of $3500. In each district one justice goes out of office every two years. The justice in each district whose term first expires, and who is not a judge of the Court of Appeals, is a presiding justice of the court, and the county clerks of the several counties serve as clerks. At least four general terms of the Supreme Court are held in each district every year. Every county has each year at least one special term, and two Circuit Courts. Any three or more of the justices can hold the general terms, and any one or more hold the special terms, at which are heard all equity cases, and also Circuit Courts, which are held exclusively for the trial of issues of fact.

4. County Courts.

County Courts have jurisdiction as follows:—To review in the first instance judgments rendered in civil actions by justices' courts, and to affirm, reverse, or modify such judgments; for the foreclosure and satisfaction of mortgages; for partition of lands; for admeasurement of dower; for the sale of the real estate of infants and persons of unsound mind; to compel the specific performance of contracts in certain cases; for the care and custody of lunatics and habitual drunkards; for the sale of the real estate of religious corporations; to exercise the power heretofore vested in Courts of Common Pleas over certain judgments of justices of the peace; to exercise the powers conferred by statute upon the late Courts of Common Pleas, or the judges or any judge thereof, respecting ferries, fisheries, turnpike-roads, wrecks, physicians, habitual drunkards, imprisoned, insolvent, absent, concealed, or non-resident debtors, jail-liberties, the removal of occupants from State lands, the laying out of railroads through Indian lands; to remit fines and forfeited recognizances; to grant new trials; to allow new trials in County Courts, in certain cases; and over various other matters. The County Court is always open for the transaction of any business for which no notice is required to be given to an opposing party. At least two terms in each county for the trial of issues of law or fact, and as many more as the County Judge shall appoint, shall be held in each year.

County Judges are elected for four years; they are vested with the powers of Justices of the Supreme Court at Chambers, are members of Courts of Oyer and Terminer, and, with two justices of the peace, constitute Courts of Sessions, and are vested with the powers and duties of the late judges of the Court of Common Pleas, or any of them, and with various other powers and duties.

The Superior Court was created in the year 1828, with a Chief-Justice and two associate Justices. In 1848 three additional Assistant Justices were created. This court has concurrent jurisdiction with the Supreme Court of all causes of action when any one of the parties to the same resides in New York City. It has no jurisdiction of mortgage-foreclosures, will-cases, appointments of committees to manage estates, or of matters relating to the care and custody of minor children, or guardians or wards: in other words, the Supreme Court has in such equity cases exclusive jurisdiction. Its practice and rules, terms and modes of appeal, are the same as in the Supreme Court. The justices are chosen for six years, and are divided into classes of three,—the term of office expiring regularly every two years. They are elected by the people. They appoint their clerk, who holds office during good behavior.

The Common Pleas of the City of New York is as old as the charter of the city. It has all the jurisdiction of a county court, added to that of the Supreme Court, in all cases other than those of a purely equitable nature. Its practice, rules, modes of appeal, and terms are substantially those of the Supreme Court. The justices are chosen for six years, and are elected by the people. They appoint their own clerk. The justices are chosen every two years.

The Marine Court was originally a court purely for the hearing of cases of a marine nature, but by changes has come to be rather a court for the trial of all cases not involving a question of title to real estate in which the damages or claims are five hundred dollars and under. It is now a court of record, and has a seal and a clerk. It has three justices, one of whom is elected every two years.

The Court of General Sessions of the Peace is a court of criminal jurisdiction, coeval with the existence of the city. It has jurisdiction, coextensive with the Court of Oyer and Terminer, of all offences whatever. The judges are the Recorder and City Judge, who alternately hold trial terms. It has a clerk appointed by the two judges. Its prosecutions are conducted by the District Attorney.

The Surrogate's Court is held by a Surrogate, elected every three years for the county. This court has the usual probate jurisdiction. An appeal lies from its jurisdiction to the Supreme Court. Wherever there is a vacancy in the office, the duties (under special statute) are discharged by a justice of the Common Pleas.

5. Criminal Courts.

These are the Courts of Oyer and Terminer and the Court of Sessions. The Courts of Oyer and Terminer, in each county, except in the city and county of New York, are composed of a justice of the Supreme Court, who presides, the county judge, and the two justices of the peace chosen members of the Court of Sessions. The presiding justice and any two of the others form a quorum. In the city and county of New York they are held by a justice of the Supreme Court alone. These courts are all held at the same time and place at which the Circuit Courts are held. Courts of Sessions, except in the city of New York, are composed of the county judge and the two justices of the peace designated as members of the Court of Session, and are held at the same time and place as the County Courts.

NEW YORK ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS, AT SYRACUSE,—H. B. Wilbur, M.D., Superintendent.—This institution was established in 1851, first as an experimental school at Albany, and in 1855 removed to the asylum erected for it by the State at Syracuse. It is the largest asylum for idiots in this country, and with one exception the largest the world.

The number of instructors and officers is 9. The number of pupils in 1863 was 140. One died during the year, and 16 removed. The receipts of the year were $22,570.58, of which $18,000 was the State appropriation, $1,154.05 was received from the counties for clothing State pupils, and $3,416.53 was received from friends of pay-pupils for board and clothing. The expenditure for the same period was $20,861.13.

The average cost of supporting and educating each pupil was a little less than $150 per annum.

STATE LUNATIC ASYLUM AT UTICA.—This asylum was opened for the admission of patients the 16th of January, 1843. Dr. John P. Gray is the Superintendent. The number of patients at the commencement of the year (December 1, 1862), was 532; admitted during the year, 287,—165 males, 122 females; whole number treated during the year, 819,—444 males, 375 females. Discharged during the year, 305; remaining, Nov. 30, 1863, 514,—262 males, 252 females. Of those discharged, 106 were recovered, 51 were improved, 115 unimproved, 3 were not insane, and 30 died. Total admissions since asylum was opened, 6629. Discharged, 6115, of whom 2634 were recovered, 1023 improved, 1632 unimproved, and 774 died, and 52 were not insane. The form of mental disease of those admitted during the year was, mania 138, —70 males and 68 females; melancholia, 50,—26 males, 24 females; dementia, 50,—26 males, 24 females; general paresis, 7; not insane, 2. Of those admitted, 82 were housekeepers, 40 farmers, and 27 farm-laborers, 16 laborers, 30 employed in housework, 6 soldiers, 3 carpenters, 8 merchants, 3 lawyers, and 5 teachers; 197 were natives of New York, 27 of other of the United States; 63 were of foreign birth, among whom were 29 natives of Ireland, 10 of England, and 13 of Germany. The receipts for the year were $127,473.86, and the expenditures $99,949,81. The asylum is the property of the State. It is self-sustaining in its operations, only receiving from the State treasury the salaries of its officers. Its revenue is derived from the board of patients, of whom there are two classes, the public and private,—the former supported by the counties sending them, the latter at private charge. The accommodations, treatment, &c., are the same for both classes. The charges for board are regulated from time to time according to exigencies by the Board of Managers, who are appointed by the Legislature of the State. The asylum has a farm of about 200 acres, the products of which during the past year are estimated at upwards of $8000.

The American Journal of Insanity (Quarterly) is edited by the medical officers of the State Lunatic Asylum, and is now in the twentieth year of its existence. It was the first periodical devoted exclusively to the interests of psychological medicine ever published.

Other Asylums.—The State of New York possesses an asylum for insane convicts at Auburn. This has been in successful operation several years, and has about 80 patients. Further provision for the insane is made at the Bloomingdale Asylum, near New York, at the New York City Asylum, Blackwell's Island, and at the Flatbush Asylum.

A number of counties in the State have receptacles for the incurably insane poor: these are connected with the county-houses, and are under the control of the Superintendents of the Poor. Several private institutions for the insane exist in the State,—the most prominent of which are Brigham Hall, Canandaigua, and Sandford Hall, Flushing.

THE INSTITUTION FOR THE BLIND, AT NEW YORK,—Wm. B. Wait, Superintendent.—This institution, founded in 1831, is one of the largest of its class in the world.

The total number of pupils now in this institution is 151; of whom 144 are from this State and 7 from the State of New Jersey. Of the New York pupils, 73 are males and 71 females.

There are employed in this institution as teachers of all kinds, 20, of whom 7 are in the literary, 3 in the mechanical, and 10 in the musical departments, 13 of whom are blind graduates.

Twenty-one pupils have been received from this State, and 27 pupils have been discharged, during the past year.

The age of the oldest female pupil is 30 years, and of the youngest 8 years. The age of the oldest male pupil is 30, and of the youngest 10.

The Academic Department is divided into classes, which pursue the common English branches of education, together with the Natural Sciences, Algebra, and Geometry. The Musical Department is divided into vocal and instrumental. 91 pupils receive instruction in chorus singing, and in the cultivation of the voice. 85 pupils receive instruction on the organ and piano. A class in orchestral music will soon be established. In the Mechanical Department pupils are instructed in the manufacture of mats, brooms, and mattresses, which articles find a limited sale at generally unremunerative prices. This department is continued, however, as being a source of useful instruction in branches of industry which may afford the means of livelihood when the pupil shall have left the institution.

THE NEW YORK INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB, WASHINGTON HEIGHTS, N.Y. CITY,—H. P. Peet, LL.D., President; I. Lewis Peet, A.M., Vice-Principal.—This institution is the largest for the instruction of deaf-mutes only, in its accommodations and number of pupils, in the world. It was founded in 1817. Number of teachers, Dec. 1863, 16, of whom 8 are deaf-mutes. Number of pupils, Dec. 1863, 332 (193 males, 139 females). Left during the year, 57; admitted during the year, 70; whole number under instruction during the year, 389; remaining Dec. 1863, 332 (193 males, 139 females); number who graduated in 1863, 41; number in the High Class, 26. Whole number of graduates since the organization of the institution, about 1300. Of the pupils remaining in the institution (1863), 257 are supported by the State of New York, 31 by the counties of New York, 33 by their friends, and 11 by New Jersey. The time of admission is the first Wednesday of September; the terms, $150 for each pupil, clothing and travelling expenses excepted, to be paid semi-annually in advance, and satisfactory security for punctual payment of bills; and clothing which is desired is furnished by the institution at $30 per annum.

INSTITUTIONS FOR REFORM.—Of these the State of New York has two. The Society for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents has its institution on Randall's Island in the East River, and a capacity for receiving 750 boys and 250 girls in separate departments. It was incorporated March 29, 1824, and in 1851 purchased thirty-six acres, embracing the premises which it now occupies. It receives girls convicted of crime from every county of the State, and boys from the eastern and southern counties. On the 1st of January, 1863, there were 475 inmates; and during the year previous it received 290 boys and 116 girls. Of the older boys, 52 had enlisted in the army. It usually receives $24,000 from the State Treasury annually, and about $8000 from the city. In 1862, its income from labor of boys was $13,846.18, and from sources other than the above, $19,979.92. This establishment has recently been enlarged, and is now complete in all its parts and free of debt. Its affairs are managed by an incorporated society.

The Western House of Refuge is located at Rochester, and receives boys only from the central and western counties. It was authorized by Chap. 143, Laws of 1846; and its buildings are quite imposing, and well adapted for its use. It has a farm and garden attached, and shops in which various mechanical trades are taught. A library of over 9000 volumes, and an excellent school, are connected, and in successful order. There were on the 1st of January, 1863, 402 boys in the institution, of whom 179 were received during the previous year. Up to Dec. 1, 1863, 190 had been received and 147 discharged. Since its opening in 1849, 1320 boys had been discharged, and of these only 79, or 6 per cent., were returned. The expenses for the year ending Dec. 1, 1862, were $47,316.16. The average age of the boys was 12 years, 8 months, 7 days. Its affairs are managed by a Board of Trustees appointed by the Governor and Senate; and their trust has been discharged with much ability and success.

NEW YORK STATE PRISONS.—The detailed reports from these establishments having failed to come to hand, we can only give a general statement of the number of convicts in 1863, as compared with the corresponding statement for 1862. The results are as follow:—Whole number of convicts in confinement, September 30, 1863, 2081; whole number, September 30, 1862, 2410; decrease, 1863, 329.

IMMIGRANTS INTO THE PORT OF NEW YORK, 1863, TO DECEMBER 31.—During the past year there was a very large increase in immigration from foreign countries to the port of New York, the number arrived being 156,843 against 76,306 in 1862. This is the largest immigration, one year excepted, since 1855.

NEW YORK AND THE WAR.—Four days after the President's call of April 15, 1861, the 7th Regiment of New York Militia marched for Washington, followed on April 26 by the 6th, 12th, and 71st Regiments. Since that time to Jan. 1, 1863, the State furnished to the United States armies in all 223,444 men, of whom 16,922 were for three months, 830 for nine months, 30,131 for two years, 144,561 for three years, and 31,000 recruits for organizations in the field. They were organized into 190 regiments and 9 companies of infantry, 12 regiments and 2 companies of cavalry, 10 regiments and 24 batteries of artillery, and 1 regiment of engineers.

Since the tables of the cavalry, the artillery, and the engineer regiments to be found following, give their organization after Jan. 1, 1863, including new regiments and recruits sent on during 1863, we insert here a recapitulation of New York troops in the field, Jan. 1, 1863, taking the strength of the cavalry, the artillery, and the engineers from a minute analysis of the Adjutant-General's Report of Jan. 14, 1862, and Dec. 31, 1862:—

This recapitulation brings the account of New York State down to Jan. 1, 1863. In his message of Jan. 5, 1864, Governor Seymour furnishes a recapitulation of the recruiting operations in the State to Dec. 31, 1863. According to the figures there set forth, the contributions of men by New York since the commencement of the war to Jan. 1, 1864, may be stated as follows:—

These figures do not include the recent re-enlistments of veteran volunteers in the field, which Governor Seymour estimates at 10,000.

Enrolment and Draft of 1863.—No statement of the aggregate number enrolled under the conscription act of 1863 is given by the Governor in his message of 1864, but the results of the draft are given as follows:—

at Trenton, commencing respectively on the fourth Tuesday in February and the first Tuesdays in June and November. These Justices are appointed by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate, for seven years. One Justice of the Supreme Court is assigned to each of seven districts into which the State is divided. The Justices for the Districts hold Circuit Courts and Courts of Oyer and Terminer three times a year in each county; they are also ex officio Judges of the Courts of Common Pleas, Orphans' Courts, and courts of Quarter Sessions of the several counties; and the Justice of the Supreme Court holding the Circuit Court of any county is the presiding judge of said court. The Court of Errors and Appeals is composed of the Chancellor, the Justices of the Supreme Court, and the six judges last named in the table. These last are appointed by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate, for six years, one judge going out of office every year. The court thus constituted holds three terms every year for the hearing of appeals, &c. at Trenton, on the second Tuesday in March and the third Tuesdays of June and November. The last six named judges (with the Governor) exercise the pardoning power. A majority of the court may grant pardons and remit penalties, except in cases of impeachment; but the Governor must be one of that majority.

Bounties to Families of Volunteers.—The State has made liberal provision in this behalf. Of the enlisted men of the regiments in service, January, 1863, 12,143 left families or dependent widowed mothers, who received the bounty of $6 per month. The amount paid to such families in 1862 was $746,856. Besides the volunteers leaving families, there were 12,669 single men entitled to bounties of from $2 to $4 each per month. The amount paid to these was estimated at $380,070, —making an annual aggregate of such bounties of $1,126,926. This large sum was advanced by the counties and cities, to be ultimately reimbursed to them by the State.

Militia.—An enrolment made in preparation for the draft ordered in August, 1862, showed that the number of men liable to military duty then in the State was 71,697. There were at that time 47 companies of active militia in the State; but, owing to the large proportion of their members in the service of the United States, they could muster but 1704 men.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The Report of Adjutant-General R. F. Stockton, Jr., of December 31, 1862, is a pamphlet of 19 pages. He has issued, besides, a register of the commissioned officers, of 42 pages, and a list of all the volunteers from the State: this last made a volume of 1300 pages of manuscript.

The Governor, Auditor-General, and Surveyor-General are chosen by the people for terms of three years each. The general election is held annually on the second Tuesday of October. The present Governor was re-elected in October, 1863, and the Auditor-General and Surveyor-General were elected in October, 1862. The Secretary of State, Attorney-General, Adjutant-General, Quartermaster-General, Superintendent of Common Schools, and State Librarian, are appointed by the Governor. The State Treasurer is elected annually by the Legislature at its meeting in January. Senators, 33 in number, and Representatives, 100 in number, compose the Legislature, the style of which is The General Assembly of the State of Pennsylvania. The Representatives are elected annually, but the Senators are elected for three years, one-third of the number retiring each year. The members of either House are paid $700 each per annum, with an allowance of 15 cents per mile for necessary travel to and from the capital to attend the meeting of the Legislature. The Legislature meets annually on the first Tuesday of January. Every white male freeman of the age of 21 years, who has resided in the State one year and in his election district ten days prior to the election, and who has within two years paid a State or county tax, is entitled to the rights of an elector.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania is composed of a Chief-Justice and four Associates, elected by the people to serve for a term of fifteen years. The justice having the shortest term to serve is Chief-Justice. The jurisdiction of the Supreme Court extends over the State, and the judges thereof are by virtue of their offices justices of Oyer and Terminer in the several counties. Four terms of the court are required to be held annually,—viz.: at Philadelphia, commencing on the first Monday in January, at Harrisburg, commencing on the fourth Monday in April, at Sunbury, on the third Monday in October, and one at Pittsburg, commencing on the third Monday in October. Besides their salaries, the judges of the Supreme Court are allowed $3 per diem for the time necessarily employed in travelling and in the performance of their judicial duties.

These courts have jurisdiction within the two counties named in civil pleas and actions where the sum in controversy exceeds $100.

In addition to the Supreme Court and the two local District Courts above named, the judicial power of the Commonwealth is vested in a Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in a Court of Common Pleas, Orphans' Court, Register's Court, and a Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace for each county; in justices of the peace, and in such other courts as the Legislature shall from time to time establish. The State is divided into twenty-six judicial districts, for each of which, except the first, second, and fifth (Philadelphia, Lancaster, and Alleghany), one President Judge of the Common Pleas is elected by the people for a term of ten years. Philadelphia and Alleghany counties have each three Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, a President and two Associates; Lancaster has two, a President and one Associate. In every other county two associate judges (who are not required to be learned in the law) are elected for a term of five years, to sit with the president judge when holding court for the county for which such associates are elected. The Judges of the Common Pleas of any county compose the Court of Quarter Sessions and Orphans' Court of such county, and the Register of Wills, together with the Judges of Common Pleas, or any two of them, compose the Register's Court for each county.

PENNSYLVANIA INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB, PHILADELPHIA,—Abraham H. Hutton, Principal.

	Males.	Females.	Total.
At the close of 1861, the number of pupils under instruction was	111	95	206
On the 31st of January, 1863, the number stood	94	88	182
Decrease	17	7	24

Of those remaining in January, 1863, 144 were supported by the State of Pennsylvania, 20 by other States, 3 by the city of Philadelphia, and 15 by the friends of the Institution. The male pupils are occupied in workshops about three hours each day, in acquiring trades to provide for their future support. Five hours are passed each day in the school-rooms, and two in the study-rooms. The Board of Directors report that they are not aware of any case, either in our country or in Europe where the sense of hearing, having been lost, has been restored. Nothing has occurred to encourage them to hope that articulation can be taught to those born deaf, or that ideas can be conveyed to them from the motion of the lips.

PENNSYLVANIA INSTITUTION FOR INSTRUCTION OF THE BLIND, PHILA.,—Wm. Chapin, Principal.

Of those present in 1862, 155 were from Pennsylvania, 15 from New Jersey, and 10 from all other States. The revenue of the institution for 1862 was $61,427, including $24,750 appropriated by the State, and $11,184 from sales of merchandise manufactured by the blind inmates. The expenditures were $47,147.

The report of the Board of Managers contains the following observations of general interest:—

The literary studies may be summarily stated as follows:—orthography, reading, writing, pin-type, printing, dictionary, etymology, grammar, rhetoric, geography, with the globe and maps, physical geography, arithmetic, algebra, geometry, physiology, history, natural philosophy, natural history, astronomy, biblical and general literature, and physical training.

The great cost of printing for the blind, owing to the small editions required, the bulk of the volumes, and expense of paper and binding, render it beyond the power of a single institution to furnish the books required, or at a price within the reach of the blind. The States themselves might possibly be disposed to aid, by special appropriations, any well-devised plan for printing a series of text and reading books in a uniform letter.

No effort of the kind has ever been made. The institutions must first agree among themselves in favor of some common system. How long our institutions are to suffer under a privation so vital to their real efficiency, can only be solved by themselves. None outside can be expected to move in such a work.

"The Home" contains, at present, seventeen members, graduates of our own institution. It is a department of industry in which the inmates contribute largely to their own support. It cannot, however, be greatly extended without the aid of liberal gifts or legacies.

The number of blind persons in all the institutions for the blind in the United States, in 1861, including 82 in the workshops only, was 1,164.

Decrease of white boys, 25, of white girls, 15; increase of colored boys, 3, of colored girls, 5. The progress of the pupils was reported to be satisfactory; and the discipline of the institution as strictly parental, maintained rather by persuasion and rewards than by coercion and punishment. The average number of inmates during 1862 was 477. The revenue of the House for the year was $51,642, including $20,000 from the State and $22,000 from the city of Philadelphia. The labor of the boys produced $8270. The expenditures were $39,788 for maintenance, and $7229 for debts paid; total, $47,017.

STATE PENITENTIARY (EASTERN DISTRICT), PHILADELPHIA,—John Halloway, Warden.—Statistics from the Report of the Inspectors, March 13, 1863.

Statement showing the Number of Prisoners Received, Discharged, and Remaining at the end of the Year, from 1856 to 1862.

The number of commitments, it will be seen, is lower than in any year since 1855, the decrease from 1860 to 1862 being 124, or nearly 48 per cent.

Of the 369 prisoners remaining at the end of 1862, 56 were under conviction for the crimes of murder and manslaughter. Of these, 27 were natives of the United States (including 6 colored) and 29 were of foreign birth; 46 were serving out sentences for burglary, of whom 35 were natives (including 6 colored) and 11 were of foreign birth; 28 were imprisoned for arson, of whom 20 were natives (including 1 colored) and 6 were of foreign birth; 25 were convicted of rape, of whom 20 were natives (including 6 colored) and 5 were of foreign birth. Of the whole 369 remaining, 262 were natives of the United States (including 51 colored) and 107 were of foreign birth. The average number of persons supported for the year was 396, the average cost per day for the support of each prisoner (exclusive of salaries) was 17 16 cents. During the year, the prison punishment—viz.: incarceration in a dark cell on bread and water—was inflicted in 34 cases out of a total population of 586; this is about 1 in 18, which seems to be quite small among so many sent to prison for misconduct outside. The whole expenditure for support of the prisoners during the year was..... $24,815
The labor of prisoners produced..... 17,882

Excess of cost of support over products of labor..... $6,933
The other expenditures were—
For salaries..... 16,388
For wear and tear, &c..... 830
Net expenditure for the year..... $24,151

There were 6 deaths during the year, but little more than 1 per cent. of the population. Of the deaths, 4 were from pulmonary consumption, 1 from hæmorrhage of the lungs, and 1 from albumenaria. This penitentiary is conducted on the solitary or "Pennsylvania System." The report is enriched by copious tables illustrating the causes of crime, and the mental, moral, civil, and physical condition of the prisoners before and after imprisonment.

Inspectors.—Richard Vaux, President, Alexander Henry, Thomas H. Powers, Dr. Samuel Jones, Furman Sheppard, Treasurer.

By the foregoing it will be seen that the number of commitments in 1862 (90) is 23 less than in the year 1861, 64 less than in 1860, and less than in any other year for five years.

Deaths in the Penitentiary.—On the 1st of January, 1862, there were 288 prisoners in confinement; received throughout the year, 90; making in all 378, 7 of whom died, making the ratio of mortality for the year $1\frac{83}{100}$ths per cent., 1 death in 54.

PENNSYLVANIA AND THE WAR.—From the 19th of April, 1861, the day when the first 600 volunteers from Pennsylvania reached Washington, to the 1st of January, 1863, Pennsylvania had furnished to the armies of the Union 195,336 men. Of this number, 20,979 were for 3 months, 15,100 were for 9 months, and 159,257 for 3 years. Besides these, it is claimed, in the Adjutant-General's Report of Dec. 31, 1862, that 5000 citizens of Pennsylvania enlisted during that year in the organizations of other States. The volunteers embraced in the State organizations composed 153 regiments and 7 detached companies of infantry, 18 regiments and 10 detached companies of cavalry, and 3 regiments, 1 battalion, 3 batteries, and 10 detached companies of artillery. To these organizations there had been sent 9259 recruits down to Jan. 1, 1863. On the 11th of Sept., 1862, the militia of Pennsylvania were called out by the Governor to repel an invasion of the State by General Lee, and to co-operate with the National troops under Gen. McClellan in Maryland. 25 full regiments and 1 company of infantry, 11 companies of cavalry, and 4 batteries of artillery responded to this call, commanded as follows:—

Dougherty's light field battery, Harrisburg. The above comprise only the portion of the militia that were organized for service. The militia on their way to the capital of the State would have filled as many more regiments and companies. They were all discharged on the 24th of September.

Bounties to Volunteers.—No State bounty was paid, that being left to the counties and cities. More than a million of dollars were raised in Philadelphia, one-half of it by private contribution. No official reports have been made as to the action of the other cities and counties.

Relief to Families of Volunteers.—This was also left to local management. In Philadelphia the relief was voted by the City Councils, and sums ranging from $4 to $12 per month, according to numbers in the family, have been continually paid to such families as claim it. The city had expended for this purpose to January, 1864, $1,625,803. Large sums have been expended in the interior for the same purpose, but there are no accessible official returns of the approximate amounts.

Militia Enrolment.—Not reported for 1862.

Quotas.—Not given in the Adjutant-General's Report for 1862.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The Report of Adjutant-General Russell, dated Dec. 31, 1862, is a pamphlet of thirty-six pages. It contains a summary of the military operations of the State from April, 1861, down to date. The table annexed, compiled from the Report, gives some of the details we have presented for the other States, but it lacks the important features of the number of men in each organization, and the dates of muster.

MILITARY OPERATIONS OF PENNSYLVANIA IN 1863.—Repeated applications for information sent to the Adjutant-General of Pennsylvania failed to elicit any account of the military operations of the State in 1863. We are hence obliged to go to press without any official information of the troops or recruits raised in that great State in that eventful year. From Governor Curtin's Message of January, 1864, we extract the following reference to the measures adopted by the State and National authorities to repel Lee's invasion of June, 1863, by which it will appear that 36,528 men from the militia of Pennsylvania did effective service in the field on that occasion:—

"In May last it was believed, from information received, that General Lee intended to invade this State. Communications on the subject were immediately sent to Washington, urging that preparations for effective defence should not be delayed. Accordingly, the War Department erected two new military departments,—viz., the Department of the Monongahela, including that portion of the State lying west of the mountains, to be commanded by Major-General Brooks; and the Department of the Susquehanna, comprising the remainder of the State, and to be commanded by Major-General Couch.

"The rebels having actually entered the State in some force, and the approach of their whole army being imminent, the President made a requisition for militia from this and some of the neighboring States, and several regiments from New York and New Jersey were promptly sent, and our own volunteer militia began to assemble; but, some embarrassments arising, the President assented to a call by the Executive of the State, which was accordingly made. Under these calls, 5106 of the men of Pennsylvania were assembled in the department of General Brooks, and 31,422 in that of General Couch. To give the details, or even a summary, of the operations which ensued, would be impracticable within the limits of a message. It is due, however, to the men who came forward that I should say now that they made long and laborious marches in parts of this and other States which had been plundered by the rebels, suffered great privations, and were frequently in conflict with the enemy; and on all occasions acted in obedience to military discipline and orders, and with courage and endurance. Some of the militia called in 1862 and 1863 were killed, and others disabled."

Colored Troops from Pennsylvania.—From a report made by the supervisory committee for recruiting colored troops we compile the following:—

1st Pennsylvania (colored) Regiment (3d United States) was full July 24, 1863.

2d Pennsylvania (colored) Regiment (6th United States) was full September 13, 1863.

3d Pennsylvania (colored) Regiment (8th United States) was full December 4, 1863.

4th Pennsylvania (colored) Regiment (22d United States) was full January 4, 1864.

The 1st was in front of Fort Wagner at the surrender; the 2d left for Yorktown, October 14, 1863; the 3d left for Hilton Head, January 16, 1864; and the 4th and 5th remained in camp in Philadelphia, February, 1864.

GIRARD COLLEGE FOR ORPHANS, PHILADELPHIA,—Richard Somers Smith, President.—This college is endowed by the whole residuary income of the estate of Stephen Girard, left by his will in trust to the city of Philadelphia. The object of the college, as expressed in the will, is to provide to the white male orphans of Philadelphia, in the first place, and then to other places mentioned, a more comfortable maintenance and a better education than the public funds furnish. The college-buildings were completed on the 13th of November, 1847, at a cost of $1,933,821.78, and the establishment was formally dedicated to the purposes of the trust on the 1st of January, 1848. Since the opening to the 31st of December, 1862, 973 pupils were admitted. The following tabular statement will show the average number of pupils and the total cost of maintenance for each of the six years prior to 1863:—

Expense for each year.....	$88,173	$81,949	$85,672	$90,944	$81,547	$73,247

In the year 1852 the annual expenditure per pupil was $205.46; in the year 1853 it was $214.60; in 1857 it was $298.89; but in the year 1862 it was reduced to $123.12. The result of the system of economy thus introduced was an increase of the number of pupils in 1863 to 500. The whole number of persons under salaries in the college was, in December, 1862, eighty-seven, at an aggregate cost of $29,031. State Assets.—Delaware has a fund invested for State purposes, amounting to $71,750.

School Fund.—This fund consists of loans to, and stock in, several of the corporations of the State, amounting to $411,392. The income from this and the fees for various licenses are distributed annually to the three counties of the State for school purposes. The amount received and disbursed on this account in 1862 was $36,857.62. Other means are raised by the counties for the schools,—the amounts thus collected and disbursed in 1862, including the State funds, being as follow:—New Castle county, $97,931; Kent county, $40,767; Sussex county, $36,910.

COMMON SCHOOLS.

The school statistics furnished in the published reports of the State of Delaware are very meagre. Besides the amount and distribution of the school funds already given, the following are the only particulars contained in the Legislative reports of 1863 relating to the year 1862:—

Delaware and the War.

Under very adverse circumstances, the State of Delaware has contributed a considerable number of troops to the armies of the United States. The first regiment of three-months men was placed in the field in July, 1861; and since then, including the three-months men, the State has furnished, in all, 7300 men,—of whom 999 were for 3 months, 4401 for 3 years, and 1900 for 9 months. The 7300 men composing the above total were organised into 5 regiments of infantry, 1 squadron of cavalry, and 2 batteries of artillery. Other particulars will be found in the subjoined table.

Adjutant-General's Report.—No report has been published. The information contained in the table was courteously furnished in manuscript by Adjutant-General Harrington (now Secretary of State). Prior to his administration, there appears to have been no effort to keep records of the military operations of the State.

The judicial power of the State is vested in a Court of Appeals and in Circuit Courts. The Court of Appeals has appellate jurisdiction only. Its judges, four in number, are elected from districts, by the voters therein; and they hold their offices for ten years, unless they shall, before the expiration of their term of service, reach the age of seventy. They must be above thirty years of age, citizens of the State at least five years, residents of the judicial districts from which they are elected, and have been admitted to practice in the State. The Court of Appeals appoints its own clerk, to hold office for six years, and may reappoint him at the end of that time. When any judge of any court is interested in a case, or connected with any of the parties by affinity or consanguinity within the prescribed degrees, the Governor may commission the requisite number of persons learned in the law, for the trial and determination of the case. The Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, designates one of the four judges as Chief-Justice. Two terms of the Court of Appeals are held each year at Annapolis, commencing, respectively, on the first Monday of June and the first Monday of December.

The State is divided into eight judicial circuits, each of which elects a judge of the Circuit Court to hold office for ten years. The qualifications of the judges are the same as those of the Court of Appeals, except that they must be citizens of the United States, and residents for two years in their judicial districts. There is in the city of Baltimore a Court of Common Pleas, with jurisdiction in civil cases between $100 and $500, and exclusive jurisdiction in appeals from justices of the peace in that city; and a Superior Court, with jurisdiction in cases over $500. Each of these courts consists of one judge, elected by the people for ten years. There is also a Criminal Court, consisting of one judge elected for ten years. Clerks of the Circuit Courts in each county, and of the Baltimore courts, are chosen for six years, and are re-eligible.

For the subjoined statement, giving the designations of the Maryland regiments and organizations, the names of their officers, and the arms of the service to which they belong, we are indebted to the courtesy of Adjutant-General Brewer, who sent it in manuscript.

By the act of Congress admitting West Virginia into the Union, the new State embraces the following counties of the old State of Virginia,—viz.: Hancock, Brooke, Ohio, Marshall, Wetzel, Marion, Monongalia, Preston, Taylor, Tyler, Pleasants, Ritchie, Doddridge, Harrison, Wood, Jackson, Wirt, Roane, Calhoun, Gilmer, Barbour, Tucker, Lewis, Braxton, Upshur, Randolph, Mason, Putnam, Kanawha, Clay, Nicholas, Cabell, Wayne, Boone, Logan, Wyoming, Mercer, McDowell, Webster, Pocahontas, Fayette, Raleigh, Greenbrier, Monroe, Pendleton, Hardy, Hampshire, and Morgan. In addition to these, the Constitution of West Virginia makes provision for the admission of the following counties also,—Berkeley, Jefferson, and Frederick; and these counties, having, at an election held for the purpose, adopted the Constitution of West Virginia, only require some preliminary legislation to incorporate them with the new State. The boundaries between the new and the old State can be traced upon the map by referring to the above list of counties. The greater part of the territory lies between the main ridge of the Alleghanies and the Ohio River, covering an area of about 23,000 square miles, and embracing a population which numbered, in 1860, 334,921.

The EXECUTIVE power of the State is vested in a Governor, elected by the people, to hold office for two years. At the time of voting for Governor, an election is also to be held for a Secretary of State, a Treasurer, an Auditor, and an Attorney-General, to hold office for two years. The general election for State and County officers, and of members of the Legislature, is held on the fourth Thursday of October.

The LEGISLATIVE power of the State is vested in a Senate and House of Delegates,—the former consisting of twenty-two Senators, elected for two years, and the latter of fifty-seven Delegates, elected for one year. The Legislature is required to meet once a year, the regular sessions to begin on the third Tuesday of January. Sessions are limited to forty-five days, unless otherwise ordered by two-thirds of both houses. The pay of Senators and Delegates is $3 per day, and ten cents per mile of travel going and returning.

JUDICIARY.

The judicial power of the State is vested in a Supreme Court of Appeals, Circuit Courts, and certain inferior courts. The Supreme Court of Appeals consists of three judges, elected by the people, to hold office for twelve years, one to go out every fourth year. This court has original jurisdiction in cases of habeas corpus, mandamus, and prohibition; and appellate jurisdiction in civil cases where the matter in controversy, exclusive of costs, is of greater value or amount than two hundred dollars; in controversies concerning the title or boundaries of land, the probate of wills, the appointment or qualification of a personal representative, guardian, committee, or curator, or concerning a mill, road, way, ferry, or landing, or the right of a corporation or county to levy tolls or taxes; also in cases of habeas corpus, mandamus, and prohibition, and cases involving freedom or the constitutionality of law; also in criminal cases, where there has been a conviction for felony or misdemeanor in a Circuit Court; and such other appellate jurisdiction as may be prescribed by law. In addition to the foregoing jurisdiction and powers conferred by the Constitution, the Supreme Court of Appeals is invested by an act of the Legislature (passed July 20, 1863), with all the jurisdiction and powers, original and appellate, which, under the laws in force on the 19th June, 1863, could have been exercised by the Supreme Court of Appeals or the District Courts of Virginia respecting any suit or proceeding within the limits of West Virginia. The salary of the judges of this court is $2000 per annum. Two sessions of the Supreme Court of Appeals are required to be held every year at the seat of government (Wheeling), beginning on the second Thursday of January and the second Thursday of July, respectively. The officers of the court are appointed by the court.

The judges of these courts are elected by the people of the respective circuits. They hold office for six years. The judge must reside in his circuit. The Circuit Courts have jurisdiction and control of all proceedings before justices and other inferior tribunals by mandamus, prohibition, or certiorari. They have (except in cases confided to other tribunals) original and general jurisdiction of all matters at law where the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest, exceeds twenty dollars, and of all cases in equity, and of all crimes and misdemeanors. They have appellate jurisdiction in all cases, civil and criminal, where an appeal, writ of error, or supersedeas may be allowed from the judgment of an inferior tribunal. Other jurisdiction may be conferred by law. A Circuit Court must be held in every county four times a year.

The Constitution of the State provides for eleven circuits, which are constituted as follows:—

First Circuit.—Hancock, Brooke, Ohio, and Marshall counties.

Second Circuit.—Monongalia, Preston, Tucker, and Taylor counties.

Third Circuit.—Marion, Harrison, and Barbour counties.

Fourth Circuit.—Wetzel, Tyler, Pleasants, Ritchie, Doddridge, and Gilmer counties.

Fifth Circuit.—Randolph, Upshur, Lewis, Braxton, Webster, and Nicholas counties.

Sixth Circuit.—Wood, Wirt, Calhoun, Roane, Jackson, and Clay counties.

Seventh Circuit.—Kanawha, Putnam, Mason, and Fayette counties.

Eighth Circuit.—Cabell, Wayne, Boone, Logan, Wyoming, and Raleigh counties.

Ninth Circuit.—Pocahontas, Greenbrier, Monroe, Mercer, and McDowell counties.

Tenth Circuit.—Pendleton, Hampshire, Hardy, and Morgan counties.

Finances.

Having been organized but a few months, the State of West Virginia has but a brief and very general financial history. The report of the Auditor of Public Accounts of Virginia for the year ending September 30, 1860, shows that the forty-eight counties composing the new State paid into the treasury for that year over $600,000. As the revenue of the entire State of Virginia in 1850 was but $532,661, the new State takes very respectable rank, at once, in the matter of resources. At the last session of the General Assembly of Virginia (loyal) prior to the organization of West Virginia, all property owned by, and all moneys due, that State, within the boundaries of the new State, including the taxes of 1863, were transferred to the latter; and the specific sum of $150,000, and all moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, were set apart for the benefit of West Virginia on her admission to the Union. Thus the new State commences her career with $150,000 in the treasury, and with assets embracing a large amount of uncollected taxes, including the taxes of 1863. The Constitution provides that the new State shall assume an equitable proportion of the debt of Virginia as it stood prior to January 1, 1861; but no other debt can be contracted except to meet deficits in the revenue, to redeem a previous liability of the State, or for State defence.

An act making appropriations, passed by the Legislature of West Virginia August 5, 1863, contained the following:—

For expenses of Constitutional Convention, and of elections held by its authority.....	$2,028 48
For civil and contingent fund.....	5,000 00
For salaries of officers of civil governm't	4,000 00

For expenses of the judiciary	$5,000 00
For contingent expenses of the courts	2,000 00
For clerks in executive offices	2,000 00
For expenses of lunatics	3,000 00
For expenses of convicts	2,000 00
For salary of Adjutant-General	600 00
For janitor in executive office	150 00
For expenses of criminal trials	3,000 00
For expenses of inaugural celebration	301 64
For election expenses in Harrison co	73 00
For commissioners of the revenue	3,000 00
In addition to the above, an act passed July 28, 1863, appropriated:—
For the expenses of the Legislature	10,000 00
And one of July 2, 1863, appropriated:

SOIL, MINERAL, CLIMATE, &c.—On these subjects Governor Boreman, in his inaugural address, touched, briefly, in these words:—"Here are all the elements necessary to make a great and prosperous State. The salubrity of the climate is unsurpassed; the fertility of the soil is equal to that of almost any State in the Union. Iron, coal, salt, petroleum, and other minerals, are found in abundance; the unimproved portions abound in timber of the finest quality; and there is water-power sufficient to turn machinery to manufacture for the nation."

EDUCATION.—No recent reports have been made showing the condition of the educational institutions embraced in the counties which form the new State. Virginia had no system of public schools such as prevails in the free States. She provided means for the tuition of the children of the indigent only; and many of these, rather than undergo the humiliation which attaches to such an invidious distinction, stayed away, and received no school-education at all. A remedy for so great an evil is provided in the Constitution of the new State. The Legislature is required to establish a thorough and efficient system of free schools; a considerable portion of the income of the State is set apart for a school fund; general taxation for their support on persons and property is authorized; township taxation is required; and a general superintendent, with county superintendents, are to be elected by the people. The Legislature is also commanded to foster and encourage moral, intellectual, scientific, and agricultural improvement; to make suitable provision for the blind, mute, and insane, and for the organization of such institutions of learning as the best interests of general education in the State may demand.

THE GREAT SEAL OF WEST VIRGINIA.

The disk of the great seal is two and a half inches in diameter. The obverse bears the legend, "State of West Virginia" (the constitutional designation of the State), which, with the motto, "Montani semper liberi" (in English, "Mountaineers always free"), is inserted in the circumference. In the centre is a rock, with ivy, emblematic of stability and continuance; and on the face of the rock the inscription, "June 20, 1863" (the date of foundation), as if "graved with a pen of iron in the rock forever." On the right of the rock, a farmer clothed in the traditional hunting-shirt peculiar to this region; his right arm resting on the plough-handles, and his left supporting a woodman's axe,—indicating that while the territory is partially cultivated it is still in process of being cleared of the original forest. At his right, a sheaf of wheat and a cornstalk. On the left of the rock, a miner, indicated by a pickaxe on his shoulder, with barrels and lumps of mineral at his feet; on his left an anvil, partly seen, on which rests a sledge-hammer, typical of mechanic arts,—the whole indicating the principal pursuits and resources of the State. In front of the rock and figures, as if just laid down by the latter and ready to be resumed at a moment's notice, two hunters' rifles, crossed and surmounted at the place of contact by the Phrygian cap, or cap of liberty,—indicating that the freedom and independence of the State were won and will be maintained by arms.

The above is also the legend, motto, and device of the less seal, the disk of which has a diameter of an inch and a half.

XIII. VIRGINIA.

Settled in 1607. Former capital, Richmond. Present capital, Alexandria. Population, 1860 (exclusive of West Virginia), 1,261,397. Area (exclusive of West Virginia), 38,352 square miles.

Since April, 1861, a large portion of this State has been under the control of insurgents against the Government of the United States, the insurgents being aided by the State authorities in office at that time. There is, consequently, but little accessible information of the character usually recorded in these pages. The people of that portion of the State which maintained its relations with the national Government assembled in convention, at Wheeling, on the 11th of June, 1861, and organized a new State Government, which continued until the organization of the State of West Virginia, after which it was reorganized for the present State of Virginia. Within the territory under the actual control of this government a new State was erected, called "West Virginia," which was admitted into the Union by that name on the 20th of June, 1863. [See title West Virginia, ante.] The remaining counties adhering to the loyal State organization have their capital at Alexandria. The Government is as follows:—

In the disloyal counties, John Letcher, who was elected Governor in 1859, continued to be recognized to the close of his term, January, 1864. In the same counties an election was held in May, 1863, when WILLIAM SMITH, of Warrenton, formerly Governor and Representative in Congress, was returned as Governor. On the 8th of October, 1863, JOHN S. CALVERT, signing himself Treasurer of the State of Virginia, published the following statement of the receipts and expenditures through his office:—

North Carolina has been in a state of insurrection against the United States since the 21st of May, 1861, when a so-called act of secession is alleged to have been passed. The local authorities being in collusion with the insurgents, and the greater part of the State being under their control, there is no reliable information concerning the affairs of the State within reach, nor is there any State government in North Carolina now recognized by the United States. [In a state of insurrection since January 25, 1861, when the so-called ordinance of secession was passed by the Louisiana Convention; and there is no State government recognized by the United States. On the 25th of April, 1862, Flag-officer Farragut, having destroyed the fleet of the insurgents in the Lower Mississippi, and having run by Forts Jackson and St. Philip, appeared before the city of New Orleans with a portion of his fleet. After negotiations continued over the two following days, the city was surrendered to him on the 28th. From that day the authority of the United States has been in progress of restoration over Louisiana, until now the greater part of the State is again under the Union flag. General GEORGE F. SHEPLEY is Military Governor, with his head-quarters at New Orleans. Efforts are being made to re-establish the State government, and candidates are nominated to be voted for at an election to be held early in 1864. A convention to alter the State Constitution is also to be chosen. The Government as established by the military authorities of the United States, and which remains until the new civil government shall have been chosen, is as follows:—

James Lindsley..... Aid to Governor.
Edward H. East..... Secretary of State.
Joseph S. Fowler..... Comptroller of the Treasury.
Alvan C. Gillem..... Adjutant-General.

Tennessee from May, 1861, to September, 1863, occupied a very anomalous position. On the 9th of February the people of the State were called upon to vote upon the question of "Convention" or "No Convention,"—this being a preliminary to secession. The result was as follows: for a "Convention," 57,798; "No Convention," 69,675. There was also an election held for delegates to the Convention—"if ordered." At this election the disunion delegates had an aggregate vote of 24,749, and the Union delegates had an aggregate vote of 88,803. Notwithstanding these strong expressions of the will of the people, the Governor of the State called an extra session of the Legislature, at which an ordinance of "separation" was passed on the 6th of May, 1861. A form of election was held on this question of "separation," on the 8th of June, but Tennessee by that time was in the chaos of insurrection, the disunionists having occupied the State with camps of armed men, so that a free expression was not possible, and the alleged result in favor of disunion was never verified. From this time until February, 1862, the State was entirely dominated by the disunionists. Isham G. Harris was elected Governor for two years,—until October, 1863,—and Representatives were sent to the Confederate Congress at Richmond. On the 23d of February, 1862, the Union forces under General Nelson entered Nashville, and on the following 4th of March, Andrew Johnson was commissioned Military Governor. Under his authority the officers above named constituted the government of the State, and exercised the powers of government over the greater parts of Middle and West Tennessee, while the administration of Harris exercised similar powers over East Tennessee. Thus there were two governments, each partially in power, down to September, 1863, when the advance of the Union forces, under General Rosecrans, to Chattanooga, and under General Burnside to Knoxville, entirely expelled the insurgent government.

Since the spring of 1861, the regular operations of civil government having been greatly interrupted, or wholly suspended, in Tennessee, there are no reliable statistics relating to her finances, her banks, her railroads, her agriculture, her educational institutions, or any of the interests to which the attention of this work is usually directed.

Judiciary.—John Catron, Justice of the Supreme Court U. S. C. F. Trigg, Judge of the District Court U. S. Horace Maynard, Attorney-General and Reporter for Tennessee. Horace Harrison, United States Attorney, Middle District. E. E. Glasscock, United States Marshal, Middle District.

[What is here said of the Judiciary of Tennessee relates to the condition of affairs in November, 1863.]

The Circuit Court of the United States, held by Judge Catron, and the District Court, held by Judge Trigg, hold their sessions at Nashville on the third Mondays of April and October. No Federal court had been held in East or West Tennessee since 1861.

Supreme Court of Tennessee.—Three Judges—one from each grand division—compose this court, viz.: —Hon. Robert J. McKinney, East Tennessee; Hon. Wm. F. Cooper, Middle Tennessee; Hon. Archibald Wright, West Tennessee. It is not in operation. There has been no session of the Supreme Court since 1861. Terms by law,—at Nashville, for Middle Tennessee, December; at Jackson, for West Tennessee, April; at Knoxville, for East Tennessee, September.

Chancery Court of Tennessee.—The State is divided into six Chancery districts; but no one of the courts is in operation.

Circuit Courts of Tennessee.—There are sixteen judicial districts, nine in operation.

* The salary of a Circuit Judge is $1800 per annum, and an Attorney is paid $500 besides his fees.

In Kentucky, all judges are justices of the peace, and the principal court officers are elected by the people. The judges of the Court of Appeals are elected by districts for a term of eight years, one every second year, and the judge having the shortest term to serve is Chief-Justice. The Circuit Court Judges are elected by districts for six years, and justices of the peace for four years.

The Court of Appeals is the Supreme Court of the State, and has appellate jurisdiction over the final orders and judgments of all other courts of the State in civil cases, except where the amount in controversy is less than fifty dollars, or in cases of judgment granting divorce, or on a judgment of an inferior court from which an appeal is given to the Quarterly or Circuit Court. It holds two terms annually, commencing on the first Mondays in June and December, continuing each term about seventy-five days.

The Circuit Courts have original jurisdiction of all actions and proceedings for the enforcement of civil rights or redress of civil wrongs, except where exclusive jurisdiction is given to other courts, where the amount in controversy is $50 and upwards; also appellate jurisdiction of the judgments and final orders of Quarterly and Justices' Courts, where the matter in controversy is of the value of twenty dollars or more, and of judgments and final orders of the County Courts in all probate business and other matters of local concern to the county, such as roads, passways, &c. There are also Quarterly Courts, which have jurisdiction of actions to recover money or personal property not exceeding $100 in value; and appellate jurisdiction from justices' courts where the matter in controversy is $5 and over.

The County Courts have jurisdiction of the probate of wills, &c., guardians, settlements with fiduciaries, bastardy, division of lands and slaves, allotment of dower, and of ferries and mills. Justices' Courts have exclusive jurisdiction of actions for money or personal property not exceeding $50. The County Judge who holds the Quarterly Court is an ex-officio Justice, and hence his jurisdiction in cases not exceeding $50 is concurrent.

Pleadings, &c.—In the Circuit Court, and in the Quarterly Court in cases of $50 and upwards, the pleadings are written, and, except in certain cases where action or defence is founded upon a writing, or for divorce, or damages, the pleadings must be sworn to. In such cases the process must be served ten days before court. In Quarterly and Justices' Courts where the amount is less than $50, the pleadings may be oral, and process may be served but five days before court.

Criminal Jurisdiction.—The Court of Appeals has appellate jurisdiction, on questions of law, in prosecutions for felonies, and in penal actions and prosecutions, where the fine is $50, or over that amount. The Circuit Courts have general jurisdiction for the trial of all offences which may be prosecuted by indictment, and all prosecutions and penal actions, except where exclusive jurisdiction is given to other courts. The city and police courts have jurisdiction within corporate limits incident to such courts, concurrent with other courts, where the punishment of a free person is a fine not exceeding $100, or of a slave not exceeding thirty-nine stripes. The Justices' and Quarterly Courts have exclusive jurisdiction where the punishment of a free person does not exceed $10, or of a slave twenty stripes, and concurrent jurisdiction with Circuit Courts where the punishment of a free person is a fine not exceeding $100, or of a slave, not exceeding thirty-nine lashes. City courts of Lexington and Louisville have the larger jurisdiction suitable to the wants of cities.

Governor Bramlette, in his message of December 7, 1863, speaks of the financial prosperity of Kentucky in strong terms. COMMON SCHOOLS.

Statistics from the Report of the Superintendent, R. Richardson, dated December 31, 1862.

Of the one hundred and ten counties in Kentucky, one hundred and eight officially reported to the Superintendent for the school year ending December 31, 1862.

The whole number of children living in districts in which common schools were duly taught three months and over, in conformity to the general law, for the year, was 158,989. This number embraces the children living in a few districts in which schools were taught for a period less than three months during the year 1862,—such schools having been broken up or discontinued in consequence of the invasion of the State. The highest number of children actually attending the district schools was 82,718. The lowest number at school was 27,992. The average number of children in attendance on the common schools throughout the State, during the year, was 43,654.

The whole number of districts in which schools were taught (each city and town being considered one district) was 2225.

The whole number of children of the school age in the State, as reported to the Auditor, was 249,122.

The number of children in the districts where schools were open, and the number attending during the seven years preceding 1863, are presented in the following exhibit:—

Average attending school	92,367	88,931	97,001	98,925	107,219	61,375	43,654

Amount and Condition of the School Fund.—The present resources of the Common School Fund (Jan. 1, 1863) consist in the interest and dividends due semi-annually on the amount of State bonds ($1,381,832.03, mostly bearing interest at the rate of five per cent.), and bank stock ($73,500), held by the Board of Education; in the amounts realized annually from a tax on the capital stock and surplus of the Farmers' Bank, Southern Bank of Kentucky, Commercial Bank, and Bank of Ashland; and in a tax of five cents on the one hundred dollars' worth of taxable property in this Commonwealth, or one-sixth of the net revenue annually collected. A small amount also has been realized to the Educational Fund under the provisions of the act imposing penalties for betting on elections, and of the act by which all forfeitures to the Commonwealth in actions for the recovery of money lost at gaming are to be appropriated for the use and benefit of the Common School Fund. The amount per scholar, counting the whole number reported, allotted out of the treasury March 1, 1863, on account of schools taught during the year 1862, was one dollar and five cents, a larger amount than has been disbursed since March 1, 1860. The whole amount of funds in the treasury to the credit of common schools on the 1st of March, 1863, was $341,528.30; and, financially, the school system was then in better condition than at any previous time since the beginning of the rebellion.

WESTERN LUNATIC ASYLUM OF KENTUCKY, HOPKINSVILLE,—Dr. James Rodman, Superintendent.—From a letter dated at this institution, December 1, 1863, we take the following:—

"Our last Report shows 135 inmates (72 males, 63 females). Our percentum of recoveries for several years past is about 38 upon all admissions. Our Asylum is supported by the State, not relying upon private sources for any part of its support, although we occasionally receive pay-patients. Our Asylum-building was burnt November 30, 1861. It is being rebuilt, and will be occupied by December 15. It has accommodations for 325 patients."

KENTUCKY AND THE WAR.—Governor Bramlette's Message to the Legislature of Kentucky, sent in to that body on the 7th of December, 1863, furnishes the following figures relating to the Kentucky volunteers. Whole number of men sent to the field for three years, 37,444; for one year, 11,911; for nine months, 413; for sixty days, 1770,—total, 51,538. Of these, the troops furnished prior to January 1, 1863, as set forth in detail in the subjoined table, were organized into 35 regiments and 2 battalions of infantry, 14 regiments of cavalry, and 2 companies of artillery. The organization of those placed in the field in 1863 had not been made public when this table was prepared (December 12, 1863).

The Judges of the Supreme Court are chosen by the people, and they hold their offices for five years, one judge retiring each year, unless re-elected. The judge having the oldest commission is Chief-Justice. Although the names of six judges are in the foregoing list, the Supreme Court consists of but five Judges; the sixth in the list being the new Justice, who goes on the bench after Chief-Justice Peck retires. This court has original jurisdiction in quo warranto, mandamus, habeas corpus, and procedendo, and appellate jurisdiction in all other matters. It holds at least one term at Columbus every year, commencing on the ———. For the despatch of the business of the Supreme Court, the State is divided into five circuits, each comprising two of the Common Pleas districts, in each of which the Court holds sessions, presided over by one of the Judges of the Supreme Court, according to assignment.

* Resigned. Hon. Joshua R. Swan appointed, Dec. 1863.

Courts of Common Pleas.

The State is divided into ten Common Pleas districts, subdivided into three sections, from each of which one judge is chosen by the electors of the section for five years, who must reside in his district while in office. In the second, fourth, fifth, seventh, and ninth districts, additional judges are chosen in one or more of the sections, to aid in holding courts, and in the sixth and eighth districts an additional judge is chosen for the whole district. The whole number of these Common Pleas Judges in 1862 was forty-two. Their salary is $1500 each. Their term of office commences on the second Tuesday of February after their election. Courts of Common Pleas are held by one or more of the judges in every county, and more than one court may be held at the same time in each district. District Courts, composed of the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas of the respective districts, and of one of the judges of the Supreme Court, any three of whom form a quorum, are held in each county at least once in each year. The District Courts have the same original jurisdiction with the Supreme Court, and appellate jurisdiction. There is a Probate Court, with the usual probate jurisdiction, in each county, open at all times, holden by one judge, who is chosen by the voters of each county for three years. Justices of the Peace are elected in each township, for three years. Clerks of the Common Pleas are chosen in each county, by the people, for three years. There is in Cincinnati a Superior Court, presided over by three judges, elected for three years. There are also Superior Courts, with a single judge, in Montgomery and Franklin counties.

OHIO REFORM SCHOOL, near LANCASTER, Fairfield county, Acting Commissioner George E. Howe.—It is no misuse of terms to style this school a peculiar institution. Its design is to reform and educate juvenile offenders. The school is organized on a plan similar to that of the French Agricultural Colony at Mettray. The inmates are divided into four families, each under the care of a head, called the "Elder Brother." A large farm (1170 acres) is attached to the school. On this the boys labor during several hours each day, five hours being devoted to the school-room. The restraint imposed upon the boys is of the mildest type. There are no walls about the establishment to prevent escape; and yet very few escapes are attempted. The school had been five years in operation in January, 1863, and was regarded as a complete success.

The number of boys in the school, Nov. 1, 1861, was	178
Received to Nov. 1, 1862	66
Remaining, Nov. 1, 1862	185

There is ample evidence in the Report of the Commissioner that the discipline of the school wins the affections of the boys, and accomplishes effectual reform.

OHIO INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE BLIND, COLUMBUS,—A. D. Lord, Superintendent.—From 1838, when this institution was founded, to Dec. 1862, 432 persons were under its training, of whom 25 were admitted in 1862. The expenditures for the latter year were $15,294.

OHIO INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB, COLUMBUS,—Collins Stone, Superintendent.—The whole number of pupils on the 4th of November, 1862, was 150,—males, 88, females, 62. The receipts and expenditures for the year were as follow:—Receipts, $20,007; expenditures, $19,277.

OHIO STATE ASYLUM FOR IDIOTIC AND IMBECILE YOUTH, COLUMBUS,—Dr. G. A. Doren, Superintendent.—Fifty-seven children were under treatment in the year ended Nov. 1862. In many cases aimless and involuntary movements had been replaced by those in response to the will; and some had so far progressed as to be capable of productive labor in the garden, shop, and sewing-room. 28 of these children had been taught to read and write, of whom but 2 knew any thing of words as expressed by letters, when admitted, and 5 could not even talk. All have improved. The receipts and expenditures for the year 1862 were as follow:—Receipts, $3684; expenditures, $3434.

OHIO PENITENTIARY, COLUMBUS, — Nathaniel Merion, Warden.—Statistics for the year ended Nov. 1, 1862. The number of prisoners remaining on the 1st of November, 1861, was 924, of whom 908 were males, and 16 were females. The number remaining on the 1st of November, 1862, was 768, of whom 18 were females. Decrease in 1862, 156. The number of prisoners committed to the Penitentiary in 1861 was 355; the number committed in 1862 was 237. Decrease in 1862, 118. An inspection of the following table will show that the commitments in 1862 were less in number than in any year since 1856.

Note.—The three-months men from Ohio, of April, 1861, were organized into 22 regiments of infantry, 2 batteries of artillery, and 2 companies of cavalry. Of the infantry regiments, 13 were organized under the President's call for 75,000 men; and 2 of these were sent immediately to Washington, and the other 9 went to Camp Dennison. At the same time the State authorities organized 9 other regiments for State defence,—also for three months; and these were subsequently sent to West Virginia, where they did good service. These make up the 22 regiments of three-months men set down at the foot of the table as containing 22,000 men. No other figures are given concerning them, in the Reports of the Adjutant-General; nor do those Reports preserve the personnel of their organization. After the 13 regiments of three-months men, who went to the field, had returned, they, and the 9 regiments still remaining at Camp Dennison, were reorganized for the three-years service, retaining their original numbers, from 1st to 22d, as they appear in the foregoing table. As far as the original commanding officers of the three-months men can be traced in reports, they were the same as already given for the three-years service, with the following exceptions:—The 1st was reorganized by Colonel B. F. Smith, vice Colonel A. D. McCook; the 15th was reorganized by Colonel Dickey, vice Colonel —— ——; the 16th was reorganized by Colonel J. F. DeCourcey, vice Colonel —— ——; and the 20th was reorganized by Colonel Charles Whittlesey, vice Colonel —— ——.

Enrolment of Militia and the Draft of 1862.—Under the requisition of July, 1862, for 300,000 militia, an enrolment of the Ohio militia was made by the township assessors. Their returns show an aggregate of 425,147 enrolled as liable to military duty at that time. Between the enrolment and the day finally fixed for the draft, so many volunteers had come forward for three years that the number ultimately drafted was but 12,251. Of these, a large number volunteered by themselves or by substitutes for three years, and 4617 were discharged for disability, &c., so that the actual number of drafted men sent to the field to the close of 1862 was but 1796.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The Report of Adjutant-General Charles W. Hill, dated Dec. 31, 1862, is an octavo pamphlet of 139 pages, with interesting details of the progress of military operations in Ohio during the year 1862. Owing, however, to the duplication of regiments bearing the same number in the line, it is difficult sometimes to identify which of two with the same number is the one to which particular officers belong.

* While presiding over the Senate.

The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Auditor-General, Treasurer, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Commissioner of the Land Office, Attorney-General, and member of the Board of Education are chosen by the people every two years, at a general election held on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November. In the month of April, every second year, two Regents of the University are chosen by the people for a term of eight years. The Board of Regents consists of eight members, who were all chosen in 1863: two of these, however, retire every second year, as stated in the foregoing table. Senators, 32 in number, and Representatives, not exceeding 100 in number, constitute the Legislature of Michigan. They are chosen by the people every second year, at the general election in November. The present House of Representatives has 100 members. The Legislature is required to assemble, in regular session, on the first Wednesday in January biennially, in the odd years, 1863, '65, &c. To qualify a resident to vote, he must be above the age of twenty-one, must have resided in the State three months, and in his election district ten days. Subject to these qualifications, every white male citizen, and every white male inhabitant of the State on the 24th of June, 1835, and every white male inhabitant of the State on the 1st of January, 1850, who shall have legally declared his intention to become a citizen six months before an election, or who shall have resided in the State two years and six months, having declared his intentions, &c., and every civilized male Indian not a member of any tribe, is entitled to vote.

The judicial power of Michigan is vested in one Supreme Court, in Circuit Courts, Probate Courts, and in Justices of the Peace. Municipal Courts for civil and criminal jurisdiction may be established by the Legislature in cities. The Supreme Court has a general superintending control over all inferior courts. It has power to issue writs of error, habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, procedendo, and other original and remedial writs, and to hear and determine the same. In all other cases it has appellate jurisdiction only. Four terms of the court must be held annually. The times and places for holding these terms, as now arranged, are—one at Lansing on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in January; another at the same place on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in July; one at Detroit on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in April; and another at the same place on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in October. The court consists of four judges, chosen by the people at an election held for the purpose on the first Monday in April. The Judges of the Supreme Court hold their offices for eight years, one judge retiring every second year unless re-elected. The court must be in session each term long enough to hear all the cases ready for argument, and must determine all cases either at the term they are argued or early in the following term. The clerk of the county holding the court is clerk of the Supreme Court. Judges of the Circuit Court are chosen by the people of their respective districts, at the elections held in April, to hold office for six years. Prosecuting officers are elected by the people of each county, to hold office for two years. By the act of Feb. 12, 1859, grand juries are not to attend any court unless the judge thereof shall so direct in writing, filed with the clerk of the court. Criminal proceedings are to be conducted by informations in lieu of indictments,—the information to be verified by the oath of the prosecuting officer, complainant, or some other person, and the same rules to govern in the setting forth of offences as in indictment. The prosecuting attorney must subscribe his name thereto, and must endorse thereon the names of the witnesses known to him at the time of the filing of the information in court. The proceedings in holding to bail are the same as in indictments. No information can be found against any person for any offence unless such person shall have had, or waived, a preliminary examination therefor. The Circuit Courts have original jurisdiction in all matters, civil and criminal, not prohibited by law, and appellate jurisdiction from all inferior courts and tribunals. They have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, injunction, quo warranto, certiorari, and other writs necessary to carry into effect their judgments, &c., and to give them general control over inferior tribunals within their jurisdiction.

Of this there was expended during the year, on all accounts, $176,247.15. The total expenditures on account of the war from its commencement to Nov. 30, 1862, were $696,403.80, of which the State had been repaid by the United States $92,000, and had received credit on account of direct tax, $426,498.84; in all, $518,498.84.

State Debt.—The total interest-bearing debt of the State, including part-paid bonds at legal rate of adjustment, and canal bonds guaranteed by the State, stood, on the 1st day of January, 1863, after paying war loan bonds advertised for, thus:—temporary loan, $50,000; renewal loan, $216,000; war loan (without further sale), $567,200; two-million loan, $2,000,000; canal loan, guaranteed, $100,000; outstanding internal improvement warrants, $3,553.75; total, $2,936,753.75.

Under existing provisions of law, this debt is subject to rapid reduction through the appropriate sinking funds; or, in case the bonds cannot be purchased, the sinking funds are subject to rapid accumulation. During the year, the State debt was increased by the amount of war bonds sold $158,200, and reduced by the payment of penitentiary bonds $13,000, and internal improvement warrant bonds $50, taking up the last of these two classes of bonds.

STATE NORMAL SCHOOL, YPSILANTI,—A. S. Welch, Principal.—The State Board of Education report this institution as still (1862) pursuing a course of unabated usefulness. The number of students during the year was 407 in the Normal Department and 86 in the Model School. It was opened in April, 1853, and had sent out, to the above date, 110 graduates, many of whom were employed as teachers in the graded schools. During the six years prior to 1863, it had furnished to the primary schools of the State more than 100 teachers annually. Applicants for admission to the Normal School must be, if males, 18 years of age, if females, 16 years of age; and they must pledge themselves to engage, after graduation, in teaching in the public schools of the State. The tuition fee for the summer term is $2, and for the winter term $3. For the year 1862 the expenditures were $10,913.84, and the receipts were $11,684.86, of which $10,000 were from the State and $1555 from tuition fees.

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN, ANN ARBOR.—The University of the State of Michigan owes its origin to a grant of lands by Congress to the Territory of Michigan. As early as 1804, an entire township was thus reserved for the endowment of such an institution. In the year 1826, a new act was passed increasing the grant to 72 sections, or two entire townships. These lands were carefully selected, and from their sale has arisen the magnificent fund, amounting, in 1862, to $525,000, from which the University is mainly supported. Various ordinances of the old Territory of Michigan were passed with a view to establishing the University, but it was not until 1837, after the State was admitted into the Union, that it was finally established. A Medical Department was added in 1850, and a Law School in 1859. The University has had a chequered fortune, but is now in the highest degree prosperous and useful. It has faculties of arts and sciences, of medicine and law, and also of the higher sciences and the fine arts. No one of the State universities has so large an endowment or so complete an organization as this. The instruction is free,—a matriculation fee of $10 only being required upon entering the university, but no further payment being asked, however extended the course of study pursued by the student. The astronomical observatory attached to the university has already attained reputation by the important researches and discoveries there made. The condition of the University in 1862 was reported as follows:—

Number of Students.—Department of Literature, Science, and Art, 270; Medical Department, 216; Law Department, 129: total, 615.

Number of Graduates.—Bachelors of Law, 44; Doctors of Medicine, 39; Masters of Arts, 16; Masters of Science, 5; Bachelors of Arts, 37; Bachelors of Science, 11; Civil Engineers, 1: total, 153.

Number of Professors and Instructors.—Department of Literature, Science, and Art, 17; Medical Department, 5; Law Department, 3: total, 25. The receipts for the year were $47,429; the expenditures for the year were $39,778.

Trust Funds for Public Education.—The several funds held by the State on this account were reported by the Treasurer, in 1862, as follows:—Primary School Fund (Common Schools), $753,802; University Fund, $185,888; Normal School Fund, $22,453; total, $962,143. The University has, besides the above, an endowment amounting, in 1862, to $525,000.

STATE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, LANSING,—T. C. Abbott, President.—The Michigan State Agricultural College is a State institution, located near Lansing. The Legislature has made over to it the grant of Congress to the State for the support of agricultural colleges. The appropriation for 1863–4 was $18,000. It has a farm of over 700 acres, a noble laboratory, library, museum, &c. All students labor three hours daily. It has (Nov. 4, 1863) 7 teachers and about 80 pupils, and has been in successful operation since the spring of 1857, never having been suspended, as was erroneously reported. Its course of study is four years, with an additional year as preparatory. It has graduated two classes.

STATE REFORM SCHOOL, LANSING,—C. B. Robinson, Superintendent.—This correctional institution was opened in 1856, since which the whole number of children received to November, 1862, is 334. There were in the school, November, 1861, 145 boys,—viz.: white boys, 131; colored boys, 14. And there were received during the year ending November 16, 1862, 72,—viz.: white boys, 64; colored boys, 8. During the year 34 were discharged, leaving in the school, November 16, 1862, white boys, 163; colored boys, 20; total, 183,—showing an increase for the year of 38. The school is reported to be accomplishing very useful results in the moral and mental culture of the boys and in teaching them productive trades. Receipts for the year, $19,368, of which $19,000 was from the State; expenditures, $18,584.

MICHIGAN ASYLUM FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB, AND BLIND, FLINT,—B. M. Fay, Principal.—By the Report of the Principal of this asylum, dated Nov. 1862, it appears that the institution is gradually extending its benefits. In 1856 the number of pupils was 72, which increased to 111 in 1858, to 123 in 1860, and to 136 in 1862. The largest number of inmates at any one time was 100, in November, 1862. The whole number of persons received since the opening of the asylum was 203, of whom 144 were deaf and dumb, and 59 blind. Receipts for the year, $52,143, of which $50,000 was from the State Asylum Fund; expenditures, $53,860.

MICHIGAN ASYLUM FOR THE INSANE, KALAMAZOO,—E. H. Van Deusen, M.D., Superintendent.—Statistics from the Report of the Superintendent (without date, but presumed to be), November, 1862. Patients in the hospital, November, 1860, 109; patients received in two years, to November, 1862, 187; total, 296. Of this number, 63 were discharged, recovered; 25 were taken away, improved; 26 were taken away, unimproved; 27 died; and 155 remain. Of those remaining, 58 are males, and 97 females.

The total expenditures for the year were $54,064, and the aggregate receipts were $57,021, of which $35,049 was the product of convict labor. Of the 110 convictions in 1862, 40 were for larceny, 19 for various grades of burglary, 5 for assault with intent to kill, 4 for murder and manslaughter, 5 for adultery, 2 for polygamy, 3 for seduction, 1 for bigamy, 1 for incest, 2 for opening and detaining letters in the post-office, 2 for stealing from the United States mail, 2 for counterfeiting, 7 for forgery, and 17 for other crimes. Of the convicts in 1862, 95 were native born, and 15 of foreign birth. During the year there were eight deaths,—1 by suicide, 1 from confluent smallpox, 1 from congestion of the lungs, 1 from typhoid fever, 1 from chronic rheumatism, and 3 from consumption. In the three years 1857–8–9, there were 39 deaths; in the three years 1860–1–2, there were 20 deaths. The prison hospital has been in the care of a homœopathic physician since 1860.

MICHIGAN AND THE WAR.—The regiment furnished by this State under the President's call for 75,000 three-months volunteers was mustered into the service on the 1st of May, 1861, and from that date to the close of 1862, Michigan had sent to the field 40,063 men. Of these, 780 were for three months, and all the rest for three years. These men were organized into 27 regiments of infantry (including 1 of engineers and mechanics), 6 regiments and 1 squadron of cavalry, 9 batteries of artillery, 6 companies of sharpshooters, and 1 company of provost guards. Other particulars of interest relating to these troops are embraced in the subjoined tabular statement. At the date of the Adjutant-General's Report, from which the table is compiled, the following organizations were in progress in the State, viz.: the 27th Infantry, Col. D. M. Fox; 28th Infantry, Col. E. Doyle; 7th Cavalry, Col. W. D. Mann; 8th Cavalry, Col. John Stockton; 9th Cavalry, Col. Jas. I. David; 1st Michigan Sharpshooters, Col. C. V. Deland; 10th Battery, Capt. Guenther, and the 11th Battery, Capt. Thompson. The men recruited for these organizations were estimated, December 24, 1862, as numbering 4400, making the total enlistments in Michigan to that time 44,463.

Militia.—An enrolment of the militia was made by the State assessors, September 10, 1862, but the returns were not full. Exclusive of the militia of the counties from which there were no reports, the footing up was 109,715, of whom 18,644 were exempted, leaving 91,071 subject to draft. Add to this the calculated number of militia subject to duty in the delinquent counties, viz., 4507, and the total available militia of the State was, at the date given, 95,578.

Casualties in the Michigan Regiments.—Great attention seems to have been bestowed by the Adjutant-General of this State on the preparation of a record of casualties. One of his tables is republished in this volume with the article on mortality and disease in the army. The casualties reported to the close of 1862, in the force of 40,063 men already mentioned, were as follows:—Killed and died of wounds, 771, died of disease, 1810, missing, 370, discharged, 3791: total, 6742.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The Report of Adjutant-General John Robertson, dated December 24, 1862, is a fine octavo of 309 pages, half bound in leather. Besides the information usual in such documents, it contains a minute account of the casualties in the Michigan forces, giving the name, residence, &c. of each man killed, wounded, missing, or discharged, under separate heads for each organization and each class of casualties.

Court of Common Pleas.

By the act of March 1, 1859, the State was divided by counties into 21 districts, in each of which, in October, 1860, a judge and a prosecuting attorney were elected. The judges are elected for four years, and the salary of each is $1000. Three terms of each Court of Common Pleas are held each year, beginning on the first Monday in January, and on the first Monday of every fourth month thereafter, unless the Circuit Court be in session, and then on the Monday succeeding the term of the Circuit Court. The counties composing the several districts, and the judges and prosecuting officers, are given below. The statute above referred to does not number the districts.

INDIANA HOSPITAL FOR THE BLIND, INDIANAPOLIS,—W. H. Churchman, Superintendent.—The report of the Superintendent, dated November 1, 1862, furnishes the following particulars:—Number of pupils, 1861, 76; number of pupils, Nov. 1862, 95; of whom 41 were males and 54 were females. The industrial department is managed on a system peculiar to this institution, or that was so at the date of the report. A contract is made with a master-workman in each branch of industry, who furnishes the raw material and teaches the pupils, taking the products of their labor as his compensation. This is alleged to save the institution from the losses incurred on similar account in other establishments for the instruction of the blind in manual labor. The articles manufactured by the males are brooms and brushes of all kinds, rag-carpet, door-mats, chairs, and willow baskets. The females are enabled to arrive at considerable proficiency in sewing and in bead-work. Receipts for 1862, including balance, $22,899: expenditures, $19,093.

Indiana and the War.

From April 26, 1861 (the date of organization of her six three-months regiments), to the 8th of January, 1863 (the date of Adjutant-General Noble's last published Report), Indiana furnished to the armies of the United States 99,742 soldiers. Of these, 89,884 were infantry, organized in 91 regiments; 6169 were cavalry, organized in 5 regiments; and 3689 were artillery, organized in 26 batteries. Considered with reference to their term of service, 89,266 were for 3 years, 2587 for 12 months, 6497 for 3 months, 621 for 60 days, and 771 for 30 days. These figures are the footings of the details in the subjoined table, which are copied carefully from the Adjutant-General's Report of the above date. They differ from a summation of the Indiana troops on page 365 of that report; but that summation is visibly erroneous in at least two particulars.

Indiana Volunteers to November, 1863.

Since the preparation of our table of Indiana volunteers, the following statement has been received, bringing the account down to Nov. 30, 1863:—

Troops furnished by the State of Indiana from April 18, 1861, to Nov. 30, 1863.

Date.	Troops of all Arms and Terms of Service.	Whole Number.	Equal to 3-years men.
1861–62	Raised by volunteering	100,939	90,905
1863...	Raised by volunteering to Sept. 12, 1863	6,196	2,990
1863...	Recruits from Sept. 12 to Nov. 30, 1863	7,800	7,800
	Total to Nov. 30, 1863	114,935	101,695
	Balance of quota to be raised by volunteering or conscription by Jan. 5, 1864	9,528	9,528
	Total number to Jan. 5, 1864	124,463	111,223

The quota required for 1863 was 18,997, upon which the State was entitled to a credit, for surplus of volunteers furnished to Sept. 12, 1863, of 1669, leaving the actual quota 17,328, which is more than half filled, and will be filled by volunteering by Jan. 5, 1864.

The number of State Militia and "Minute-Men" that answered the call of the Governor of July 9, 1863, to suppress the "Morgan Raid," was 13,521, to which add the whole number of volunteers raised to Jan. 5, 1864, of all terms of service, 124,463, making a total of 137,984.

The Militia of Indiana.—The enrolment made in August, 1862, returns the whole militia force of the State at..... 209,216

The conscientiously scrupulous at	3,169	36,038
Subject to draft.....		173,178

At the same time, the whole number who had volunteered was reported at 100,277, and the number then in service at 93,041.

The Draft.—This took place in Indiana on the 6th of October, 1862. About 3000 were drawn and ordered to camp on the 15th. About 2700 reported, and a majority of these availed themselves of the privilege of enlisting in the old regiments, and the others were assigned to regiments recruiting. The 54th (for one year) was almost entirely recruited from the drafted men.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The Report of Adjutant-General Lazarus Noble, of January 8, 1863, is an octavo of 343 pages, containing a full and valuable record of all the troops of Indiana sent to the field to the close of 1862.

The John Morgan Raid.

The Confederate General John H. Morgan, with a force of cavalry estimated at 5100, with five pieces of artillery, crossed the Ohio River at Brandenburg, Ky., into Indiana, on the 9th of July, 1863. On the same day, Governor Morton called upon the militia and minute-men to organize and report for duty at once; and within twenty-four hours at least 60,000 men offered their services to drive the invaders from the State. Of these, 13,521 were accepted, organized, equipped, armed, and in motion to meet and pursue Morgan before the morning of the 12th. Being (with the exception of a few companies) infantry, it was found impossible to intercept the enemy, whose troops were mounted on the best horses that could be stolen in the populous and wealthy country through which they passed. Had the military authorities been notified of Morgan's advance two days earlier, there is little doubt but that the Indiana militia would have captured most of his command before he left the State. In addition to the 13,521 organized bodies of militia and minute-men placed in the field by the Governor, there were hundreds of independent companies and squads of squirrel-hunters, who turned out and joined in the pursuit of the raiders, arming themselves with their own rifles and shot-guns. It may, therefore, be safely estimated that Morgan was followed during his march through Indiana by not less than 20,000 armed men, who had, at a moment's notice, left their homes and started in pursuit of the flying enemy.

Banks.

The State Auditor, Jesse K. Dubois, Esq., made the following Report in November, 1863, of the condition of the 25 remaining banks of Illinois on the 5th of October, 1863:—

Securities Deposited.

Illinois 6s	$974,660
United States 5s	8,000
North Carolina 6s	2,000
Circulation	833,146

At the date of the Auditor's last previous Report (Dec. 1860), there were 110 banks in operation in the State, with an aggregate circulation of $12,320,694. The great depreciation of stocks which followed the breaking out of the rebellion compelled the Auditor to call on the banks to make good the securities then deposited as the basis of their circulation. As a consequence, all but 17 of the banks went into liquidation. To the latter 5 more were added in 1862. Two of the old banks resumed operations, and one additional bank was added, prior to October, 1863, making in all the 25 banks, whose condition is above reported for that month.

ILLINOIS INSTITUTION FOR DEAF-MUTES, JACKSONVILLE.—Philip G. Gillett, A.M., Principal.—This institution—the first of the great charities of the State—was incorporated in 1839, but was not opened until 1846. The officers consist of a principal, eleven instructors, two matrons, a clerk, and physician. Since its organization it has received 926 pupils, of whom 246 remained upon its rolls at the date of the last Report. The buildings are large, commodious, and handsome, which, with grounds tastefully adorned, are valued at $300,000. The current expenses are $30,000 per annum. Tuition, board, washing, fuel, medical attendance, books, &c., are furnished to pupils resident in Illinois free of charge. None are admitted under ten years of age. The time of admission is the first Wednesday of October. In addition to the intellectual facilities of the institution, pupils have the opportunity of acquiring some mechanic art, of which cabinet-making and shoemaking, with gardening, are the principal. The female pupils are instructed in various domestic pursuits.

ILLINOIS INSTITUTION FOR THE BLIND, JACKSONVILLE.—Dr. Joshua Rhoads, Superintendent.—The Seventh Biennial Report of this institution furnishes the following particulars of its condition and operations to Nov. 29, 1862. At that date there were 64 pupils,—38 males and 26 females. Since its opening, 181 pupils have been the recipients of its benefits and instruction. It is mainly supported by an annual appropriation from the State Treasury of $12,000. The buildings are convenient and commodious, being equal to the accommodation of all the blind children in Illinois.

ILLINOIS STATE PENITENTIARY, JOLIET.—Statistics from the Report of Samuel K. Casey, Warden and Lessee, of Dec. 1, 1862.—The number of prisoners on the 1st day of December, 1860, was 672: viz., 664 males and 8 females. In the two following years, to Dec. 1, 1862, there were received 587, and in the same time 720 were discharged; leaving in the Penitentiary, at the date of the Report, 539. These figures show a decrease of 133 in the two years. Of those classed among the discharged, there were 17 deaths,—12 in 1861 and 5 in 1862. One death was by suicide, 1 from gunshot wounds received while attempting an escape, 1 from injuries produced by a fall from the top of the Warden's house, and the others were from ordinary disease. The Penitentiary is a new building on an extensive scale, and was not yet completed Jan. 1, 1863. At that time there had been expended for construction $754,721; and the estimate for its completion required additional appropriations of $177,935: total actual and estimated cost, $932,656. The Prison Commissioners recommended to the Legislature of 1863 the abolishment of the present system of leasing the Penitentiary, and the adoption of a plan which appears to be a modification of the congregate and separate systems. They speak very highly of the management of the Eastern Penitentiary of Pennsylvania.

ILLINOIS AND THE WAR.—At 11 o'clock of the 21st of April, 1861, Governor Yates despatched from Chicago a force of 595 men, with four pieces of artillery, under General Swift, to occupy the important position of Cairo, in that State. This little body was followed on the next day by several other companies, making the whole force of the "Cairo Expedition" 908 men. From that time to the 1st of January, 1863, Illinois had placed in the field 137 regiments of infantry, mustering 119,404 men; 15 regiments and 8 companies of cavalry, mustering 16,917 men; and 2 regiments and 7 batteries of artillery, mustering 3999 men: total, 140,320. Of the soldiers here specified, 9581 were for three months, and all the others were for three years. The subjoined table gives copious details concerning the forces above mentioned.

Militia of Illinois.—An enrolment of the militia of the State was ordered on the 23d of August, 1862, the aggregate of the returns showing a force of 391,319, of whom 115,123 were returned as actually in the service of the United States at the time. During the year an effort was made to organize the militia, but without success.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The Report of Adjutant-General Allen C. Fuller is an octavo of 383 pages of valuable and interesting particulars relating to the Illinois troops. It contains a brief history of the military operations of the State from April 15, 1861, to Jan. 1, 1863, and a number of detailed statements showing where, when, and by whom every company of every regiment was raised, when mustered into the service, and when it marched from the State.

* The Illinois regiments mustered for the present war were numbered commencing at number 7, the first six numbers having been left vacant from respect to the six regiments engaged in the Mexican War The regiments numbers 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12 were originally organized for the three-months service in April and May, 1861, and were subsequently reorganized for the three-years service. This will account for the duplication of numbers above.

The Government of Missouri as above given is Provisional. An ordinance of the Sovereign Convention of the State, adopted on the 30th of July, 1861, having vacated the offices of Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, and Secretary of State, the officers named in the foregoing table were chosen by the Convention on the 31st of July, to fill the vacancies until first Monday of November in the same year, when an election was to have been held by the people. On account of the disturbed condition of the State, the proposed election by the people was postponed by ordinance of 12th of October, 1861; and the Provisional Government was by ordinance of June 11, 1862, continued in office until the first Monday in August, 1864, and "until their successors are elected and qualified." Subsequently (on the 13th of June, 1862) it was ordained by the Convention that after the first day of July, 1862, future general elections in the State should be held biennially, on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November. This necessarily continued the Executive until November, 1864, and "until their successors are qualified." On the 15th of June, 1863, the Convention was again assembled; and on that day Governor Gamble tendered his resignation, but the Convention returned it to him, with a resolution requesting him to continue to discharge the duties of Governor until the first Monday of November, 1864. To this Governor Gamble gave his assent. A Legislature was elected in November, 1862. It met according to law on the last Monday in December, 1862; and again, by adjournment, on the 12th of November, 1863. This body consists of Senators, 33 in number, elected for four years, and Representatives, 97 in number, elected for two years. Its regular sessions are biennial, commencing on the last Monday in December. Members of the Legislature are allowed $5 per day during the session, and mileage. The Lieutenant-Governor is ex officio President of the Senate,—he is allowed $7 per day while presiding; and the pay of the Speaker of the House is the same.

The Supreme Court of Missouri is composed of three judges, chosen by the people. They hold their offices for a term of six years. The court as above constituted was chosen at an election held by the people, November 3, 1863, under an ordinance of the Missouri State Convention, which directed that the general election for Supreme and Circuit Court Judges, required by the Constitution of the State of Missouri, should be held on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1863, and on the same day every six years thereafter. Two terms of the court are held annually: one at Jefferson City, and one at St. Louis.

Aggregate balance $2,403,639

Of the expenditures from the Revenue Fund there were the following:—

Criminal prosecutions	99,402
Interest on State bonds	153,739

State Debt.—The greater part of what is considered the State debt of Missouri consists of bonds issued, by which the credit of the State was loaned to certain companies to aid in the construction of railroads. Prior to the issue of said bonds, the State debt proper was but $602,000. In the Auditor's report the particulars relating to the railroad bonds are presented in tabular form, and from the table the following summary is compiled, showing the amount of bonds issued to each company:—

Pacific Railroad	$7,000,000
" " S.W. Branch	4,500,000
Hannibal & St. Joseph	3,000,000
North Missouri	4,350,000

Add revenue bonds issued	431,000
	$24,132,000
Add State debt proper	602,000
	$24,734,000

Of the following bonds, 2093 bear 6 per cent. interest, and 1139 guaranteed by the State bear 7 per cent. The interest on the railroad bonds is payable by the companies respectively, but they have been in default (except the Hannibal road) since July, 1861. The overdue interest amounted in January, 1863, to $2,500,120.

TAXATION AND VALUATION.—Owing to the disturbed condition of the State in 1861 and 1862, the valuation in those years was unavoidably incomplete. Some of the aggregates from the tax-books stand as follow:—

Poll-tax	$41,445	$57,313

Revenue tax	$513,517	$450,67?
Lunatic Asylum Tax	$35,740	.....

WAR EXPENSES.—At the December session of 1862, the Missouri Legislature appropriated $3,000,000 in Union Military Bonds to pay the enrolled militia of the State called into active service. These bonds have the form of circulating notes. Down to November 10, 1862, $728,000 had been issued. It was not known at that date whether the $3,000,000 appropriated would pay all the claims against the fund, and Governor Gamble recommended the appropriation of an additional amount of $1,500,000.

BANKS.—No returns of the condition of the Banks of Missouri have been received of a later date than those in the National Almanac of 1863.

COMMON SCHOOLS.—The disturbed condition of the State in the years 1861–2 seriously damaged the school system. One of the ordinances of 1861 abolished the office of Superintendent of Common Schools, and imposed the duties of supervision, &c. on the Secretary of State. This officer has made no report on the subject since 1861, and none will be made until 1865. The Auditor of Public Accounts, in his report of December, 1862, recommended a suspension until 1864 of the usual School Fund appropriation of 25 per cent. from the revenue, in consequence of the impracticability of carrying on the school system outside of St. Louis. The School Fund at that time amounted to $687,968, invested in State Bonds. The school moneys in the treasury amounted to $129,618. The Seminary Fund consists of $100,000, also invested in State Bonds.

MISSOURI INSTITUTION FOR THE BLIND, ST. LOUIS,—Philetus Fales, Principal.—At the date of the Principal's Report, October, 1861, there were in the institution 28 pupils, viz.: 20 males and 8 females; on the 1st of October, 1862, there were 21 males and 12 females,—total, 33. This number had increased (Oct. 1863) to 44 pupils, and for the year ending that date the whole number of different persons who had been under instruction was 62. The expenditures for the year were $8000.

MISSOURI STATE LUNATIC ASYLUM, FULTON,—Dr. T. R. H. Smith, Superintendent.—In the fall of 1861, the operations of this institution were suspended (one of the many lamentable consequences of the rebellion), and they were not resumed until September 7, 1863, at which time the Asylum was reopened. A report of its condition was made to the Legislature at the November session of that year; but it is not yet published (Dec. 1863). A letter from the Superintendent states that 103 patients had been received from September 7 to December 2, 1863. An appropriation had been asked to refurnish the whole building, which would then accommodate 350 patients.

STATE PRISON, JEFFERSON CITY.—Of this establishment the only information furnished is contained in the following passages from Governor Gamble's message of December 30, 1862:—"When the Provisional Government was established, the Penitentiary was found to be entirely under the control of those hostile to the United States; the institution was languishing under their mismanagement, and rapidly approaching a condition of starvation." These officers were removed; and "since the change there has been a great improvement in its condition, and the prospects are that it will soon cease to be a drain on the Treasury."

CONDITION OF THE STATE.—On this subject Governor Gamble's message to the Legislature at its adjourned session November, 1863, contains the following:—"There is now within the State no military organization hostile to the Government of the United States, and there is every indication that the former feeling of hostility has settled down into a quiet acquiescence in the supremacy of that Government, and an unwillingness to have the peace of the State further disturbed by rebel organizations. This condition of affairs is fully exemplified by the fact that a body of rebels under the command of Governor Shelby invaded the State from Arkansas, and penetrated to the Missouri River. He was met by State troops alone, the State militia and enrolled militia,—was routed in battle, and has been driven out of the State without obtaining any accession to his force; while all along his route there was exhibited great activity among the people to intercept him. The rebellious spirit may be regarded as subdued. . . . The seat of war has been removed far from our borders; and there remains no probability that Missouri will ever again become the theatre of its horrors."

IMMIGRATION.—Mr. Frederick Rohrer, a citizen of the State, has been sent to Germany with a view to promoting emigration from that country to Missouri; and another citizen of German birth has been sent on the same business by a manufacturer of St. Louis.

ORDINANCES, &c. OF THE MISSOURI SOVEREIGN CONVENTION.

The State Convention of Missouri which was called in 1861 and organized in February of that year, having refused to take any steps towards separating that State from the United States, continued its existence, and reassembled in July of the same year. At its second session it deposed Governor Jackson, Lieutenant-Governor Reynolds, the Secretary of State, Massey, and a number of the members of the General Assembly. Taking the State under its own control, and placing the executive functions in charge of a provisional government, it exercised the legislative power during the years 1861–2.

The Convention passed during those years a number of ordinances, a list of which is as follows:—

1. An ordinance providing for certain amendments to the Constitution: adopted July 30, 1861.

(This ordinance deposed the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, and members of the General Assembly, and provided for the election of their successors on the first Monday of November, 1861.)

2. An ordinance concerning the repeal and abrogation of certain laws, and for other purposes: adopted July 30, 1861.

3. An ordinance submitting the action of this Convention to a vote of the people of Missouri: adopted July 30, 1861.

(The action here referred to is the deposing of the State officers, and the provision for the election of their successors.)

4. An ordinance providing for changing the time of holding certain elections: adopted October 12, 1861.

(This ordinance postponed the election ordered for November, 1861, to the first Monday of August, 1862, and continued the provisional government to that time.)

5. An ordinance providing for abolishing certain offices, reducing salaries, and testing the loyalty of civil officers, and offering amnesty to certain persons on certain conditions: adopted October 16, 1861.

(The offices abolished are the Board of Public Works, State Superintendent of Common Schools, County School Commissioners, State Geologist, and Assistant Geologist.)

6. An ordinance respecting certain records and other property of the State.

7. An ordinance providing for the organization and government of the Missouri State militia: adopted October 17, 1861.

(This ordinance constitutes all able-bodied free white male inhabitants between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, the Missouri State militia, and provides for their organization.)

8. An ordinance providing for the defence of the State: adopted October 18, 1861. (Bonds are authorized to be issued to provide means for arming and supporting the militia, &c.)

9. An ordinance to amend an ordinance providing for abolishing certain offices, reducing salaries, etc.: adopted June 7, 1862.

10. An ordinance repealing certain ordinances submitting the action of the Convention to a vote of the people of Missouri, and for other purposes: adopted June 7, 1862.

11. An ordinance providing for laying off the State into Congressional Districts.

12. An ordinance defining the qualifications of voters and civil officers in this State: adopted June 10, 1862.

13. An ordinance for the appointment of artillery officers, &c.: adopted June 10, 1862.

14. An ordinance continuing the present provisional Government in office: adopted June 11, 1862.

15. An ordinance to enable citizens of this State in the military service of the United States, or the State of Missouri, to vote: adopted June 12, 1862.

16. An ordinance in relation to assessors and collectors, and providing for the payment of certain accounts: adopted June 13, 1862.

17. An ordinance appropriating money: adopted June 13, 1862. ($12,000 appropriated for expenses of the Convention.)

18. An ordinance appropriating money for the care of the sick and wounded soldiers of Missouri: adopted June 13, 1862. ($15,000 appropriated for the purpose named.)

19. An ordinance relating to county assessors and other officers: adopted June 13, 1862.

(This ordinance provides for the appointment of assessors by the county courts, and continues all other county officers until their successors are elected and qualified.)

20. An ordinance in relation to voting in certain counties: adopted June 13, 1862.

21. An ordinance for the payment of division inspectors, and for other purposes: adopted June 13, 1862.

22. An ordinance amending the third article of the State Constitution: adopted June 13, 1862.

(By this, all general elections are ordered to take place on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, biennially, after July 1, 1862.)

23. An ordinance requiring the State Senators to be divided into classes by lot: adopted June 13, 1862.

24. An ordinance in relation to the duties of the register of lands and county assessors: adopted June 14, 1862.

The Convention reassembled June 15, 1863, under proclamation of the Governor. At this session the following ordinances were passed:—

25. An ordinance to defray the expenses of the Convention: adopted June 23, 1863. ($14,000 appropriated.)

26. An ordinance to change the time of holding elections for Supreme and Circuit Court Judges: adopted June 26, 1863.

(The election-day for said judges is changed from the first Monday in August to the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, 1863, and the same day every sixth year thereafter.)

27. An ordinance to provide for supplying the vacancy existing in the office of Judge of the 14th Judicial Circuit: adopted June 27, 1863.

28. An ordinance concerning the payment of the enrolled militia: adopted July 1, 1863.

29. An ordinance to provide for certain amendments to the Constitution, and for emancipation of slaves: adopted July 1, 1863.

Having adopted these ordinances, some of which are of a highly important nature, the Convention, on the 1st of July, 1863, adjourned sine die.

EMANCIPATION OF SLAVES.

AN ORDINANCE TO PROVIDE FOR CERTAIN AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION, AND FOR EMANCIPATION OF SLAVES.

Be it ordained by the People of the State of Missouri, in Convention assembled:

Sect. 1. The first and second clauses of the twenty-sixth section of the third article of the Constitution are hereby abrogated.

Sect. 2. That slavery and involuntary servitude, except for the punishment of crime, shall cease to exist in Missouri on the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy; and all slaves within the State at that day are hereby declared to be free: Provided, however, that all persons emancipated by this ordinance shall remain under the control and be subject to the authority of their late owners, representatives, and assigns, as servants, during the following periods, to wit: those over forty years of age, for and during their lives; those under twelve years of age, until they arrive at the age of twenty-three years; and those of all other ages, until the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-six. The persons, or their legal representatives, who, up to the moment of emancipation, were the owners of the slaves thereby freed, shall, during the period for which the services of such freed men are reserved to them, have the same authority and control over the said freed men, for the purpose of securing the possession and services of the same, that are now held absolutely by the master in respect of his slave: Provided, however, that after the said fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy, no person so held to service shall be sold to a non-resident of, or removed from, the State of Missouri, by the authority of his late owner, or his legal representatives.

Sect. 3. That all slaves hereafter brought into this State, and not now belonging to citizens of this State, shall thereupon be free.

Sect. 4. All slaves removed by consent of their owners to any seceded State after the passage by such State of an act or ordinance of secession, and hereafter brought into this State by their owners, shall thereupon be free.

Sect. 5. The General Assembly shall have no power to pass laws to emancipate slaves without the consent of their owners.

Sect. 6. After the passage of this ordinance, no slaves in this State shall be subject to State, county, or municipal taxes.

MISSOURI AND THE WAR.—In answer to the President's call upon Missouri for her quota of the 75,000 men for three months' service, two responses were received. One was from Claiborne F. Jackson, then Governor of that State, refusing to comply with the requisition; and the other was from the people of St. Louis, who began to assemble at the arsenal on the 22d of that month. 2000 men were mustered in that day, and, in the following two weeks, four regiments of infantry and a battalion of artillery were organized, with an aggregate strength of about 4500 men. A fifth regiment of infantry was organized about the same time, numbering 926 men. Early in May, under authority to enrol the loyal citizens of St. Louis, a "Reserve Corps" of five additional regiments was raised, with an aggregate strength of 4774 officers and men. The combined force of these organizations on the 1st of June, after further recruiting, was 10,730. The whole of this force was raised in St. Louis, and was employed in the field or in garrison until discharged or remustered into the three-years service. (The details relating to this force will be found in the subjoined Table A.) About the same time (June, 1861), 10,000 stand of arms were distributed by the United States Government to the loyal inhabitants of Missouri, and the persons to whom these arms were given organized themselves into "Home Guards." Other persons joined these organizations, furnishing their own arms. No accurate enrolment was made of the forces raised in this way; but the then Adjutant-General of the State estimated them at 15,000. There was a class of them, however, who properly belong to the volunteer force of Missouri in the active service of the United States. This class was composed of the Home Guards, numbering 2200, under General Lyon, who were kept in the field until their term of three months expired. The details concerning this force are also in Table A. During the year a body of the Missouri State Militia, numbering 6185 men, were in the service for six months. (See Table A.) Immediately after the President's call for men for three years, many of the existing organizations were mustered into the United States service for the war (or three years), and many new ones were formed, mustering in all, on the 1st of January, 1862, 32,821. The details of these organizations are set forth in Table B, as they stood on that day. In the following year (1862) a great many changes were made in these regiments and companies, and there was so much shifting, transferring, consolidating, and "mustering out," that it is difficult to keep trace of them; but the effect of it all was to reduce the force of 32,821 in the table to 19,042 men. All this is explained by the remarks in and with the table. During 1862 a number of additional three-years regiments, &c. were organized; and these, with the new organizations formed out of some of the old ones, are exhibited in the subjoined Table C, as they stood Dec. 1, 1862. The strength of the regiments in that table was 11,761, thus raising the total of Missouri three-years men in service, in 1862, to 30,803. (Before Dec. 1 of that year, losses in battle, by disease, &c. reduced that force to 27,407.) There was also in service, Dec. 1, 1862, a second levy from the Missouri State Militia, numbering 10,540, the particulars concerning which are in Table D. The term of service of these troops is not stated in the Adjutant-General's Report. Recapitulating the footings in Tables A, B, C, D, the military contributions of Missouri stand about thus:—

3-months men of April, 1861	10,370
3-months Home Guards, under General Lyon	2,200
		12,570
6-months men, Missouri State Militia, call of 1861		6,185
3-years men of 1861–2		30,803
Missouri State Militia in service, 1862		10,540
Aggregate of Missouri troops in United States service, 1861–2		60,098

This statement does not include the Home Guards, —who were in the field in 1861, but not in the service of the United States,—nor does it embrace in the final summing up the men composing the organizations mustered out in 1862, as shown in Table C. These may be set off against the men who may have been in the three-months or six-months regiments, and also in the three-years regiments, and, therefore, counted twice. With this extended preface, which is made necessary by the complex transformations of the Missouri forces, the tables are left with the reader.

Militia.—Besides the Missouri State Militia, there is an "Enrolled Militia," thoroughly organized for instant service, numbering 52,056 fighting-men.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The Report of Adjutant-General William D. Wood, dated Dec. 15, 1862, is a pamphlet of 12 pages. He has also published a Register (12mo, 204 pp.) of the Missouri volunteers and militia.

Military Operations in Missouri in 1863.

After the foregoing was prepared, the following additional information concerning the military operations of 1863 was received from the Adjutant-General, under date of Dec. 20, 1863:—

Since the publication of the Register (Jan. 1, 1863), about 1500 men have been recruited in the old regiments of Missouri volunteers and Missouri State Militia. No new regiment of infantry has been raised. One regiment of cavalry has been raised (11th Cavalry Missouri Volunteers), and another is in process of formation, to be called the 12th, which will probably be completed in the course of February.

In negro troops, raised under Order 135, Department of Missouri, two regiments are already completed, and it is supposed three others can be recruited by the middle of January, 1864. Equal to probably two regiments have been enlisted from this State in Iowa, Kansas, and other States, which will be credited to this State.

The enrolled militia has been to a considerable extent employed in the State, which is now so quiet that this force is relieved from duty. It has been paid by the State, and clothed, fed, and armed by the State, until placed under the command of the Department commander; since which they have been provided for by the United States when in active service.

The Secretary of State, Auditor of State, Treasurer, Attorney-General, and Register of the Land Office are also elected for two years, in the alternate or even years, and their term commences in January ensuing. The sessions of the Legislature are biennial. A regular session was held in January, 1862, and an extra session in September, 1862. The members of the Senate, 46 in number, are elected for four years, at the same time with the Governor, one-half being elected every two years. The Representatives, 93 in number, are elected at the same elections for two years. The general election is held on the second Tuesday in October. Senators, 46 in number, elected for four years, and Representatives, 93 in number, elected for two years, constitute the Legislature of Iowa. The Legislature is required to meet in regular session biennially, on the second Monday in January, in the even years, 1864, '66, &c.

The judicial power of the State of Iowa is vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, and such other courts, inferior to the Supreme Court, as the Legislature may establish. In cases in Chancery the Supreme Court has appellate jurisdiction only: it constitutes a court for the correction of errors at law, and has power to issue all writs and process necessary to secure justice to all parties and exercise a supervisory control over all inferior tribunals. The court consists of three Judges, chosen by the qualified electors of the State, and they hold their offices for six years, one judge retiring every second year, unless re-elected. The judge having the shortest term to serve is Chief-Justice. Four terms of the court are held annually, two of them at Davenport, on the second Mondays in April and October, and two at Des Moines, on the first Mondays in June and December.

For District-Court purposes, the State is divided into eleven districts, in each of which there is a court having both common law and equity powers, and jurisdiction in all civil and criminal matters arising in the district. The Judge of each of the District Courts is elected by the qualified electors of the district, and holds his office for four years; and at the same election a District Attorney is chosen for the same term.

Finances.

From the Biennial Report of Wm. H. Holmes, Esq., State Treasurer, dated Nov. 6, 1863.

Balance in the Treasury, Nov 4, 1861.....	$28,039
Receipts from Nov. 4, 1861, to Oct. 31, '63	861,260
Total resources for the two years....	$889,299
Disbursements from Nov. 4, 1861, to Oct. 31, 1863	689,541
Balance in the Treasury, Nov. 1, '63	$199,758

A note in the Treasurer's Report explains that the true balance, Nov. 1, 1863, was $40,754, as $159,004 of the balance exhibited in the foregoing statement consisted of warrants drawn against the "War and Defence Fund," redeemed from the general treasury.

War and Defence Fund.—The receipts on this account for the two years ending Nov. 1, 1863, were (including the balance, Nov. 4, 1861) $551,982, and the warrants issued for the same period were $710,986,—showing the fund to be overdrawn $159,004, which overdraught was paid from the general revenue, as stated above.

The State Debt in Dec. 1862 was $1,122,296.

Agriculture of Iowa.

William Duane Wilson, Esq., Secretary of the Iowa Farmers' College, has courteously furnished the following statistics of the agriculture of Iowa for 1862 (and partly for 1863), in advance of its official publication. All the information thus given is three years later than that contained in the United States Census returns, and some of it is four years later.

The average product of wool per head of sheep, at the shearing of 1862, was 3.51 pounds. This rate for 1863 would yield, from the 599,938 sheep on hand in that year, a wool-clip of 2,099,783 pounds. Mr. Wilson estimates the number of sheep in Iowa, for the shearing of 1864, at 900,000, —which number, at 3½ pounds per head, will yield a product of wool amounting to 3,150,000 pounds.

* The population placed here is that of 1860, but the products on the same line are for 1859. The population opposite 1862 and 1863 is that of the State census, taken early in the spring of 1863.

† The products opposite 1863 are the only items not based upon official data, but they are based upon reliable information from all sections of the State.

Assessed Value of Real Estate and Personal Property in Iowa for the last Fourteen Years, from 1850 to 1863 inclusive.

The following table is taken from the printed reports of the Auditor of State, excepting only that for the year 1860, which is from the United States census, giving the cash value instead of the assessed value of property. Up to and including 1857, regular annual assessments were made; after that year, regular assessments were made every alternate year,—1859, 1861, and 1863. The discrepancies existing—especially in the number of acres returned—are principally owing to want of returns from some of the counties, and cannot now be corrected. In regard to the other items, errors are evident in several counties, in carrying out the value of property,—most of them probably typographical. The table, however, is as near correct as the records furnish, and will serve as the best approximation that can be given of the progressive value, and sometimes depreciation in value, of the taxable property of the State. It is probable that at least one-half of the land assessed is owned by non-residents. The average assessed value of lands is a fraction over $4.33 per acre, and the tax on all property for State purposes is two mills on the assessed value. The taxes for all other purposes—county, school, &c.—are about eight mills additional

The United States census places the true value of real and personal property in Iowa for 1860 at $247,338,265,—exhibiting a rate of increase, for the previous ten years, of 942.97 per cent.

The cash-value of farms in Iowa, as per United States census, in 1850, was $16,657,567; in 1860, $118,741,405.

The value of farming-implements and machinery, the United States census gives for Iowa, in 1850, $1,172,869, and, in 1860, $5,190,042.

Iowa Institution for the Education of the Blind, Vinton,—Orlando Clark, Superintendent.

A communication from the Superintendent of this institution, dated Dec. 10, 1863, furnishes the following particulars of its condition at that time. It was removed from Iowa City in the summer of 1862 to Vinton, a village of about 1500 inhabitants, where it has the advantage of a new and permanent edifice of limestone, 108 feet long by 70 wide, and four stories in height. Since June, 1862, the number of pupils had increased from 30 to 60. Nearly all the blind in the institution were so by accident, or from inflammation. The theory and practice of the establishment is thought to combine the advantages of all others, and the standard of excellence is claimed to be as high as that in the institution at Philadelphia. The report for the two years 1862-63 shows the whole number of pupils to be 65; number of teachers, 6. The cost of the new building was $40,000; cost of maintenance (time not stated), including removal of furniture, musical instruments, fitting up grounds, &c., $10,000. This last sum is supposed to include the expenditures of about eighteen months prior to December, 1863. The assistants to the Superintendent are:—Matron and Teacher in Female Department, Mrs. H. L. Clarke; Music-Teacher, S. H. Rice; Teachers, N. C. Robinson, Miss Amelia Butler; Teacher in Mechanical Department, John Cisna.

Iowa Hospital for the Insane, Mount Pleasant,—Dr. R. J. Patterson, Superintendent.

There has been no published report from this new institution. A communication from the hospital, dated Nov. 25, 1863, furnishes the following in advance of the official report to be made in Jan. 1864:—Patients admitted, from March, 1861, to Nov. 25, 1863, 412; discharged,—recovered, 107; improved, 42; unimproved, 12; died, 37; suicide, 1. Total discharged, &c., 199. Remaining, Nov. 25, 1863, 213. Cost of buildings and grounds and furniture, $350,000. Capacity of buildings,—for 300 patients. The buildings are of cut limestone. Officers,—Superintendent, R. J. Patterson, M.D.; Assistant Physician, D. C. Dewey, M.D.; Steward, Geo. Josselyn; Matron, Ann Josselyn.

Iowa and the War.

Iowa's 1st regiment for the present war was mustered May 14, 1861. From that date to December, 1863, she had contributed to the armies of the United States 52,240 men, all of which are for three years, excepting the 1st regiment of 959 men. They are organized into 40 regiments of infantry, 9 regiments of cavalry, and 4 batteries of artillery. In addition to this large force, the State had in the service, for the protection of her southern borders against lawless men from Missouri, and her northern borders from Indian outbreaks, a militia force of 1045 men. In 1863 she was obliged to call out still another militia force of 1100, to quell the disturbances in Keokuk county. Most of the important particulars concerning all these Iowa troops will be found in the tabular statement annexed to this article.

Militia.—The enrolment of the militia of Iowa made in 1862 shows the aggregate of men liable to military duty to be 106,340.

Quotas.—The quotas of Iowa under all the calls to the close of 1862 were 49,405 men.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The report of Adjutant-General N. B. Baker, dated Jan. 1, 1863, is in two vols. octavo,—Vol. I., 1080 pages, and Vol. II., 908 pages. It is a most valuable contribution to the military history of the State and nation, furnishing a permanent record of the military operations of the State, individualizing every officer and private in the Iowa regiments, and showing the date and character of every casualty in every regiment, in tables admirably arranged.

Judiciary of Wisconsin.

The judicial power of the State, both as to matters of law and equity, is vested in a Supreme Court, Circuit Courts, Courts of Probate, and in justices of the peace. The Legislature has power to establish Municipal Courts, with jurisdiction in their respective municipalities, not exceeding that of the Circuit Courts, and also to create inferior courts in the several counties, with limited civil and criminal jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court has appellate jurisdiction, both as to matters of law and equity, which extends to all matters of appeal, error, or complaint from the decisions or judgments of the Circuit and County Courts. It has power to issue writs of mandamus, quo warranto, prohibition, error, supersedeas, procedendo, certiorari, scire facias, and all other writs and process necessary to enforce the due administration of justice. It can order a jury, to consist of twelve men qualified to act as jurors in the Circuit Courts, to come from any county, to try any issue of fact formed in cases commenced in the Supreme Court, except cases of mandamus and prohibition. By the existing statute it is provided that there shall be held at Madison, in the Supreme Court room, two sessions of the Supreme Court in each year, called the January and June terms: the January term commences on the Tuesday next preceding the second Wednesday of January, and the June term commences on the third Tuesday of June, in each year. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief-Justice and two Associate Justices.

The State is divided into ten judicial circuits. The Circuit Courts have original jurisdiction within their respective circuits in all civil actions, and have power to award throughout the State, returnable in the proper county, writs of injunction, ne exeat, mandamus, quo warranto, and all other writs and process which are necessary to the due execution of the powers with which they are vested. They also have power to hear and determine all cases of crimes and misdemeanors, of whatever kind, not exclusively cognizable by justices of the peace or Police Courts, which may be committed in any county within their respective circuits. They likewise have appellate jurisdiction from all inferior courts and tribunals, and a supervising control over the same.

A jury term of the Circuit Court to try issues of fact is held twice in each year in each county organized for judicial purposes. One or more special terms are also held in each county in each year, to determine questions of law and causes in equity. The judges of the Supreme and Circuit Courts are elected for terms of six years, and hold their offices until their successors are chosen and qualified. The judges of the Supreme Court are chosen by the qualified electors of the State at large; those of the Circuit Court, by the qualified electors of their respective circuits. The election for judge is held on the first Tuesday in April of each year, when a judge is to be chosen. Each judge of the Supreme and Circuit Courts receives a salary of $2500 annually, payable quarterly, and is prohibited from taking any fees or other compensation. In case of vacancy in the office of Supreme or Circuit Judge, the Governor appoints, the appointee holding until his successor is chosen and qualified. Such successor holds, when elected, for the residue of the unexpired term.

Any judge of the Supreme or Circuit Court may be removed from office by a joint address of two-thirds of the members elected to each House of the Legislature. They are likewise liable to be impeached, and removed from office, for corrupt conduct, or for crimes and misdemeanors.

Funds.—Wisconsin, like most of the Western States, has a number of "Funds" auxiliary to the general operations of its Treasury, and the aggregates of receipts and expenditures are swelled beyond the real amounts involved by the transfers of cash or credits from one Fund to another. The principal Funds are—1st. The General Fund, derived from taxes, licenses, and the other ordinary sources of State income; 2d. The School Fund, derived from sales of lands granted to the State by Congress for educational purposes; 3d. The War Fund, derived from the sale of State bonds; 4th. The Allotment Fund, derived from moneys allotted by the Wisconsin volunteers to be distributed to their families; 5th. The University Fund, derived from the proceeds of Congressional land grants; 6th. The Swamp-Land Fund, derived from the proceeds of swamp-lands granted to the State by Congress. Some of these funds are subdivided into "Income" Funds: this being the case wherever the principal is required to be invested and only the income expended, as in the case of the School and University Funds.

Estimates for 1864.—The Secretary of State in his Report as Auditor submits the following estimates of receipts and expenditures for 1864:—

Salaries, &c	$67,008
Legislature	56,000
State Prison and Charities	75,200
Miscellaneous	87,400
Interest on State Debt	106,780
War expenses	741,000

Wisconsin State Debt.—Prior to May, 1861, the State debt was only $100,000, which was the extent permitted by the Constitution, except in case of invasion or for the suppression of rebellion, &c. This debt was in six per cent. bonds. At the extra session of the Legislature in May, 1861, a loan for war purposes of one million dollars more was authorized. Of this, $200,000 was to be negotiated by the Governor alone, and not below par. The remainder was to be negotiated by the Board of Loan Commissioners, consisting of the Governor, Secretary of State, and State Treasurer, on the best terms they could obtain. The condition of the banks at the time, and the general distrust of Western securities, together with some technical defects in the law, rendered the negotiation of these bonds in the Eastern money-markets impossible. Under these circumstances, the Wisconsin bankers came forward, and offered to take the $800,000 bonds, paying 70 per cent. of their face down (⅔ in specie or N.Y. Exchange, and ⅓ in their own bills), and the remaining 30 per cent. in instalments of one per cent. every six months, giving their corporate bonds as security for this payment, and to deposit the State bonds with the Bank Comptroller as a basis for banking in place of the depreciated bonds of the disloyal States. This offer was accepted, and, including the sale of some small bonds at par, the whole amount received from bonds sold up to Oct. 1, 1861, was $588,220.

In the fiscal year ending Oct. 1, 1862, the proceeds of bonds sold amounted to $472,602; and in the year ending Oct. 1, 1863, the amount of bonds sold was $345,400. The total of these sums (including the $100,000 of debt existing prior to 1861) is $1,506,222. It must be borne in mind that some of the above items represent proceeds only, the bonds being disposed of at a discount. It does not appear in the State reports whether any of this debt had been discharged or not.

SCHOOL FUND.—This fund is derived from the proceeds of the sales of lands granted to Wisconsin for educational and other purposes. The total of the fund, Sept. 30, 1862, was $2,219,906. It is cumulative as fast as the lands are sold and the proceeds invested. Only the income is devoted to the current expenses of the schools.

WISCONSIN STATE UNIVERSITY, MADISON,—John M. Sterling, A.M., Principal.—The report of the Faculty on the workings and prospects of the University for the year 1862 shows that the number of enrolled students then on the books was 231; of whom 97 were in the first term, 54 in the second, and 80 in the third. This is about the same as in 1861. Twenty-six students left their classes to enter the army. The resources of the University for the year were $13,888; expenditures, $14,471. It is supported from a fund made up of the proceeds of lands granted to the State by Congress for the purpose.

WISCONSIN INSTITUTE FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE BLIND, JANESVILLE,—Thomas H. Little, Superintendent.—Under date of Oct. 1, 1862, the Superintendent reports 50 pupils as in attendance during the year, which greatly exceeds the number for any previous year. There were but 42 in 1861, and but 34 in 1860; and those years exceeded any previous years. Expenditures for the year, $9065, all of which was appropriated by the State.

WISCONSIN INSTITUTE FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB, DELAVAN.—The Report of J. S. Officer, Principal, for the year ending Sept. 1862, shows that the whole number of enrolled pupils that year was 89. A class of 16 left the Institute in 1861; and 23 left in 1862. The Superintendent estimates the number of deaf-mutes in the State at 400. Current expenditures for the year, $10,846, mainly defrayed by State appropriations.

WISCONSIN STATE HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE, MADISON.—Statistics from the Report of Dr. J. P. Clement, dated Oct. 1, 1862.—The number of patients remaining, Oct. 1, 1861, was 103, viz.: males, 51; females, 52. During the year there were admitted 49 males and 40 females,—total 89,—making the whole number under treatment during the year 192. Of these, 61 were discharged,—33 males and 28 females,—leaving 131 patients remaining, Oct. 1, 1862. Of the 61 discharged, 25 had recovered, 8 were improved, 15 not improved, and 21 died. In 1861, 42 were discharged, of whom 16 had recovered, 7 were improved, 8 not improved, and 11 had died. The Superintendent states, in explanation of the large number of deaths in 1862, that the causes in ten cases were exhaustion from acute and chronic mania; in five cases, consumption; and in the other six cases—apoplexy, 1; old age, 1; suicide, 1; epilepsy, 2; and paralysis, 1. Expenditures for the year, $25,110, mainly defrayed by appropriations from the State Treasury. The first patient was admitted July 14, 1860.

There were discharged in 1861–62, to October, 21 boys and 4 girls, leaving in the school, at date of the report, 51 boys and 4 girls; total, 55. Expenditures for the year, $6371, paid from State appropriations.

WISCONSIN AND THE WAR.—From May, 1861,—the date of departure of the 1st Regiment from the State,—to Jan. 1, 1863,* Wisconsin had furnished to the armies of the United States 40,646 men. Of these, 810 were for 3 months, and 39,836 for 3 years. Considered in relation to their organization, they composed 34 regiments and 1 company of infantry, 3 regiments and 1 company of cavalry, and 13 batteries of artillery. These and other particulars are set forth more in detail in the subjoined table. The quotas of Wisconsin under all the calls, to Dec. 1862, amounted to 44,661.

The Draft of 1862.—The number of men drafted was 4156. Of these, only 2341 reported at camp. Of the latter, 991 were discharged for disability and other reasons, 64 deserted, 491 volunteered in old regiments, and 795 remained in camp at the date of the report.

Militia.—An enrolment of the militia of Wisconsin was made by the sheriffs of the several counties in 1862, preparatory to the draft ordered in that year. The returns were as follow:—

Total number enrolled.....	127,894
Exempts.....	28,012
Subject to draft.....	99,882

At the same time, the sheriffs returned the whole number of volunteers claimed by counties at 41,529.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The Report of Adjutant-General Augustus Gaylord, of Jan. 1863, is an octavo of 208 pages, containing a great deal of interesting and important matter relating to the military operations of the State to Jan. 1, 1863.

* A communication from Adjutant-General Gaylord, dated Dec. 16, 1863, enables us to present a summary of the whole number of men furnished by Wisconsin, to Nov. 1, 1863. This summary will be found at the foot of the table of Wisconsin volunteers. The aggregate contribution of men from Wisconsin to that date was 42,585. This is exclusive of the draft of Nov. 1863.

The judicial power of Minnesota is vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Courts of Probate, Justices of the Peace, and such other courts inferior to the Supreme Court as the Legislature may, by a two-thirds vote, establish. The Supreme Court, with original jurisdiction in such remedial cases as are prescribed by law, and appellate jurisdiction in all cases, both in law and equity, consists of a Chief-Justice and two Associate Justices, elected by the people at large, to hold office for seven years and until their successors are qualified. The Legislature, by a two-thirds vote, may increase the number of Associate Justices to four. There are no trials by jury in this court. The court appoints a Reporter of its decisions. The clerk is chosen by the people for three years and until his successor is qualified. The Supreme Court holds two sessions annually, at St. Paul, on the 1st days of July and December respectively. There are six judges of the District Courts, elected in single districts for seven years and until their successors are chosen. A clerk for these courts is chosen in each county for four years. The District Courts have original jurisdiction in all cases in law and equity where over $100 is in controversy, and in criminal cases where the punishment may be imprisonment for over three months, or a fine of over $100. There are Probate Courts in each organized county, and the judges are elected for two years. Justices of the Peace are elected in each county for two years. Their jurisdiction in civil cases does not exceed $100, and in criminal cases they cannot imprison over three months, nor fine over $100. The justices of the Supreme and District Courts can hold no other office, Federal or State, nor be eligible during their term to any other than a judicial office; and their compensation cannot be diminished during their continuance in office.

Valuation and Taxation.—For the tax-levy of 1863, the property in the State was valued in 1862 at $50,000,000, on which there was assessed a tax of 2½ mills for State revenue, yielding $75,000, and a tax of 2 mills for interest on the State loans, yielding $60,000,—in all, $135,000. Of this amount, only $84,375 was expected to be available during the year. The comparative yield of revenue from taxation in the three years previous to 1863 stood thus:—Taxes collected, 1860, $111,919; 1861, $100,187; 1862, $133,002.

State Debt.—The funded debt of the State consists of $250,000, in 8 per cent. bonds, and the war loan, of $100,000, in 7 per cent. bonds,—in all, $350,000.

Banks.—Minnesota, in January, 1863, had seven banks. The aggregate of their circulation was $197,613,—an increase of $116,377 over the circulation of January 1, 1862. This currency was secured by deposits of the bonds of Minnesota and of the United States.

Common Schools.—The Department of Public Instruction of Minnesota is unable to present to the people of that State any of the usual statistics showing the condition and working of the common schools of the State. This fact is declared in the Superintendent's report, dated December 25, 1862. The causes given for a result so much to be regretted are the meagre, crude, confused, and unsatisfactory reports made to the Department. These causes are in turn the effects of another,—as the Superintendent also says that no session of the Legislature since the organization of the State has been allowed to pass without some reconstruction or alteration of the whole common-school system. No law is left to stand long enough to become familiar before it is supplanted by a new one, and that new one is soon supplanted by another. Minnesota, therefore, stands almost alone among her sisters as contributing no material to the educational statistics of the country. That her common-school affairs are in this unsatisfactory state is not to be accounted for by want of means; for the system there, as in all the new States of the West, is amply endowed by grants of public lands by Congress, which grants are already yielding a large income. In the year 1862, 38,147 acres were sold, the products of the sale amounting to $242,532.

Normal School at Winona.—The Legislature of Minnesota having failed to make an appropriation for the Normal School, its operations were suspended during the time covered by the Superintendent's report: there is, consequently, no information of a fresh character from that school,

NORTHWESTERN COLLEGE.—This institution is located at Wasioja, Dodge co., and was formerly known as "Minnesota Seminary." It has lately been invested with college-powers by the Legislature, under the name of the Northwestern College. At the date of the Superintendent's report, considerable progress had been made towards the completion of the college-building, without incurring any debt. During the year, 173 students were in attendance, 85 of whom were males, and 88 females. Of the whole number of students, 13 were in the Normal Department, 20 in the Female College, 99 in the Preparatory Department, and the remainder in the Primary Department. The cost of supporting the college is not given; but a general statement is made that the current expenses are defrayed from the current income.

DEAF AND DUMB AND BLIND AND INSANE.—No institutions for the education and care of these classes of unfortunates have yet been established in the State of Minnesota. The Legislature, at the session of 1862, adopted a resolution authorizing the Governor to ascertain on what terms such persons could be admitted into the proper institutions of other States. At a subsequent session of the Legislature, a proposition from the Iowa Institution for the Insane being found to be the most reasonable, the Governor was authorized to place in that institution a number of the destitute insane persons of the State, not exceeding ten, and an appropriation to the amount of $2000 was made to defray the expenses incident thereto. Under this authorization, the Governor had sent to the Iowa Institution for the Insane six persons, to be supported there at the expense of Minnesota. Nothing is reported concerning the deaf, dumb, and blind.

STATE PUBLIC LANDS.—The public lands of the State are as follow:—

1. Sections 16 and 36 in each and every township for the use of schools.

2. Seventy-two sections of land for the use and support of a State University.

3. Ten entire sections of land for the purpose of erecting State buildings.

4. All the salt springs in the State, not exceeding twelve in number, with six sections of land adjoining, or as contiguous as may be, for the use of the State, as the Legislature may direct.

5. The whole of those swamp and overflowed lands, made unfit thereby for cultivation,—the consideration of the grant being that the proceeds of the lands be applied exclusively to their reclamation.

6. 120,000 acres donated to the State to provide colleges for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts.

As far as the public surveys have progressed, the State is entitled to 1,256,320$\frac{44}{100}$ acres of land for school purposes.

Of this amount, there is included in Indian and half-breed reservations about 32,000 acres.

MINNESOTA STATE PRISON, STILLWATER,—John S. Proctor, Warden.—The report of the warden for the year ending December 1, 1862, shows that the number of convicts remaining December 1, 1861, was 22; the number received during the year following was 7,—making the whole number confined during the year, 29. Of these, 6 were discharged,—leaving the number of convicts remaining in prison at the date of the report, 23. Of the 7 convicted during the year 1862, 2 were born in the United States, and 5 were of foreign birth. The crimes for which these 7 were sentenced were—larceny, 2; robbery, 3; violent assaults, 2. The expenses of the prison for the year were $6888, which was defrayed in part by earnings of the prisoners to the amount of $3729. The balance of the expenses was paid by the State.

THE INDIAN MASSACRE OF 1862.—In the month of August, 1862, Minnesota was afflicted by one of the most awful visitations that can befall a civilized State. On the 17th of that month, four Indians belonging to one of the bands resident on the borders of Minnesota murdered a family of six persons at Acton, in Messler county. This seemed to be the signal for a general uprising among the Sioux Indians in that neighborhood, and for several weeks afterwards a broad tract of country was laid waste, the houses burned, and the inhabitants murdered or carried off into captivity. No language can fully express the fiendish outrages perpetrated during this saturnalia of savage cruelty. More than 500 persons were butchered in cold blood: men and women in the prime of life, unoffending old age, and helpless infancy, were alike the victims. The theatre of depredations extended from Otter Tail Lake and Fort Abercrombie, on the Red River, to the Iowa boundary, over a front of 200 miles, and from the western border of the State eastwardly to its heart at Forest City,—an area of 20,000 square miles. The property destroyed or carried off as plunder amounted to millions of dollars, including large supplies of arms and ammunition stolen from the Government and from private stores on the Indian reservations. A military force was hastily set on foot by the State authorities, and placed under command of General Sibley, who checked the massacre, rescued the captives, and, having beaten the Indians in two battles at Birch Coolie and Wood Lake, captured 2000 of them, the rest being scattered as fugitives in all directions. These Indian captives were subsequently tried, and a large number of them, being found guilty, were sentenced to be hanged. The final execution of the law, however, was only carried out upon 38 of the assassins. The damage done to that portion of the State which was the scene of the massacre will not be recovered for years to come. For more than a month, fully one-tenth part of the population of Minnesota were fugitives from their devastated homes, and dependent on the charities of their distant neighbors and of the generous people of other States for the necessaries of life. In the month of September there were 6590 of these fugitives receiving aid in the St. Peter district, 728 in the Minneapolis district, 243 in the Anoka district, and 616 in the St. Paul district.

MINNESOTA AND THE WAR.—The first regiment of this State was raised at and near Fort Snelling, about the 1st of May, 1861. It was for the three-months service, and mustered 930 men, under command of Colonel Willis A. Gorman. Subsequently it was reorganized for the three-years service under the same colonel, retaining the same number. From that time to the end of December, 1862,* the State had placed in the field 12,266 men. Of these, 10,136 were for three years, 1200 for one year, and 930 for three months. They were organized into 11 regiments of infantry, 1 squadron of cavalry, 2 batteries of artillery, 2 companies of sharpshooters, and 1 regiment of mounted rangers. A statement more in detail will be found in the table annexed to this article.

The Sioux Indian War.—Besides the troops contributed to the armies of the United States, Minnesota was called, by a terrible outbreak among the Sioux Indians, in August and September, 1862, to set on foot a military expedition for the protection and defence of the people in her border counties. As a matter of history, this has been already noticed. The force here referred to was raised almost spontaneously,—the volunteers in the expedition being called on to furnish their own rations, and many of them their own arms. The total force was 5500, of whom 2721 were soldiers of the United States,—the remainder being composed as follows:—Citizens armed by the State, 1227; citizens armed with their own guns, 1152; mounted infantry, 400: total State force, 2779. These volunteers turned out at a most critical period, and rendered valuable service.

Militia.—An enrolment of the militia of Minnesota was made in the fall of 1862, from the returns of which it appears that the men liable to military duty in the State numbered at that time 36,296.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The two Reports of Adjutant-General Oscar Malmros, made in September, 1862, and January, 1863, occupy about 610 pages of the Minnesota Executive documents. Besides the ordinary details of military operations, they contain quite a full account of the Sioux Indian massacre, and subsequent war, in 1862.

Notes in circulation $8,800

COMMON SCHOOLS.—Statistics from the report of S. M. Thorp, Superintendent of Public Instruction, dated Jan. 1, 1863:—Whole number of school districts in the State as organized, 204; number of reports from District Clerk, 304; whole number of children between five and twenty-one years of age in the State (males, 7911, females, 6065), 14,766; number of such children enrolled in the schools during the year (males, 4721, females, 3872), 8593; average number of months the schools have been taught, 3; number of teachers employed in the State (males, 11, females, 199), 210; average salary of teachers per month (males, $16.25, females, $10.89), $13.57; total paid for teachers' wages, $14,009.67; total expenses for repairs, fuel, and other incidentals, $1747.23; amount of school money received from the County Treasurer, $4145.45; amount raised by district taxes for school purposes, $10,381.81; total value of the school-houses in the State, $10,432.50; total value of school apparatus in the State, $320.

School Fund and School Tax.—Although the State of Kansas, like every other new State of the West, is amply endowed with lands for the establishment of a fund for school purposes, the fund itself has not yet been realized. The lands granted as the basis of the School Fund number 1,371,280 acres. Very little or none at all of this land has yet been sold. The State taxes levied for school purposes for distribution in 1863 amounted to $19,289. Besides this State tax, the school districts are authorized to levy taxes for school purposes, amounting in the aggregate to 1½ per cent. of the assessed value of property in said districts.

SURVEY OF THE STATE.—The whole number of townships in Kansas is 2273, of which there had been surveyed, to Dec. 30, 1862, 626 townships. There had also been surveyed 765 townships which include Indian lands. The whole number of townships unsurveyed in the State was, at that time, 1508.

STATE UNIVERSITY.—Under a clause in the Constitution of the State, which requires that provision shall be made by law for the establishment of a State University at some eligible and central point, the Legislature passed an act, Feb. 20, 1863, locating the University in or adjacent to the city of Lawrence. The building is to be erected upon a tract of not less than 40 acres of land. The condition of the act of location is that the citizens of Lawrence, or some one of them, shall deposit $15,000 in money with the State Treasurer within six months after the location. In default of this, the State University is to be located at Emporia, in Lyon county, upon any eligible tract of land of not less than eighty acres adjacent to that town, which land is to be donated and secured to the State in "fee simple," as a site for said university, within twelve months after this portion of the act shall take effect.

NORMAL SCHOOL.—A State Normal School, to be established at Emporia, in Lyon county, was provided for by an act of the Legislature passed March 3, 1863. It is to be exclusively for the purpose of instructing persons, both male and female, in the art of teaching, in the various branches which pertain to a good common-school education, in the mechanic arts, in the arts of husbandry and agricultural chemistry, and in the fundamental laws of the United States in what regards the rights and duties of citizens. The act requires that a tract of land of not less than twenty acres adjacent to the town of Emporia shall be donated and secured to the State in "fee simple," as a site for said Normal School, within twelve months from the publication of the act. All the lands granted to the State of Kansas, adjoining or belonging to each of the salt springs owned by the State, and the sections of land upon which each of the said salt springs is located, and one additional section, are set apart and reserved as a perpetual endowment for the support and maintenance of the Normal School so established. The proceeds of the sale of said lands are to be invested in stocks of the United States, the State of Kansas, or some other safe stocks yielding not less than six per cent., and the interest is to be inviolably appropriated by the Legislature for the support of the Normal School.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.—At its January session in 1863, the Legislature of Kansas passed an act locating the Agricultural College established by the State in pursuance of the act of Congress donating public lands for such purposes. The college is to be situated in Riley county, on a tract of land at the time belonging to the Blue Mount Central College Association. The locating act is made conditional upon the transfer and delivery to the State by the said College Association of all its apparatus, library, &c. An act passed March 3, 1863, by the Kansas Legislature, provides for the organization of the Agricultural College. A Board of Regents is established, consisting of the Governor, Secretary of State, Superintendent of Public Instruction, the College President, and nine others, to be appointed by the Governor, not more than three of whom shall be members of the same religious denomination. This board constitutes the "body corporate." The college is to consist of four departments:—1st, Agriculture; 2d, Mechanic Arts; 3d, Military Science and Tactics; 4th, Literature and Science. It is to be opened to all persons, under regulations to be prescribed by the Board of Regents. The 90,000 acres of land granted to the State by Congress to endow a college for the benefit of agriculture and the mechanic arts, is to be used solely for the endowment of said Kansas State Agricultural College,—the principal to be invested according to law, and the interest arising to be used exclusively for salaries and other current expenses of the establishment.

DEAF AND DUMB, BLIND AND INSANE.—The State of Kansas thus far has no institution for the education of the deaf and dumb, nor for the education of the blind and insane, although her Constitution requires that such benevolent institutions shall be fostered and supported. The Legislature, however, has made a beginning. $1500 were appropriated by that body, in 1863, for the purpose of assisting P. A. Emery as teacher of the deaf and dumb, allowing him $4 per week for board and tuition for every resident deaf-mute scholar between the ages of 8 and 21, receiving instructions from him or his assistants. At the same session the Legislature authorized the appointment of a Board of Commissioners to locate a State Insane Asylum in the township of Ossawattomie, in the county of Miami, within which they are to select a tract of land, of not less than 160 acres, affording practicable building-stone, water, and other facilities for the erection and convenience of suitable building for the asylum.

AGRICULTURAL AND OTHER STATISTICS.—Kansas has made wise provision for collecting each year the agricultural and other important statistics of the State. It has recently been directed by law that every county assessor in the State shall, at the time of making lists of property for taxation each year, require every person in the county to make a statement, specifying the number of acres he may have had in wheat, rye, barley, corn, buckwheat, oats, potatoes, sorghum, flax, hemp, cotton, and tobacco, and also a statement of the quantities of each of said products raised by him in the preceding year; also a statement of the number of mules, horses, cattle, sheep, and hogs over six months old, owned by him. At the same time, the assessors are to ascertain and set down, in tables prepared for that purpose, lists of all persons in each county who are deaf and dumb, or blind, or idiots, setting forth their names and other particulars relating to their identity and condition. These statements are to be returned to the Auditor, who is to tabulate them for the information of the Legislature and the people of the State.

KANSAS STATE PENITENTIARY.—No building exclusively devoted to the purposes of a State penitentiary has yet been erected. An act providing for the construction of such a building was passed by the Legislature in February, 1863. The commissioners authorized by this act are to make arrangements for the temporary confinement of the State convicts until the building is erected. The new penitentiary has been located near the city of Leavenworth, where the commissioners have purchased a site containing 40 acres of land, paying for the same $660. In the mean time, the State convicts are confined and provided for in the Leavenworth county jail. During the year 1862, 32 prisoners were kept there on account of the State, 18 of whom were discharged before the end of the year, leaving 14 still in confinement on the 1st of January, 1863. The expense for the year on account of State convicts was $4271. John P. Mitchell, Deputy Sheriff and Jailer of Leavenworth county, has charge of the State convicts as Warden.

KANSAS AND THE WAR.—The official record of the military operations of the State of Kansas is not full enough to enable us to present as complete an exhibit of her contributions of men to the army of the United States as we have in the case of nearly all the other States. Every fact, however, that can be eliminated from the Adjutant-General's report has been used, together with information from other sources, to make the subjoined table, exhibiting the particulars relating to the Kansas volunteers, approximate as nearly as possible to all the others. The numbers given in the column showing the strength of the several regiments are not the numbers at the original muster. They are of much later date, being from the reports returned to the Adjutant-General's office late in 1862, after the regiments had been reduced by service, battle, and disease. Including Colonel R. B. Mitchell's three-months regiment, Kansas had placed in the field to December, 1862, 12 regiments and 2 batteries, which, at an average of 900 for each regiment and 100 for each battery, would have made an original strength of 11,000. In addition to the troops named in the table, 2 regiments of Indians were organized in Kansas from the fugitives driven from their reservations in the Indian Territory.

Militia of the State.—Returns of an enrolment made in 1862 show the aggregate of men liable to military duty to be 10,605. There were 180 companies of volunteer militia organized in the State in 1861, and 37 more were organized in 1862. Many of these companies entered the service entire in 1861–62.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The report of Adjutant-General Charles Chadwick, dated Dec. 31, 1862, occupies 54 pages of the volume of Kansas Executive Documents. It contains rosters of the officers of the State militia and of the volunteers.

* The 1st Regiment was raised in May, 1861, as a 3-months regiment, but was subsequently reorganized under the same number, and mustered into the service for three years, June 1, 1861.

† The 2d Regiment, after serving for three months as infantry, during which time it fought in the severe battle at Wilson's Creek, Mo., was reorganized as cavalry under Colonel Bassett, and entered the service for 3 years, March, 1862.

‡ The numbers given in this column only show the strength of the regiments as they stood in December, 1862, after being reduced by battle and disease. We can find no record of their strength at muster.

§ The 3d and 4th, being incomplete, were consolidated in March, 1862, to form the 10th.

‖ The Adjutant-General, being of the Governor's staff, may go out of office with the retiring Governor Stanford.

The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, Comptroller, Attorney-General, Surveyor-General, and Superintendent of Public Instruction, are chosen by the people for a term of four years, commencing on the first Monday in December succeeding their election. The general election is held on the first Wednesday in September, but the Superintendent of Public Instruction is chosen at the elections held for judges. The State Printer, Clerk of the Supreme Court, and Harbor Commissioners, are also chosen by the people. Senators, 40 in number, elected for four years, and Representatives, 80 in number, elected for two years, compose the Legislature. Under the amended Constitution, the Legislature now meets in regular session biennially, commencing on the first Monday in December, in the odd years 1863, 1865, &c. The number of Senators must be at least one-third the number of Representatives, and not more than one-half. Sessions of the Legislature are restricted to 120 days. The compensation of the members of the Legislature is $10 per day for the first 90 days of the session, and for the remainder of the session $5 per day. The President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House are each allowed $12 per day.

Under the amendments to the Constitution adopted in 1862, the judicial power of California is vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, County Courts, Probate Courts, in justices of the peace, and in such other inferior courts as the Legislature may establish. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief-Justice and four Associate Justices, chosen by the qualified electors of the State at special elections, at which no other than judicial officers shall be elected, except the Superintendent of Public Instruction. The term of office for the justices of the Supreme Court is ten years, commencing with the first day of January next succeeding their election. The justices of the Supreme Court named in the foregoing table were elected at a special election held for the purpose in September, 1863. Their term of office commenced on the first day of January, 1864, on which day it was appointed that lots should be drawn so that the term of one justice shall expire every two years, commencing with January, 1866, in order that a justice may be chosen every second year. The justice having the shortest term to serve is Chief-Justice. No information of the allotment made in January, 1864, had been received when these sheets were sent to press. By the new Constitution, the Supreme Court has appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity, in all cases at law involving the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, toll, fine, &c., or in which the matter in controversy amounts to $300; also in all cases arising in the Probate Courts; and in all criminal cases amounting to felony, on questions of law alone. It has power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and all writs necessary and proper to the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Each justice may issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State in behalf of any person held in custody, and may make the writ returnable before himself, the court, or any other judge of the Supreme, District, or County Courts. The Supreme Court holds four sessions every year at Sacramento, commencing respectively on the first Monday in January, April, July, and October.

For District Court purposes, the amendments to the Constitution direct the division of the State into fourteen judicial districts, subject to alteration from time to time by a two-thirds vote of all the members elected to both Houses of the Legislature. In each of said districts there must be a District Court, the judge of which is chosen by the qualified electors of the district at the special judicial elections provided for the election of justices of the Supreme Court. The district judges hold their offices for six years from the first day of January next succeeding their election. They have original jurisdiction in all the cases in equity and at law recited in the foregoing definition of the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. They also have criminal jurisdiction in criminal cases not otherwise provided for; and any district judge may issue his writ of habeas corpus in behalf of any person held in custody in his district. The following table gives a list of the judges elected under these amendments in September, 1863, and also a list of the counties embraced in each district.

County Courts.—Each organized county in the State has, under the new Constitution, a County Court, the judge of which is elected by the qualified voters of the county at the special judicial elections. He holds his office for four years from the first day of January next succeeding his election. The County Courts have original jurisdiction of actions of forcible entry and detainer, insolvency, nuisance, and of all such special cases as are not otherwise provided for; and also such criminal jurisdiction as the Legislature may prescribe. They have appellate jurisdiction from inferior courts, and are required to hold Probate Courts in their respective counties; and they have power to issue writs of habeas corpus in behalf of any person held in custody in their respective counties.

Finances.

From the Report of the State Treasurer, dated Dec. 15, 1862.

Balance in the Treasury, Dec. 14, 1861	$489,784 48
Receipts from Dec. 14, 1861, to Dec. 14, 1862	1,544,607 36
Total resources for the year	$2,034,391 84
Total payments from Dec. 14, 1861, to Dec. 14, 1862	1,365,919 92
Balance in Treasury, Dec. 14, 1862	$668,471 72

Taxes, Licenses, &c.	$1,463,632 06
Stamps	62,374 93
Fees, &c. from State officers	18,600 35
	$1,544,607 36

The principal items of expenditure were as follow:—

Executive offices	$124,951 80
Legislature	142,499 66
State Prison	44,332 39
Printing	60,034 02
State-House	$20,187 80
Capitol	33,580 69
Donations to Charitable Institutions, &c.	126,742 60

Benefit of sick	2,157 71
State Library	6,982 39
Decedents' Estates	2,286 67

The balance of $668,471.72 at the close of the fiscal year, as above stated, must have been simply a balance of accounts, as there are strong expressions of complaint through all the State reports of arrearages of pay, of heavy charges paid to get warrants discounted, &c. &c. All indicate an empty and embarrassed public treasury at that time. There was reason to believe that a better condition of affairs would prevail in 1863; but no accounts for that year are yet published down to the time when this is written (Dec. 1863).

GRAPE CULTURE.—This has grown to be a very important branch of the agriculture of California. In 1855 all the vines in the State did not number 1,000,000; but in 1862 the number had increased to 10,592,762. The county assessors report 343,471 gallons of wine made in 1861; but a committee of the Legislature reject these returns as erroneous, and add that the wine product of 1862 was 700,000 gallons. It is claimed in a memorial prepared by this committee that California will soon produce more wine than all the other States. The average number of vines to the acre in California is 900; and an acre of vineyard in full bearing in that State produces 500 gallons per annum. The 10,592,762 vines in that State must cover 11,500 acres; and this number of acres, at 500 gallons to the acre, should yield when in full bearing 5,750,000 gallons. Allowing 33 per cent. for consumption, the yield of wine for commerce should be 3,700,000. These are the estimates of the committee. Most of the vines of the State are still quite young. The value of the "must" (the freshly expressed juice of the grape) is 15 cents per gallon at the vineyard. Ten per cent. of the must is lost, by evaporation and sediment, in the first year; the cost for casks averages 10 cents per gallon; the cost of shipping from Los Angeles to San Francisco is about 10 cents per gallon; and, when bottled, the cost per gallon for bottles is 30 cents.

The following table will show which are the great vineyard counties of the State:—

COMMON SCHOOLS.

General Summary of Statistics for 1863.

John Swett, Esq., Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of California, furnishes the subjoined summary of statistics, which presents a general view of the condition and progress of the public schools of the State, for the school year of ten months, from Nov. 1, 1862, to Aug. 31, 1863:—

In the school report of 1862, the State Normal School is referred to in terms of general commendation, but no statistics are given. The annual appropriation asked for support of the school was $6000.

ASYLUM FOR THE DEAF, DUMB, AND BLIND, MISSION DOLORES, NEAR SAN FRANCISCO,—Mrs. Clark, Matron.—The Committee on Asylums of the Legislature reported, March 26, 1863, that there were 50 pupils in the asylum, of whom 22 were blind, and 28 deaf and dumb. No other particulars are stated, though the asylum is commended in strong terms to the patronage of the Legislature.

ORPHANS' ASYLUMS, SAN FRANCISCO.—The same committee of the Legislature visited the Catholic and Protestant Orphan Asylums of San Francisco, and reported the Catholic institution as containing "250 orphan girls, clean, healthy, and happy." It is the oldest institution of the kind in the State. An additional building had just been erected, at a cost of $12,000. The committee recommend an appropriation of $8000. The Protestant Asylum contained 81 children,—45 boys and 36 girls,—and its condition and success were such as gave the visiting committee much pleasure.

STATE REFORM SCHOOL, MARYSVILLE,—George C. Gorham, Superintendent.—The first commitment to this establishment was made in December, 1861. From that time to Dec. 8, 1862, the whole number received was 33,—boys, 30, girls, 3. Of these there were committed for crime 11,—boys, 9, girls, 2; committed by parents and guardians, 21,—boys, 20, girl, 1; committed on his own application, 1 boy. The youngest child was 6 years of age, the oldest 16. During the year 2 eloped, 3 were returned to their parents, and 3 were discharged reformed. Expense not stated.

STATE INSANE ASYLUM, STOCKTON,—W. P. Tilden, Resident Physician.—Statistics from the Superintendent's Report, dated Dec. 1, 1863. The following table shows the principal facts and results of the year: the number of patients, Dec. 1, 1861; the number received, discharged, died, and eloped since that time, and the number remaining at the expiration of the year:—

Of the 301 cases received during the year, 93 appear to have been discharged cured. There is no distinct statement of that fact, however. The expenditures for the year were $64,791.

CALIFORNIA STATE PRISON, SAN QUENTIN.—The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, and Secretary of State constitute the Board of Inspectors of this prison. From their report, dated Feb. 3, 1863, the following statistics are taken:—

The commitments in 1862 were but 67 per cent. of the number committed in 1860, and were less than in any year for 10 years. The number under the head of died and killed for 1862 is 15; of these there were 8 deaths from gunshot wounds received during a revolt of the prisoners in July, 1862. 24 others were wounded at the same time, but they all recovered. This prison is peculiarly liable to revolts, owing to the circumstance that large numbers, ranging from 40 to 60, are confined in a single room; and it is equally liable to escapes, from its insecure construction, and from the employment of the prisoners in brickyards outside of the prison-buildings. These circumstances will account for the large number of 90 escapes in a single year. Of the 577 prisoners remaining, Dec. 1862, the convictions were as follow:—

Murder, 7; murder, second degree, 64; manslaughter, 41; assault, with intent to kill, 30; assault with deadly weapon, 14; mayhem, 3; rape, 9; assault, with intent to rape, 12; crime against nature, 3; robbery, 59; assault, with intent to rob, 3; burglary, 63; attempt to commit burglary, 1; arson, 7; attempt to commit arson, 3; forgery, 4; perjury, 2; embezzlement, 1; counterfeiting, 8; receiving stolen goods, 3; breaking jail, 1; felony, 3; grand larceny, 231; attempt to commit grand larceny, 4; no charge specified, 1: total, 577.

The nativities of these prisoners were: native-born, 235; foreign-born, 342, and of the foreign-born 47 were Chinese. Expenditures, from Jan. 18, 1862, to Dec. 31, 1862, $59,488; to the credit of which there was due the prison on sundry accounts, for convict labor, &c. $21,212, reducing the net expenditures to $38,276. Of this latter amount $13,123 was expended for improvements to the prison, leaving the actual cost of supporting the prison for the period above stated, $25,153.

The Great Floods of 1861–2.—The Report of the Surveyor-General contains some interesting notabilia of the great floods in the valleys of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers of December 9, 1861, and January 10, 1862, which converted those valleys into a vast lake,—to nearly the extent of Lake Michigan,—and which destroyed millions of dollars' worth of property. There is unquestionable evidence, in the age of the trees swept from the banks of those rivers and in other like circumstances, that there had been no such overflow for several centuries. But the most interesting particulars to the general reader, as well as to the meteorologist, are those connected with the immense quantities of rain that fell during the season of the flood. At Sacramento, the fall of rain during the month of December was 8.6 inches, and in January over 15 inches. But, heavy as this is, it is slight compared with the rain-fall recorded at a station in Nevada county by Mr. William A. Begole, communicated by request of the Surveyor-General. This record begins on the 23d of December, subsequent to the first flood. During the seven days succeeding the 23d, the fall of rain was 7.5 inches; in the next nine days it was 6.65 inches; on the next day (Jan. 10), 5.8 inches; and on Jan. 11, 5.5 inches: making a total of 2 feet 1½ inches of rain in nineteen days, nearly 12 inches of which fell within the forty-eight hours ending with Jan. 11. Between Jan. 11 and Jan. 23 (12 days) the additional fall of rain was over 19 inches, making the entire fall for the month, from Dec. 23, 45 inches, or three feet nine inches! In November, and early in December, large quantities of snow had fallen in the mountains to the north and east of Sacramento. This was followed by a season of extraordinary temperature. The average for the month of December at Sacramento, for eight years prior to 1861, had been 46° 31′, while the average for December, 1861, was 50° 98′; and for several days before and during the flood the thermometer stood as follows: on the 7th, 56°; on the 8th, 57° 66′; on the 9th, 51° 66′. This extraordinary temperature, and the accompanying warm rains, extended to the mountains, and melted all the snow. Similar phenomena marked the flood of January.

California and the War.—The Adjutant-General's Report of this State does not furnish sufficient materials to complete a table as full as those prepared for the other States. That annexed to this article is the nearest approximation that could be made. Estimating the number of men in each of the seven regiments furnished to the army by that State, the aggregate contribution of men by California was 6850 to Jan. 1, 1863. They were organized into 2 regiments of cavalry and 5 regiment of infantry. There can be no doubt that if the State had not been so far removed from the theatre of active hostilities a much larger number of the citizens of California would have been in the military service of the United States.

Militia.—The militia of the State, as enrolled in 1862, numbered 142,141, officers and men, of whom about 5000 were armed and disciplined in 1862.

Adjutant-General's Report.—The Report of Adjutant-General William C. Kibbe, dated Dec. 15, 1862, is a handsome octavo of 103 pages, containing rosters of the regimental officers of the volunteers and of the State militia.

The Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, and State Printer are elected by the people for four years. The general election for State and county officers is held on the first Monday in June biennially. The last election was held June 2, 1862. The Legislative Assembly is composed of a Senate and House of Representatives, and convenes biennially at Salem on the second Monday in September. The next session will commence September 13, 1864. The Senate is composed of 16 members, elected for four years. The House of Representatives is composed of 34 members, elected for two years. The compensation of the members of the Legislative Assembly is three dollars per day for the first forty days of a regular session, or the first twenty days of an extra session, and mileage at the rate of three dollars for every twenty miles of travel to and from the capital.

Judiciary.

The judicial power of the State is vested in a Supreme Court and five Circuit Courts. The Supreme Court consists of five justices (chosen in districts by the electors thereof), who are also judges of the Circuit Court in their respective districts. Their term of office is six years. The Supreme Court holds one term annually at the seat of government (Salem), on the first Monday in September.

There is one prosecuting attorney in each judicial district, elected by the people for two years.

Finances.

The reports of the State officers of Oregon being made biennially to conform to the meetings of the Legislature, and the last session having been held in September, 1862, there is but little additional information from that State. Its financial affairs for the two years ending September 10, 1862, were set forth in detail in the National Almanac for 1863, and only the aggregates are now repeated, viz.: Resources for the two years, $95,687.05; expenditures for the same period, $55,831.55; balance, September 10, 1862, $39,855.50.

Estimated Expenditures for the years 1863–4.

The Committee also recommended an increase of the annual tax levied for State purposes to three mills on the dollar, and a poll-tax of two dollars for State purposes, which were expected in the years 1863–4 to place in the State Treasury revenue to the following amounts:—

Approximate estimate of taxable property in the State in 1862	$20,000,000
At two mills on the dollar		$40,000
Approximate estimate of taxable property in the State for the year 1863	22,000,000

OREGON AND THE WAR.—This State, being so remote from the theatre of hostilities provoked by the rebellion, has but little to report in the way of military operations. An authorization was issued, however, in 1861, to raise a regiment of cavalry, the officers and strength of which have been courteously furnished by Adjutant-General Reed in manuscript. This is the only regiment mustered into the United States service from Oregon.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Established by acts of July 16, 1790, and March 3, 1791. Capital, Washington. Area, 50 square miles. Population, 1860, 75,080. This district is under the government of Congress.

This district is peculiar in both its political and geographical relations to the United States. The first article of the National Constitution, section 8, provides that Congress shall exercise exclusive legislation over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular States and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of government of the United States. In pursuance of this provision of the Constitution, Congress, by an act approved July 16, 1790, accepted from the States of Maryland and Virginia a district of territory, to be located on the river Potomac, for the permanent seat of the government of the United States. Acts of cession had been already passed by Maryland, Dec. 23, 1788, and by Virginia, Dec. 3, 1789. But there is quite an interesting piece of history connected with the subject antecedent to this action. The Congress of the Revolution was sometimes a fugitive, holding its sessions, as the chances of war required, at Philadelphia, Baltimore, Lancaster, Annapolis, and York, Pa. During the period between the conclusion of peace and the commencement of the present Government, it met at Princeton, Annapolis, Trenton, and New York. After the idea of a permanent Union had been executed in part by the adoption of the Articles of Confederation, the question presented itself of fixing a seat of government, and this immediately called forth intense interest and rivalry. That the place should be central, having regard to the population and territory of the Confederacy, was the only point common to the contending parties. Propositions of all kinds were offered, debated, and rejected. At length, on the 7th of October, 1783, the Congress being at Princeton, it was resolved that a building for the use of Congress be erected near the Falls of the Delaware. This was soon after modified by requiring suitable buildings to be also erected near the Falls of the Potomac, that the residence of Congress might alternate between those places. But the question was not allowed to rest; and at length, after frequent and warm debates, it was resolved that the residence of Congress should continue at one place; and commissioners were appointed with full power to lay out a district for a Federal town near the Falls of the Delaware, and in the mean time Congress assembled alternately at Trenton and Annapolis; but the Representatives of other States continued to exert themselves for their favorite localities. On the 23d of December, 1784, it was resolved to remove to the city of New York, and to remain there until the building on the Delaware should be completed; and accordingly, on the 11th of January, 1785, the Congress met at New York, where they continued to hold their sessions until the confederation gave place to the Constitution. The commissioners to lay out a town on the Delaware reported their proceedings to Congress, but no further steps were taken to carry the resolution into effect. Some proposed New York, others some convenient place on the banks of the Susquehanna. To the latter, Southern members—among whom was Mr. Madison—were strenuously opposed. All admitted the importance of the step about to be taken, involving, as it perhaps might have done, the safety of the Government itself. For a time any agreement appeared to be impossible; but the good genius of our system finally prevailed, and on the 16th of July, 1790, the act already referred to was passed and approved, containing the following clause:—

"That a district of territory on the river Potomac, at some place between the mouths of the Eastern branch and the Connogocheague, be, and the same is hereby, accepted, for the permanent seat of the Government of the United States."

The same act provided that Congress should hold its sessions at Philadelphia until the first Monday in November, 1800, when the Government should be removed to the district selected on the Potomac.

Under authority of this act, and that of an amendatory act approved March 3, 1791, a district of ten miles square was located, lying on both sides of the Potomac, and extending along that river from the Little Falls to the city of Alexandria, which was then at the extreme southern point of the square. From Alexandria the boundary extended across the Potomac and into Maryland on a surveyed line due northeast for ten miles, thence due northwest for ten miles, thence due southwest ten miles, recrossing the Potomac into Virginia, and thence due southeast to Alexandria. The lines and boundaries of the district so located were established, by proclamation of President Washington, March 30, 1791. Difficulty arose in the way of raising money to erect the necessary public buildings; and it was not until Washington made a personal appeal to the Legislature of Maryland that $100,000 were obtained for the purpose, and then only on a guarantee of payment on the pledge of the private credit of the commissioners. From the beginning Washington advocated the present seat of Government. Its establishment here was due, in a large measure, to his influence. The wings of the Capitol having been sufficiently prepared, the Government removed to this district on the 17th of November, 1800. At that time it was desolate in the extreme, with its long unimproved avenues and streets, its deep morasses, and its vast area covered with trees instead of houses. Washington projected the whole plan of the city bearing his name, upon a scale to accommodate the growth of centuries, and time enough remains to fill the measure of his great conception.

By the "Act concerning the District of Columbia," approved Feb. 27, 1801, Congress assumed full jurisdiction over the district, according to the design of the Constitution. By this latter act the district was divided into two counties, that part lying east of the Potomac (and in Maryland) being called Washington county, and that part lying west of the Potomac (and in Virginia) being called Alexandria county. On the 9th of July, 1846, Alexandria county was retroceded to Virginia, and since then the district is limited to the county of Washington, east of the Potomac, within which are the cities of Washington and Georgetown.

Each of the two cities mentioned has a municipal government of its own, with power to lay and collect taxes for municipal purposes; but the district, as a whole, is subject to the exclusive legislation of Congress. Under this patronage, the city of Washington has been enriched and adorned, at an expense of not less than $30,000,000, by the erection of costly and stately public edifices, the establishment of broad and beautiful public grounds and malls, and the construction of a noble aqueduct which commands nearly the whole volume of the waters of the Potomac for the uses of the city.

The Supreme Court of the District of Columbia was established by act of Congress, approved March 3, 1863. The same act abolished the former Circuit Court, District Court, and Criminal Court of the District. The Supreme Court consists of four Justices (one of whom is designated the Chief-Justice), appointed by the President of the United States, and who hold their offices during good behavior. It has general jurisdiction in law and equity, and the judges possess and exercise the same powers and jurisdiction formerly possessed and exercised by the judges of the Circuit Court of the District. Any one of the judges may hold a District Court, with the same powers, &c. as other District Courts of the United States; and any one of the judges may hold a Criminal Court for the trial of crimes and offences committed within the District, with the same powers, &c. as the old Criminal Court. Any final judgment, order, or decree of the court may be re-examined and reversed or affirmed in the Supreme Court of the United States, on writ of error or appeal. The Supreme Court of the District has appellate jurisdiction of all judgments of justices of the peace, and has power to remove said justices of the peace for cause. Three general terms of the court are to be held annually at Washington.

COMMON SCHOOLS, WASHINGTON CITY.—The common-school system of this city is under the direction of a Board of Trustees, of which the Mayor is ex officio President, and Francis S. Walsh, Esq., President pro tempore. The schools are supported from funds derived from a poll-tax of $1 per annum on every free white male citizen, and a tax of 10 cents upon the assessed value of all real and personal property. The receipts in 1862 were $27,414, and the expenditures were $30,990. In the month of Nov. 1863, the statistics of the common schools were as follow:—Grammar schools, 8; intermediate schools, 8; secondary schools, 27; primary schools, 16; total, 59; number of white children in the city between the ages of 5 and 15 years, 11,016; number between 15 and 20 years, 5061; number of pupils in the common schools, 3335; number of teachers, 63.

GOVERNMENT HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE, NEAR WASHINGTON,—C. H. Nicholls, A.M., M.D., Superintendent, &c.—This hospital is established under authority of an act of Congress, March 3, 1855, and its objects, as declared in that act, are "the most humane care and enlightened curative treatment of the Insane of the Army and Navy, and of the District of Columbia." All indigent insane persons residing in the District are entitled to its benefits. On the 30th of June, 1861, the hospital contained 180 patients, of whom 25 were from the army, 11 from the navy, 1 from the revenue cutter service, 4 from the Soldiers' Home, and 139 from the private residents of the District. Those from the District were classified as follows:—White males, 62; white females, 56; colored males, 5; colored females, 16. The admissions in the year ending June 30, 1862, were 185,—viz.: From the army, 139; navy, 15; Soldiers' Home, 1; from the District, white males, 14; white females, 8; colored males, 4; colored females, 4. The whole number under treatment during the year was 365,—males 281, females 84. During the year 153 were discharged,—males 134, females 19,—leaving in the hospital, June 30, 1862, males 147, females 65. Of those discharged, 103 had recovered, 16 were improved, and 34 died. Of the recoveries, 72 were from the army, 8 from the navy, 1 from the revenue cutter service, 3 from the Soldiers' Home, and 19 from the residents of the District. The expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1862, were $51,770.86, mainly defrayed by the national treasury. During the year ending June 30, 1863, larger numbers of patients were admitted than were ever received in the same time in any hospital in this country. Nearly all of these were from the army and navy; but the precise numbers are not at hand.

COLUMBIAN INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF, DUMB, AND BLIND, NEAR WASHINGTON,—Edward M. Gallaudet, M.A., Superintendent.—The number of pupils in this institution, July 1, 1862, was—blind, 6; deaf and dumb, 32; total, 38. The expenditures for the year were $8,608.57, mainly defrayed by the national treasury.

PENITENTIARY OF THE DISTRICT.—Statistics from the Report of H. J. King, Warden, dated Nov. 1, 1862. Number of prisoners, Oct. 1, 1861, 158; number received to Oct. 1, 1862, 174; total, 332; number discharged, &c. during the year, 201; number remaining, Oct. 1, 1862, 131. Expenditures for the year, $64,665.32, of which $27,897.31 was defrayed from the proceeds of labor of the prisoners, and the balance by the United States. At the close of the year ending Oct. 1, 1863, the whole number of convicts was 179, of whom 143 were transferred to the New York State Prison at Albany.

WASHINGTON AQUEDUCT.—This great work had progressed so far that water was admitted into it from the Potomac River at the Great Falls, fifteen miles from Washington, on the 5th of Dec. 1863. It is on a colossal scale, and will supply the wants of the national capital for a hundred years to come. The cost of the work to Dec. 1863, when the water was let in from the Potomac, was about $2,900,000.

EXTENSION OF THE CAPITOL.—This work, commenced in 1850, is still in progress. On the 2d of Dec. 1863, the colossal statue of Freedom, designed by the sculptor Crawford, was raised to its place at the top of the dome. The marble used in the Capitol extension to Oct. 31, 1862, cost $1,029,041, and the cutting and setting of the same cost $1,378,749. To the same period, 12,403,799 bricks had been used in the building. The new dome, which is of iron, has cost about $900,000.

THE ORGANIZED TERRITORIES OF THE UNITED STATES.

More than usual attention and space are devoted to the Territories in the Almanac this year, because they are objects of unusual interest and importance, and because the Congressional legislation on the subject since 1860 has worked extensive changes in the boundaries of those in existence at that time. In the following articles the boundaries of the Territories are described in the language or in the substance of the organic acts and of the several modifying acts. Sometimes a less cumbersome description of their limits is added in order to give a general idea of their situation. The acts establishing the Territories of Nevada, Dakota, and Colorado, the act admitting Kansas into the Union, and especially the acts establishing the Territories of Arizona and Idaho, have made all the old maps worse than useless. Precise as well as popular descriptions are, therefore, a necessity. Both are given in the following pages. The organized Territories are now nine in number, exclusive of the Indian Territory, viz.:—Arizona, Colorado, Dakota, Idaho, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, and Washington. Arizona occupies the western half of what was New Mexico, and is situated immediately east of Southern California; Colorado covers a portion of the old Territories of Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico, and Utah, and it adjoins the State of Kansas on the west; Dakota has absorbed a large portion of the old Territories of Nebraska and Minnesota, and it adjoins Minnesota on the west; Idaho embraces the western half of the former Territory of Nebraska and the eastern halves of the old Territories of Washington and Oregon, and it extends north and south from the British Possessions to the 41st degree of north latitude; Nebraska is reduced to the area between the Missouri River and the 27th degree of longitude west from Washington, and, in general terms, between the 40th and 43d degrees of north latitude, and it adjoins Iowa on the west; Nevada occupies the western half of what was Utah Territory, and it lies immediately east of Northern California; New Mexico is reduced to the eastern half of the former Territory of that name, and it is situated immediately west of Texas; Utah is limited to that portion of the former Territory of Utah which is comprised between the 32d and 38th degrees of longitude west from Washington, and the 37th and 42d degrees of north latitude, being reduced more than one-half; and Washington Territory is restricted to the western part of the old Territory situated between the 40th degree of longitude west from Washington City and the Pacific Ocean. From this general description of the changes effected in the Territorial boundaries by recent legislation, it will be understood at once that all the statements of population, area, &c. based upon the Census of 1860 are no longer applicable, and only mislead the reader. They are, therefore, excluded from their former places at the heads of the articles relating to the Territories respectively. Wherever late and reliable information on the same points could be obtained, it has been inserted instead. The areas are generally given from the subjoined table, prepared for the National Almanac by a competent draughtsman having access to the proper authorities at Washington.

Table *of the Approximate Areas of those States and Territories of the United States whose exact Superficies cannot yet be determined, by reason of the absence or unfinished state of the United States Land and other Instrumental Surveys. The judicial power of the Territory is vested in a Supreme Court, consisting of three judges, and such inferior courts as the Legislative Council may by law prescribe. The judges of the Supreme Court are appointed by the President, and hold their offices for four years. One term of the court must be held annually at the seat of the Territorial Government. For District Court purposes, the Territory is divided into three judicial districts, in each of which one of the justices of the Supreme Court holds the sessions. The Supreme and District Courts, respectively, possess Chancery as well as common-law jurisdiction.

MINERAL DISTRICTS.

Although some of the gold-bearing districts of Arizona were known and described years ago, it was not until the year 1863 that a knowledge of the great mineral wealth of the Territory became general. The explorations now in progress, the extraordinary discoveries recently made, the geographical position and the geological features of the Territory, all confirm the belief that the tract of land embraced within its limits is of unsurpassed richness in deposits of the precious metals. In the Report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office transmitted to Congress in December, 1863, that officer says that Arizona "is believed to be stocked with mineral wealth beyond that of any other Territory of equal extent" in the mining regions of the great plateau between the Rocky Mountains and the Sierra Nevada. The same report gives this further information concerning the discoveries and the mining operations of the new Territory. "The rich silver-mines of Nevada on the north, of Sonora on the south, which latter have been traced into and successfully worked in the southern part of the Territory (Arizona), recent discoveries in the valleys of the Upper Colorado and its tributaries and in western New Mexico and eastern Arizona, all point to this Territory as the grand centre of the immense mineral deposits of this region." The Commissioner quotes a letter to the Hon. John S. Watts, referring to this region, which describes the country north of the Gila as "rich in gold, silver, and copper. In the new mines there is plenty of timber, water, and grass. . . . I learn they have found diggings that pay $1500 to the man. . . . I think we will have one of the finest countries in the world." Another letter, quoted by Commissioner Edmunds, speaking of a neighboring district, says that "one company of nine men in July last took out fifty pounds of gold in ten days. The claim is situated on the top of one of the highest mountains in the vicinity. The gold is coarse, and is found from one to four inches below the surface. The tool most used is the butcher-knife. Walker's Diggings are fifty miles north of this, and in a different country, where there are plenty of wood, water, and grass. The gold-field is large. They have prospected one hundred miles; and every gulch and creek has gold in it."

II. COLORADO.

Organized March 2, 1861. Capital, Golden City. Area, 106,475 square miles. Estimated Population, 1863, 70,000, of whom 15,000 are tribal Indians, composed of the following tribes:—Camanches, Apaches, Kiowas, Coddoes, Arapahoes, Cheyennes, and Utes.

Colorado embraces the territory between the 37th and 41st parallels of north latitude, and the 102d and 109th degrees of longitude west from Greenwich (the 25th and 32d west from Washington), and is situated immediately west of the State of Kansas.

The judicial power of the Territory is vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Probate Courts, and justices of the peace. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief-Justice and two Associates, appointed by the President of the United States for a term of four years. One term of the Supreme Court must be held annually at the seat of the Territorial Government. For District Court purposes, the Territory is divided into three districts, in each of which one of the Justices of the Supreme Court holds the sessions. The Supreme and District Courts have Chancery as well as common-law jurisdiction.

PRINCIPAL TOWNS.—Denver City, a large town, is situated on the South Fork of the Platte River, 15 miles from the base of the Rocky Mountains. Population, 5000.

Golden City, the capital of the Territory, is situated at the base of the mountains, 15 miles from Denver. Population, 1000. The Government Land Office is at this place.

Central City, Nevada City, and Black Hawk Point, are situated in the mountains, about 40 miles west of Denver, and are in the region of the principal lode-mines known as Gregory Mines: they contain populations of about 5000 each.

Empire City is situated on North Clear Creek, 15 miles from Central City, in the mountains, and in a rich lode-mining country. Population, 1000.

Montgomery, Hamilton, and Torry,—all are towns of considerable size, situated 100 miles southwest of Denver City, in what is known as the Southwestern Lode-Mines.

Colorado City is situated near the base of Pike's Peak, on Fountaine Que Bouille, a tributary of Arkansas River, 100 miles south of Denver. Cañon City is 120 miles south of Denver, on the Arkansas River. Pueblo is situated southwest of Denver 120 miles, and 40 miles below Cañon City, on the Arkansas River. There are also several considerable settlements on the western slope of the Snowy Range Mountains, in the region of the silver-mines, and in the region of extensive quartz lode-mines.

MILITARY POSTS.—Camp Collins, established in 1862, is situated in the northern part of the Territory, on Cache-la-poudre Creek, 75 miles from Denver. Camp Wild, established in 1861, is situated near Denver City. Fort Lyon, established in 1860, is situated near the southeast corner of the Territory, on the Arkansas River. Fort Garland, established in 1858, is situated near the southwest corner of the Territory, on a tributary of the Rio Grande, in the Valley of St. Louis.

SCHOOLS are established in all the principal towns of the Territory; and at Denver City a large two-story brick edifice is being built, under the supervision of the Methodist Episcopal Church, designed for a female seminary, and will be completed during the next month or two, at a cost of $12,000. (Nov. 1863.)

AGRICULTURE.—Farms or ranches are being improved in all portions of the Territory, and grain of all kinds, and vegetables, are being raised in abundance.

There are four flouring-mills now in operation in the Territory,—one at Denver, one at Golden City, one at Colorado City, and one on the Huerfano.

NEWSPAPERS.—There are two daily papers published in Denver,—viz., the Daily Rocky Mountain News, and Daily Commonwealth: editors of the News, Messrs. Byers & Dailey; editor of the Commonwealth, Thomas Gibson.

RELIGIOUS DENOMINATIONS.—There are four churches in Denver,—Methodist, Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Roman Catholic,—all large, fine buildings, which would do credit to any town of 15,000 inhabitants. There are also several fine churches at Black Hawk Point, Central City, Golden City, and Nevada City.

There is a United States Branch Mint in Denver, which has been in operation since September, 1863. The first month's assaying in said mint amounted to $500,000, with a subsequent increase.

MINES AND MINING.—The mines yielded, for the year 1863, about $12,000,000. The Territory unquestionably possesses vast mineral wealth. Discoveries of gold were reported in 1858 as having been made by two companies of explorers, one from Georgia, the other from Lawrence, Kansas, but the locations named by them have not furnished any remunerative diggings. On the 6th of May, 1859, discoveries of rich placers were made on the waters of Clear Creek, an affluent of the South Fork of Platte, and an immense emigration to that point commenced the ensuing summer, accompanied with great suffering from the want of proper supplies of food, &c. The first gold was obtained from placer diggings, the quartz lodes being found charged with sulphuret of iron (iron pyrites, or fool's gold), it was thought that quartz-mining would prove unprofitable. In 1861, however, it was discovered that this sulphuret was very rich in gold, and the quartz-mills, which had been thrown aside as worthless, came again into demand. It is now found that these quartz lodes grow richer as they are opened to a greater depth. Gulch-mining is still carried on extensively, and with good results. On the western slope of the Snowy Mountains, extensive silver-mines have been discovered, and also gold in considerable quantities. Deposits of lead and quicksilver ores have also been found in the Territory. Near Denver City, at the base of the mountains, immense beds of coal have been discovered of a character analogous to the coal formations of Illinois. This discovery is highly important, not only as furnishing a needed supply of fuel to the Territory, which is scantily timbered, but also for the supply of the great Pacific Railway. Iron-ore is found in all parts of the Territory, and a furnace is being erected at Boulder for the manufacture of pig-iron.

Extracts from the Report of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, transmitted to Congress, December, 1863:—"Colorado Territory, resting upon the head-waters of the Platte and Arkansas Rivers and the western slope of the Rocky Mountains, is rich in mineral wealth, containing gold, silver, copper, iron, coal, salt, alabaster, limestone, and gypsum. None but gold-mines have been worked to any extent: these are proving remunerative both upon the placer and quartz veins. The coal-fields will only be resorted to when the supply of wood for fuel in the vicinity of the mills and towns is exhausted. The copper and iron mines will not be worked until labor shall be cheapened by a more abundant supply.

"Several hundred quartz-mills are now in successful operation in this Territory, and the quantity of gold is increased from month to month by the erection of new mills, opening of newly-discovered veins, and the accession of miners in the placers. The field for placer-mining is much restricted by the inadequate supply of water and the extreme fineness of the particles of gold in many localities.

"In the southwestern portion of the Territory, bordering upon Utah and New Mexico, are extensive deposits of both gold and silver yet unworked, but offering to the enterprising miner as liberal a compensation as any other locality which has been tested.

"There are large bodies of good agricultural lands in Colorado, the area of which may be increased to the full extent that water for irrigating purposes can be obtained. At present the cultivation of the soil is confined principally to the valleys of the streams and a few favored localities where irrigation has been found to be unnecessary.

"The extension of the Pacific Railroad westward will soon be favorably felt by every branch of industry in this Territory, and, with the facilities which that improvement will afford when carried to its western boundary, the population and products of Colorado will be doubled."

"COLORADO AND THE WAR.—There are no accessible official reports of the number of troops raised in Colorado for the national service; but it is claimed in the Territory that 2 regiments of cavalry, 1 of infantry, and 1 battery of artillery have been furnished. One of these regiments did good service in sustaining the national cause in New Mexico, and all have exercised a wholesome restraint over the troublesome Indians in the Territory. The 1st Infantry was organized in September, 1861, under command of Col. John M. Chivington; the 2d Regiment (cavalry) was organized by Col. J. H. Leavenworth.

III. DAKOTA.

Organized March 2, 1861. Capital, Yankton. Area, 152,500 square miles.

SITUATION AND BOUNDARIES.—Dakota lies immediately west of Minnesota and the northwestern part of Iowa. Its boundaries are as follows:—

"Commencing at a point in the main channel of the Red River of the North, where the 49th degree of north latitude crosses the same; thence up the main channel of the same, and along the boundary of the State of Minnesota, to Big Stone Lake; thence along the boundary-line of the said State of Minnesota to the Iowa line; thence along the boundary-line of the State of Iowa to the point of intersection of the Big Sioux and Missouri Rivers; thence up the Missouri River, and along the boundary-line of the Territory of Nebraska, to the mouth of the Niobrara or Running Water River; thence following up the same, in the middle of the main channel thereof, to the mouth of the Keha Paha or Turtle Hill River; thence up the said river to the 43d parallel of north latitude; thence due west to the present eastern boundary of the Territory of Idaho (which is the 104th degree of longitude west from Greenwich, or the 27th west from Washington); thence along said eastern boundary of Idaho to the 49th parallel of north latitude; thence east along the 49th degree of north latitude to the place of beginning. The Territory may be defined in general terms to embrace all the public domain lying between the 43d and 49th degrees of latitude, and between the State of Minnesota and the 104th meridian of west longitude."

REMARKS.—The climate of Dakota is mild and healthful. The soil is unsurpassed in richness, and well adapted to agriculture and grazing,—producing all the varieties of grains, fruits, and vegetables found in central Illinois. The principal settlements are Big Sioux Point, Elk Point, Bruley Creek, Vermillion, Yankton (the Territorial capital, on the Missouri River, 65 miles from the Iowa line, and nearly due west from Chicago), Bonhomme, Greenwood, and Fort Randall. The Yankton and Ponca Indians, who ceded to the Government their lands (about 14,000,000 of acres), also the Santee Sioux and Winnebago Indians (recently moved from Minnesota), have extensive reservations on the Missouri River and Niobrara, from 40 to 150 miles above Yankton, and have become domesticated and are giving attention to agriculture and stock-growing. The Territory yields large amounts of furs and peltries; and recent explorations indicate that the Black Hills, about 300 miles west from Yankton, abound in gold, iron, and coal of the finest quality. For a new Territory, Dakota has devoted considerable attention to public education, while the gospel is dispensed by ministers supported mostly by a missionary fund.

Dakota has one battalion of cavalry in the service of the United States, which is stationed within the Territory for the defence of the frontier settlements.

IV. IDAHO.

Organised as a Territory, March 3, 1863. Area, as estimated by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, 326,373 square miles; area, as estimated in the table in the article "Territories" in this volume, 333,200.

The Territory of Idaho is formed of all that part of the territory of the United States included within the following limits, to wit,—beginning at a point in the middle channel of the Snake River where it is intersected by the northern boundary of Oregon, then following down the channel of that river to a point opposite the Kooskooskia or Clear Water River, thence due north to the forty-ninth parallel of north latitude, thence eastward to the 104th meridian of longitude west from Greenwich (or 27th west from Washington), thence due south to the northern boundary of Colorado Territory, thence west to the 110th meridian west from Greenwich (or 33d west from Washington), thence due north to the 42d parallel of north latitude, thence west to the eastern boundary of Oregon, and thence due north along that boundary to the place of beginning. This Territory comprises the eastern halves of old Washington and Oregon Territories, the western half of Nebraska, and a small section of northern Utah. It lies immediately north of Utah and Colorado, and extends in that direction to the British Possessions.

The judicial power of the Territory is vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Probate Courts, and in justices of the peace. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief-Justice and two Associate Justices, who are appointed by the President of the United States for a term of four years. One session of the Supreme Court must be held annually at the seat of the Territorial Government. The Supreme and District Courts respectively possess Chancery as well as common-law jurisdiction.

DESCRIPTION OF IDAHO,—ITS SOIL, CLIMATE, SETTLEMENTS, MINES, &c.—Except among the records of the Land Office at Washington, there is no map that gives a good popular idea of the country embraced within the new Territory of Idaho. The portions of the Territory most generally settled and explored are embraced within that part of the old Territory of Washington comprised within the counties of Shoshone, Nez Perce, and Idaho. Shoshone county, or rather what is left of it, lies north of the South Fork of the Clear Water River, and embraces the original Nez Perce mining-region of Oro Fino and Pierce City, the latter place being the county seat and 560 miles distant from Olympia, the capital of Washington Territory. Nez Perce county comprises a belt of land lying south of the Clear Water River, and extending from Snake River eastward to the Bitter Root Mountains. A settlement, called Elk City, in this county, is the centre of the gold-mining district. The county seat is Lewiston, at the head of navigation on the Snake River. Nearly all the travel to the Salmon River mines passes through Nez Perce county. Kansas Prairie, another settled tract, includes a fertile agricultural expanse within the limits of this county. Idaho county embraces a large breadth of land lying south of the dividing ridge between the Clear Water and Salmon Rivers. The greater portion of this county abounds in auriferous wealth. The county seat is the town of Florence, quite a flourishing settlement, containing from 3000 to 5000 inhabitants. It was, before the Territory of Idaho was organized, the largest town in Washington Territory. At the time when this is written (December, 1863), the Territorial capital for Idaho Territory has not been named, but it will probably be located at Florence.

The name Idaho given to this county, and which is now made coextensive with the new Territorial lines, is said to be an Indian word for "a star;" but a more liberal interpretation of the word and that which attaches to the popular apprehension of it, is, "gem of the mountains." The rich gold-fields of Salmon River, already so widely known, lie within the limits of this county. The scenery along the Salmon River in the vicinity of these mines is described as grand and impressive. In some places the stream flows along between perpendicular walls of rock from 500 to 2000 feet in height. The gold-mining regions of Idaho Territory are but the prolongation to the northward of the mineral regions of California and Nevada. Until within the last three years, what is now Idaho was uninhabited, except by Indian tribes. It owes its present activity and rapid progress of settlement to the discovery of the gold-mines in the British Possessions north of its boundary. This discovery drew from the gold-fields of California thousands of adventurers, who in their search for new fields of wealth discovered the placers of eastern Oregon and western Idaho. Since then the exploration of this new region has been constantly and rapidly pressed; flourishing settlements and towns have sprung into existence, roads have been opened, rivers navigated, mail-routes established, and farm-improvements commenced; and, besides all this, the Territory has attracted the attention of the monetary and commercial world. Of the receipts of treasure at San Francisco from the 1st to the 11th of September, 1863, amounting in all to $1,500,000, full half a million was from the new mines embraced within the Territory under description. Gold has been discovered on nearly all the tributaries and head-waters of the Missouri and Yellow Stone Rivers, and still farther north, reaching to and going beyond our national boundary. Platina has been gathered in small quantities from the streams by the Indians; and some of the explorers are of the opinion that extensive deposits of this valuable metal will be discovered. Copper and iron exist in abundance, and salt is plentiful in many localities. Coal also is found on the Upper Missouri and Yellow Stone, and has been discovered upon the Pacific slope of the Rocky Mountains. The higher mountain-ranges of this region are bleak and barren, but the lower hills are generally well wooded, and the soil of the valleys productive. The whole is watered by numerous streams and springs, the former of which by their rapid flow afford immense water-power, which is of the utmost value for driving mills, and otherwise aiding in separating the rich mineral deposits from the sands and rocks with which they are intermixed. The climate in the valleys is mild and salubrious, but upon the plains and hills it is cold, and the country is subject to deep snows.

V. NEBRASKA.

Organized May 30, 1854. Capital, Omaha City. Population, 1863, estimated, 40,000. Area, 63,300 square miles.

Nebraska Territory formerly comprised a very extensive region, but its dimensions have been recently reduced. Its boundary now commences at a point where the 40th parallel of north latitude touches the Missouri River, thence extends up the Missouri to the mouth of the Keha Papa and westward along the river to the 104th meridian west from Greenwich (or 27th west from Washington), thence south to the 41st parallel of north latitude, eastward to the 102d meridian west from Greenwich (or 25th west from Washington), and south again to the 40th parallel of latitude. It is situated immediately west of the State of Iowa.

Though Nebraska has had heretofore but a slow growth, it is now gaining rapidly. Its mineral products have never been largely developed, and the more attractive features of Colorado, &c. have diverted emigration; though the valleys of the Platte, Elkhorn, and Snipe Fork, Big and Little Blues, and Big and Little Nemahas are very fertile, and afford superior advantages to the agriculturalist. About 75 miles south of Omaha there is a very extensive salt basin, containing innumerable springs of the most concentrated saline waters, sufficient in quantity to supply a dozen populous States with salt of the purest quality. More than a thousand teams are continually employed in freighting goods and Government stores to western Nebraska, Colorado, Idaho, and Utah, from Omaha, Plattsmouth, and Nebraska City, on Missouri River. The climate is dry, pure, and healthful, being therefore particularly favorable to consumptives. Emigration over land to California, Oregon, &c. passes through Omaha City and up the great valley of the Platte. From five to ten thousand Mormons yearly pass through on their way to Salt Lake. Anthracite coal and gold are found in the Black Hills.

The Supreme Court consists of a Chief-Justice and two Associate Justices, who hold their offices during the period of four years. One term of the Supreme Court must be held annually at the seat of government of the Territory. The Supreme and District Courts respectively possess Chancery as well as common-law jurisdiction.

NEBRASKA AND THE WAR.—Unofficial statements give Nebraska credit for three regiments contributed to the armies of the United States. The 1st infantry was raised in June, 1861, numbering 800 men, under the command of Colonel John M. Thayer, of Omaha. This regiment in July, 1862, was in the service near Corinth, Miss. Estimating the other regiments upon the basis of the first, the aggregate contribution of Nebraska would be 2400 men; but no details of this force have been received.

VI. NEVADA.

Organised March 2, 1861. Capital, Carson City. Estimated Area, 83,500 square miles. Estimated White Population, 1863, 40,000.

This Territory at present embraces that portion of the public domain lying within the following boundaries, viz.: the 115th degree of longitude west from Greenwich (or the 38th west from Washington), and the western boundary of California; and between the 42d parallel of north latitude and the 37th parallel of north latitude, which separates it from Arizona. It is immediately east of California and west of Utah.

The Governor and Secretary of State hold their offices by appointment of the President of the United States. The other officers are chosen by Territorial authority. The legislative power of the Territory is vested in a Legislative Assembly, composed of a Council and House of Representatives. The Council is composed of 13 members, elected for two years; and the House of 26 members, elected for one year. The general election is held annually on the first Wednesday in September.

JUDICIARY.

The judicial power of the Territory is vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Probate Courts, and in justices of the peace. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief-Justice and two Associate Justices, who hold their offices during a period of four years. One term of the Supreme Court is held annually at the seat of the Territorial Government, commencing on the first Monday in June. For District Court purposes, the Territory is divided into three districts, in each of which one of the justices of the Supreme Court holds the sessions. The Supreme and District Courts have Chancery as well as common-law jurisdiction. The districts are as follow:—1st. Storey, Washoe, and Root counties, John W. North, Judge. 2d. Ormsby, Douglas, and Esmeralda, George Turner, Judge. 3d. Lyon, Churchill, and Humboldt, P. B. Locke, Judge.

Prosecuting Attorneys and Probate Judges are elected by the people for two years. The other county officers are elected by the people for two years. The County Clerk is Clerk of the Probate Court and Clerk of the Board of County Commissioners, and also, ex officio, County Auditor.

FINANCES.—The salaries of the Territorial Executive and Judiciary are paid from the National Treasury; but the expenses of that part of the government established by Territorial authority are chargeable against the Territorial Treasury. The latest reports on this subject are to November, 1862. At that time the Treasurer reported the gross receipts from February 17 to November 1 at $3,548
Gross payments in the same time were... 2,571

Balance, November 1, 1862 ..... $977

But these figures do not give a correct impression of the local expenses of the Territory. The warrants drawn to November 1, 1862, amounted to $46,116, of which all but $7000 was payable in 1862. The means to meet the resulting $39,000 of immediate liabilities were an assessed tax of 4-10th of 1 per cent. on the taxable property of the Territory valued by the Auditor in 1862 at $9,692,900. This tax was expected to yield $36,000, leaving a deficit of $3000 to be provided for by other means.

COMMON SCHOOLS.—New as Nevada is, the Territory has already made a start in the matter of education. The Report of Wm. G. Blakeley, Superintendent of Public Instruction, dated November 3, 1862, furnishes information for the year then closed, to this effect. Whole number of children between the ages of 4 and 21 years of age in the four counties of Ormsby, Storey, Washoe, and Lyon, 1134. Of these, the boys numbered 431, the girls 431, and the sex of 272 was not stated. The whole number reported as attending the public schools in Lyon and Storey counties was 161. There were 2 schools in Lyon, 1 in Ormsby, and 1 in Storey. The total expenditure in Lyon in 1862 was $887, and in Storey, $1227. The Superintendent reports the existence of excellent private schools in Washoe county and in Carson City.

COUNTIES, MINES, TOWNS, &c.

There were in 1863 ten organized counties in Douglas, Esmeralda, Humboldt, Lake, Lyon, the Territory of Nevada, namely: Churchill, Ormsby, Storey, Washoe, and Lander. The whole Territory is rich in mineral wealth. Of its ten counties, seven have already numerous mines of either gold or silver; and the richest silver-mines in the United States are found in Storey county. That county sent in October, 1862, a contribution of $20,226.22 to the Sanitary Commission, in eight massive silver bars, five of which weighed 111 pounds each. Quicksilver, lead, and antimony are also found in great abundance. The Comstock mines in Storey county were the first silver-mines which attracted attention. The Ophir mines on the Comstock ledge have works for crushing ore at the town of Ophir; and they are to be connected by a railroad with Virginia, the capital of Storey county. The principal towns of the Territory are Virginia, having in November, 1863, an estimated population of 10,000, and the place of most business in the Territory; Carson City, the Territorial capital, 2500 inhabitants; Silver City, in Lyon county, 1000 inhabitants; Gold Hill, Storey county, 1500 inhabitants; Washoe City and Ophir, Washoe county; Star City, Unionville, and Humboldt, Humboldt county, 3000 inhabitants; Dayton, Lyon county, and Genoa, Douglas county, Aurora, Esmeralda county, 5000 inhabitants; and Austin, Lander county, 2500. The extraordinary richness of the silver-mines in Lander county increased the population there from 20 in October, 1862, to over 6000 in October, 1863.

MINES AND MINING IN NEVADA.—Wm. P. Blake, Esq., commissioner to represent the mineralogical and mining interests of the Pacific coast at the International Exhibition in London, 1862, submitted a very interesting and important report to the Governor of Nevada Territory, in which is found the following general description of the mining-region of Nevada:—

It is an elevated semi-desert region; its surface a constant succession of longitudinal mountain-ranges, with intervening valleys and plains, most of which are independent basins, hemmed in by mountains on all sides, and the whole system without drainage to the sea. The general elevation of these valleys is over 4500 feet above the sea; and the mountains rise from 1000 to 4000 feet, and in some instances to 8000 feet, higher.

In the same report the principal mining-districts are described as follows:—

1st. The Virginia District, including Virginia City and the eastern slope of Mount Davidson, Cedar Hill, and the upper part of Six Mile Cañon.

2d. The Gold Hill District, south of Mount Davidson, including Gold Hill and the vein of the same name.

3d. The Devil's Gate District, including Silver City and the mines on the sides of the lower part of Gold Cañon and beyond the Carson River.

In addition, there are the Flowered District, the Sullivan, the Argentine, and the Galena Districts. Farther south, the Esmeralda and Mono regions are also divided into districts. On Walker's River, two districts, called the "Walker's River Mining District" and the "Pacific Coal District," have been marked out.

In the new region of the Humboldt Mountains, in the eastern part of the Territory, there are also several districts; among them the Prince Royal, the Castle, and the Antelope.

The Silver Star Cañon is said to be the principal locality for veins. New districts are being set off in all parts of the Territory wherever the army of prospectors find indications sufficient to justify it.

The following descriptions of the Virginia District and of the Ophir mines are also copied from the same report, and will serve as an indication of the magnitude of the works, outlay of capital, and the value of this great mining-region.

Virginia District.—The Virginia Mining District is established about the Comstock vein as a centre, and includes all the mines on the eastern slope of Mount Davidson, and those on Cedar Hill,—an adjoining elevation to the north.

In addition to the Comstock lode, others have been discovered and located on, and some opened by tunnels and shafts at various points. Of these, the principal are the Virginia lode,—which has a heavy crest-stone of quartz,—the Argentia, Vermillion, Durgan, Sacramento, Burning Moscow, and the Garibaldi and Potosi.

The Comstock vein is subdivided into 8900 claims, making in all 9000 feet, or 12⅔ inches per claim, including portions, of course, not yet shown to be rich.

Ophir Mine.—Owing to the greater amount of mining upon this claim, the general characteristics of the Comstock lode are shown in it to better advantage than in either of the others. It is here seen to cut through the porphyry of Mount Davidson in a nearly north-and-south direction, with a westerly dip of about seventy degrees. It rises to the surface within the limits of Virginia city; and the piles of ore thrown out from the tunnels are encroaching upon the streets. There was no outcrop or crest-stone visible, or but a slight one at intervals, the gangue or vein-stone being so soft and friable that it was completely broken down and mingled with the soil.

The bold outcrop of vein-quarts of the Virginia Ledge is, however, directly above it, and is like a dike, curving over the summits of the spurs from the mountain.

The Ophir Mine is opened by shafts and tunnels to a depth of 200 feet.

The following description of the gold and silver and other mineral resources of Nevada is extracted from a letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, Washington, dated Dec. 22, 1862:—

The gold and silver mines there are found stretching from the Washoe, on the southwestern part of Nevada, across the Territory from west to east, and radiating in northerly and southerly directions from the great central discoveries of Washoe.

We have information of the deeply tunnelled "Potosi," or Spanish Mine, with splendid gold rock, partially decomposed, of a reddish hue, from which rock is furnished to several mills engaged partly in crushing, and in selling the same as it comes from the mine; also the "Central," and "Ophir," all situated in Washoe county, some twelve or fourteen miles north of Carson City, in the extreme western part of the Territory, and in about 39° 15′ north latitude.

The principal clusters of gold and silver discoveries are in the counties of Washoe, Storey, Lyon, and Ormsby, encircling Carson, the capital of the Territory. Then, proceeding south some thirty or forty miles from Virginia City and Gold Hill, there has been discovered between the forks of Carson River what is known as the "Silver Mountain," some ten miles of it having been staked off, on which, wherever the miners have penetrated to any depth in the hill, it is reported they have found ore which will rival any other mining-district of the eastern slope. Advancing still further in a southerly direction, on the western side of the Territory, the Esmeralda and Van Horn mining-districts are reached, the latter embracing the "Bullion Mill." Then, returning to the central discoveries around Carson, and travelling due east across the Territory, 177 miles from Carson, in almost the extreme eastern part of the Nevada, the "Reese River" mining district is found, lying on both sides of the main stage and immigrant road. Yet still farther east than the "Reese" is the "Simpson Park" district, abounding in silver-ore.

Returning, then, to the region about the geographical centre of the Territory, and around it have been established the Humboldt, Eldorado, Echo, Sacramento, and several other mining-districts.

It was estimated in August, 1862, that there were in the Territory one hundred and forty mills in operation, more than half of which yield large amounts weekly, crushing an average of eight cords per week, at a yield of $160 per cord.

Besides its resources in the precious metals and in the useful minerals, it has extensive agricultural capacities scattered throughout the mineral ranges. This glimpse at the wealth in precious metals of Nevada, not (as hereinbefore indicated) afforded from official data, may serve to furnish some idea of its general diffusion over the Territory, the cost of transportation to and from the mines having been estimated at $6,000,000 annually.

This mineral region undoubtedly extends eastward into Utah, as it is known to do in a south-westerly direction to the Colorado region of California.

The Nevada mining-region occupies a position of centrality in connection with the Pacific and the plains reaching to the Mississippi Valley, as it does relatively north and south, being about the middle part of that portion of the American Union.

The following extract from a letter to the Commissioner of the Land Office, dated Aurora, Esmeralda county, N.T., August 7, 1862, gives further information respecting the mineral and other resources of Nevada:—

"Here we have frequent boulders of quarts lying upon the surface over the country, from three to five miles in extent, which prospect is rich in silver, many tons of them having been worked to profit for the miners. In no other country is silver rock found upon the surface, so far as I am informed. We have here obsidian, a species of coarse glass, found on the surface; in other sections a boulder, resembling lava, which when broken is hollow, the inside coated with beautiful colors, white, blue, &c. It resembles a fine agate; I can give it no name. We have bituminous coal; beautiful, clear, white salt. The soil contains much alkali; ground extremely dry and barren; country covered with wild-sage bushes, from two to four feet high. Cedar, pine, and wild mahogany trees are our wood; they grow slow and very scrubby. In the mountains we have timber for lumber, &c. In the rivers we have trout and other fish. We have also cinnabar and alum in this district."

The following extract from a letter of Orion Clemens, Esq., Territorial Secretary, to the Commissioner of the Land Office, dated Carson City, Nevada Territory, Nov. 7, 1862, gives an interesting description of the "Mexican" or "Spanish" Mine.

"Having been called by business to Virginia City about two weeks ago, I took the opportunity of visiting the 'Mexican' or, as it is frequently called, the 'Spanish' Mine. We went in through a tunnel 250 feet; then descended by a single flight of spiral steps, 92 feet; then down other steps till we attained a depth of 170 feet below the surface, passing close to and in sight of the Ophir timbers.

"The timbering in these mines is a wonder. In the process a shaft is sunk, and the timbers put in as the quartz is removed, working laterally and upwards. To go deeper another shaft is sunk, and timbers built up till they connect with the former timbers. In this way the Comstock Ledge is opened and timbered 375 feet or more of its length,—viz.: the 'Central,' lying south of the 'Ophir,' 25 feet; all that part of the 'Ophir' lying south of the Mexican, 200 feet; the 'Mexican' at the depth of 170 feet, its entire length of 100 feet; and 50 feet of that part of the Ophir lying north of the Mexican. In the Mexican Mine the quarts will be taken out and timbers carried up to within 30 feet of the surface. In one portion the timbers are now up 50 feet. These timbers are 11½ to 12½ inches square, and 6 feet 5 inches long. Each stick costs $9, and the carpenter's work $1.50 to $2. In some places the enormous pressure has caused them to slightly crack and cut into each other. At the depth of 170 feet the ledge is 46 feet wide. Two stations extended across the mine and to the height of 50 feet, being three rows of upright timbers, cost $12,000. They could be built cheaper now, as lumber has fallen to $60 a thousand. The walling up of the casing rock on each side of the ledge is substantially done, and a costly part of the timbering. In several places we saw the peculiar timbers left by the Mexicans when they worked the mine in 1859.

"Soon after entering the tunnel we were obliged to take lights. At the end of the tunnel we found a number of drifts running off in various directions. We were obliged presently to step over near a deep shaft to get out of the way of a horse being brought in to work a 'whim,' or hoisting-apparatus. While the horse was passing, the hand-car came thundering along on the iron rails in the tunnel, and shot past us into the gloom of one of the drifts. Without stopping to explore the drifts to any great extent, we descended the spiral steps. Here the huge timbers rose above us into confused indistinctness, and extended below and on all sides of us. In wandering through the mine, the sensations are peculiar, produced by this vast frame-work of timbers underground, and the rumblings occasionally startling the ear, from invisible places in the darkness, caused by pouring quartz down a plank incline into a heap on a plank floor, to be hoisted thence, and by emptying it into the car through a kind of hopper; and then on the bottom of the mine, and on floors laid at various elevations among the timbers, workmen were here and there visible with their lights, appearing and disappearing as we or they changed position. There were a number of shafts whose mysterious depths the eye could not penetrate.

"The richest rock is found in 'pockets' (small deposits), or in veins from an inch to several inches in width. In some places the pay rock is thus so concentrated that the adjoining quartz for a considerable space is waste rock."

The judicial power of the Territory is vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Probate Courts, and in justices of the peace. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief-Justice and two Associate Justices appointed by the President of the United States, who hold their offices during a period of four years. One term of the Supreme Court is held annually at the seat of the Territorial Government. For District Court purposes, the Territory is divided into three districts, in each of which one of the justices of the Supreme Court holds the sessions. The Supreme and District Courts have Chancery as well as common-law jurisdiction.

MINERAL WEALTH AND MINING IN NEW MEXICO.—In his official Report, made to the Secretary of the Interior in December, 1863, the Commissioner of the Land Office gives the following information concerning the development of the mines of precious metals in this Territory:—

"New Mexico, occupying the same latitude and elevation of Arizona, and traversed by similar, and in some parts by the same, mountain-ranges, is known to contain like mineral deposits, and in the western part they will probably be of equal value and extent. Relating to this section, a report, under date of 24th September, 1863, has just been received from the Surveyor-General at Santa Fé, indicating in outline a reconnoissance made by that officer of the newly-discovered gold placers upon the tributaries of the Colorado River.

"On the 9th of July the Surveyor-General left Fort Craig, returning up the Rio Grande to Los Lunas, and proceeded thence, by way of Fort Wingate and Tuni, to the San Francisco Mountain, over the Beale or Whipple road, which he intersected about forty miles west of Albuquerque. From the San Francisco Mountain he proceeded a southwesterly course, and reached the mines on the 19th August. He remained there until the 31st of the same month, visiting the different mining-localities, extending from his camp in a southwesterly direction about forty miles, and to the east about ten miles. He reports this new gold-field as situated on the Hasiampa Creek or River, Indian and Antelope Creeks (affluents of the Hasiampa), and Lynx Creek, a branch of the Agua Frio River,—all of them streams heretofore unknown to geographers.

"He found men at work mining at different points on the Hasiampa, from near its source, ten or twelve miles down the stream, but did not get from them the actual results of their labor. He was informed by several that on nearly every claim worked to the bed-rock gold was found. Many claims on this creek were abandoned for the time-being for more prominent diggings elsewhere. From the best information he could obtain, those who remained and worked diligently were making fair miner's wages. About fifty men, citizens of the United States, were at work on this part of the stream. On Lynx Creek there were about fifty men, also citizens, at work; and he was informed by Mr. George Coulter that he had taken from his claim between six and seven hundred dollars,—had worked to the bed-rock over a space of twelve by twenty feet. Mr. H. H. Cummings, on the claim below and adjoining, had taken out four hundred dollars with much less labor. Mr. Frank Finney, from the claim six hundred yards above, on the day the Surveyor-General was at the diggings, washed out three and a half ounces. Many were opening their claims; some had no water, and, of course, were obtaining no gold; but he saw no one who had worked a claim down to the bed-rock, and had water, who was not obtaining gold in remunerative quantities. When Mr. Clark was at the mines, there was no water running in either the Lynx or Hasiampa Creeks; but on most of the claims, when miners reached the bed-rock, a little water accumulated, which enabled the miners to wash a few pans of dirt each day.

"On Indian and Antelope Creeks he saw many persons engaged in dry-washing, as it is called, there being no water. Most of the miners on these streams are Mexicans from Sonora. Fair wages were generally reported.

"Between the Antelope and Indian Creeks, on the summit of a mountain two or three thousand feet above the valley, there is a placer of most extraordinary richness. The placer is situated upon the very summit of the mountain, between two rocky peaks. Here there is a space nearly level, descending slightly towards the west, about one hundred yards in width by three hundred in length. Through this a quartz ledge crops out, running in a southwesterly direction. The solid rock on either side of this ledge is covered to the depth of a few inches only with a reddish earth, and here Mr. Clark was informed by Mr. Jack Swilling, one of the six owners, that they had taken out twenty thousand dollars within a few weeks. There being so little earth upon the rocks, and no water within three miles, and the gold being all coarse, they found it the cheapest way to separate the gold from the earth by working with common butcher-knives, and the largest part of the gold was collected in that way, and by dry-washing. Mr. Clark has sent to this office some specimens from this placer. The largest piece found on this mountain weighed a little less than seven ounces. All of the gold shown him in this new field was what is termed 'coarse gold,' and very pure.

"The opinion expressed by Mr. Clark, in his letter to this office of 25th May, 1863, concerning the mineral wealth of New Mexico and Arizona, has been greatly strengthened by his visit to these new discoveries. The miners whom he met were almost all anxious to move east to the San Francisco and Salt Rivers, where, they say, there is abundance of water at all seasons of the year, wide valleys of fertile land, good timber, and, they believe, gold, silver, and copper in much greater abundance than where they are at present. It was necessary, however, for them to wait until they could muster a much larger force to contend with the Coyotro Apaches, who are numerous and hostile.

"The mountains throughout this new mining-district are everywhere intersected with quartz ledges, and it is believed that many of them are rich in gold and silver, but no assays had been made, and their value was unknown. On the upper portion of the Hasiampa, and on the branches of the Agua Frio, there is excellent pine timber, but none on the Lower Hasiampa, nor on Indian or Antelope Creeks.

"When the Surveyor-General was at the mines, there was no running water in any of the streams, but in all of them enough for drinking purposes, and in some there was sufficient for washing a portion of the time with pan or rocker. He was informed that in June last there was water running in the Hasiampa and Lynx Creeks, enough for sluicing, and the miners believed, from information received from the Indians, that there would be water from the melting of the snows in the mountains adequate for running sluices three or four months in the year. There was fine grazing over the whole country traversed from San Francisco Mountain to within twenty miles of the western limits of the mines, with abundance of water for stock, and but very little land susceptible of cultivation, on account of the absence of permanent running water for irrigation.

"It was estimated that on the 1st instant there were in the 'Weaver District' (which includes Antelope and Indian Creeks and the lower diggings on the Hasiampa) one thousand persons, of whom more than eight hundred are Mexicans from Sonora, and about one hundred in the 'Walker District,' embracing the Upper Hasiampa and Lynx Creek. Much ill feeling existed between the Mexicans and our citizens, and the Surveyor-General fears they may have serious difficulty unless a military force is stationed there to preserve order. The Indians surrounding the mines (the Tonto Apaches) were friendly at the time of his visit, but it was apprehended they would not remain so. There are no civil officers there. The people have no restraining power over them,—each is a law unto himself,—and the consequence must be disorder and anarchy, until civil government shall be organized, or government shall send there a military force sufficient to keep the vicious and turbulent in subjection."

CHARACTER OF THE TERRITORY.

Although Utah lies in, and is surrounded by, the rich gold and silver producing districts now being developed within the territory of the United States, it has by the peculiarites of its inhabitants become rather an agricultural than a mining Territory. The people of Utah are strongly prejudiced against any movements or enterprises which, according to their notions, conflict with their pastoral and patriarchal institutions; hence the mineral riches of Utah have not yet been developed to an extent corresponding with the activity prevailing in all the surrounding Territories. Much of the land of the Territory is mountainous and barren, but it is dotted throughout most of its extent by fertile valleys and grazing-grounds which are sufficient for the support of a very large population. The Territory is traversed from the northeast to the southwest by a high and rugged spur of the Rocky Mountains, commonly known as the Wasatch Range; and it is at the western base of these mountains that the Mormon settlers have located their famous Great Salt Lake City. Stretching away to the southward of this lake there is a range of valleys for two hundred miles, in which such fruits as peaches, apples, pears, plums, apricots, &c., are cultivated with success, along with the grains and other agricultural products of the temperate zone. The upper tributaries of the Colorado River, viz., the Green and Grand Rivers, constitute the principal streams of the Territory of Utah. The great geographical features of the Territory are alternations of mountain and desert. Although many streams flow from the hills and mountains, they generally sink into the sand of the desert after flowing a few miles. Most of the lakes are saline, Great Salt Lake being the largest of its kind. The presence of so much salt in the waters and in the tracts of land adjacent to these salt lakes, baffles all attempts at cultivation.

The Counties, Cities, and Towns of Utah.—The principal county is that known as Great Salt Lake, which is situated to the south and east of the lake from which it takes its name, and it contains Great Salt Lake City, the capital of the Territory. Its population in 1862 was about 15,000, and its distance from San Francisco by the usual route of land-travel is 776 miles. There is in this county a considerable body of land suitable for cultivation between the Jordan River and the Wasatch Mountains. The neighboring streams furnish considerable water-power, which is largely used for manufacturing and for saw and flouring mills.

Beaver county is situated in the southern part of the Territory. It contains some good arable land, and also some pine timber lands. Iron-ore has been discovered in this county; and there is a lead-mine worked near Minersville, on the lower Beaver River. The principal town is Beaver, with a population of about 600.

Box Elder county.—This county lies on both sides of the Bear River, one of the tributaries of Salt Lake. There is very little arable land in the county, but some portions are used as grazing-grounds, being generally free from the heavy snows to which the Territory is subject. Brigham City, the county seat, has a population of 1800.

Cache county is one of the northern counties, surrounded by the Wasatch Mountains. It is well watered, has plenty of timber, and produces the hardier grains and vegetables in abundance. The town of Logan is the county seat.

Davis county has been made fertile and productive by means of irrigation from a few springs and small streams in the mountains. Such land as cannot be irrigated is used for grazing. There is very little timber or other supply of fuel in the county. The county seat is Farmington.

Green River county takes its name from the river of the same name, which is the largest stream in the Territory. The county is scarcely inhabited, being situated in a high, cold, and barren district.

Iron county.—This county occupies a long narrow belt of land extending across the southern part of the Territory. As its name would indicate, it contains a great many deposits of iron-ores. It has also some deposits of coal. The county seat is Parowan, containing a population of about 500.

Juab county takes its name from a small and fertile valley, of the same designation, but, excepting this valley, the greater part of the county is too high and the climate too rigorous for any success in agricultural pursuits. The county seat is Nephi, with a population of about 700.

Millard county is marked by an almost unbroken stretch of volcanic elevations and barren deserts. It takes its name from President Fillmore, under whose administration the Territory was organized; and Fillmore City, now the county seat, was named after the same President, and was at one time the capital of the Territory. The population of Fillmore is 500.

Morgan county embraces the narrow valleys lying on both sides of the Weber River, which courses among the Wasatch Mountains, east of Great Salt Lake. The land is mostly used for grazing purposes. The county seat is Weber City.

San Pete county occupies a part of the valley of the same name at the western base of the southern spur of the Wasatch Mountains, and is situated about 100 miles south of Great Salt Lake. Timber for building and for fuel exists in abundance. There are some thin veins of coal in the mountains, and saleratus is gathered in large quantities from natural beds. The county is watered by the streams which, after uniting, form the San Pete and Sevier Rivers. The town of Manti is the county seat, with a population of about 1100.

Summit county is situated on the high plateau near the head-waters of Weber and Bear Rivers. Kamas Prairie, in this county, affords good grazing-ground in summer; and the good pine timber in the mountains gives large employment to the inhabitants in the trade of lumbering. The county seat is Wanship.

Tooele county.—This county takes its name from Tooele River, which with the valley of the same name are in the county. It is in the western part of the Territory, adjoining Nevada, and a part of it is probably within the present Territory of Nevada. It is a sheep-grazing county, with a climate quite mild compared with the general climate of the Territory.

Utah county takes its name from the lake of that name, which is a large body of fresh water 35 miles in length by 15 in breadth. The two principal valleys of the county are separated by this lake, Utah Valley being on the east side and the Cedar Valley on the west. The county seat of this county is the town of Provo, with a population of about 3000. It also contains several other towns, among which are American Fork, Spanish Fork, and Springville, each having a population of 1000; Lehi City, with a population of 600; Pleasant Grove, with a population of 500; and Alpine City, with a population of 300.

Wasatch county.—This county is noted for its grand and picturesque scenery. It is situated to the eastward of Great Salt Lake and Utah counties. It is traversed by the Provo River, which runs through a wild and rugged yet magnificent cañon or gorge, a distance of 15 miles. Cascade Creek, which empties into this gorge, falls over the precipice from a height of one thousand feet. Higher up the river the cañon spreads into a broad valley of 10 miles in width by about 30 miles in length, which is quite fertile, and well watered by a large number of streams. Heber City is the county seat.

Washington county is in the extreme southern part of the Territory, and is traversed in an east-and-west direction by a mountain-ridge which is an apparent extension of the Wasatch Range. Some of the valleys of this county near the head-waters of the Rio Virgin are marked by a temperature so high for that region as to induce efforts to grow cotton. The county seat is Washington, with a population of 1000. The town of St. George is also in this county, having a population of 700; and also Santa Clara, with a population of 300.

Weber county.—This is one of the finest agricultural counties in the Territory, owing to the presence of two large streams,—the Ogden and Weber Rivers,—which furnish abundant water for purposes of irrigation. There is a fine valley for summer grazing, about 20 miles long by 10 in width, situated well up in the mountains. The county seat is Ogden City, with a population of about 3000. North Ogden is also in this county, with a population of about 500.

RELIGION.—The greater part of the white inhabitants of Utah—probably not less than 70,000—are adherents to the Mormon faith, or, as they denominate themselves, the "Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-Day Saints." Their church organization is composed of a series of hierarchies, the highest being the First Presidency, consisting of their chief prophet Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, and Daniel H. Wells; next the Twelve Apostles; then the quorums of Seventies, of which there are said to be 68 organized in the Territories, each having 7 presidents and 63 members; then follow quorums of High-Priests, Elders, Priests, Teachers, and Deacons. A somewhat anomalous office is that of Patriarch, which has been conferred on John Smith (son of Hyrum and nephew of their first prophet, Joseph Smith) and on a few others. There are in the principal settlements High-Councils, composed of 12 members, and a bishop for each ward, the wards containing from 500 to 1000 persons.

STATE ORGANIZATION.—On the 3d of March, 1862, in accordance with a joint resolution of the Territorial Legislature, the people elected delegates to form a Constitution for the State of Deseret, and after the formation of the Constitution it was adopted, and State officers and a Legislature elected,—the Governor elected being Brigham Young, the Lieutenant-Governor, Heber C. Kimball, and the President of the Convention, Daniel H. Wells. The Legislature elected 2 Senators and 1 Representative to Congress, and one of the Senators elected proceeded to Washington to urge the admission of the new State into the Union. The application was, as usual, referred to a committee, and no action was taken upon it during the session. At the session of 1862-3, the House Committee on Territories reported a bill to enable the people of Utah to form a Constitution and State Government; but no further action was taken.

IX. WASHINGTON.

Organized as a Territory, March 2, 1853. Capital, Olympia. Area, 71,300 square miles. Population (1863), as returned by the County Assessors, 12,619.

Washington Territory was greatly reduced by the act organizing the Territory of Idaho. Its eastern boundary is now near the 117th degree of longitude west from Greenwich, or the 40th west from Washington. It embraces the territory between the State of Oregon on the south, and the 49th degree of north latitude, which separates it from British Columbia; and between the 117th degree of west longitude and the Pacific Ocean.

The Governor, Secretary, Register, and Receiver hold their offices by appointment of the President of the United States. The Auditor and Treasurer are chosen under Territorial authority. The Legislative Assembly consists of the Council and House of Representatives, and convenes annually on the first Monday in December. The Council is composed of 9 members, elected for three years and the House of Representatives is composed of 30 members, elected for one year. [In consequence of the erection of Idaho, the Council of 1863 contained but 7 members, and the House but 24 members.] The Legislature meets annually on the 1st Monday in December.

The judicial power of the Territory is vested in a Supreme Court, District Courts, Probate Courts, and in justices of the peace. The Supreme Court consists of a Chief-Justice and two Associate Justices, who hold their offices during a term of four years. One term of the Supreme Court is held annually at the seat of the Territorial Government, commencing on the 1st Monday of January. For District Court purposes, the Territory is divided into three judicial districts, in each of which one of the justices of the Supreme Court holds the sessions. The Supreme and District Courts have Chancery as well as common-law jurisdiction.

For each of these Districts a Territorial Prosecuting Attorney is elected by the people for a term of two years, who receives a salary out of the Territorial treasury of $200 per annum, and his fees.

District Courts.

At the December term, 1862, of the Supreme Court, the following times and places were fixed for holding courts in the several judicial districts of said Territory, to wit:—

First District.—At Walla Walla, on the 4th Monday in April and 2d Monday in October.

Second District.—At Vancouver, Clarke county, on the 4th Monday in May and 2d Monday in November.

Third District.—At Olympia, Thurston county, on the 1st Monday in February and 3d Monday in July.

At Port Townsend, on the 2d Monday in March and 1st Monday in September.

POPULATION.—By the erection of Idaho Territory, March, 1863, the Territory of Washington was cut down to less than half its former dimensions, and lost its most populous settlements in the mining regions. Notwithstanding this, the population, which numbered 11,594 in 1860 for the whole of the old Territory, had increased to 12,519 for the remaining Territory in 1863.

OPERATIONS OF THE SEVERAL ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES IN 1863.

[As in the Record of Events, which follows this, the military operations of the year are arranged in chronological order, we present in this place the principal operations of each army, grouped together in one narrative. This will be found a great convenience, as the two records, in all important particulars, will complement each other—the one traversing the whole year in the order of time, and the other being an uninterrupted narrative of what was done in each army or department.]

History of each of the National Armies for 1863.

THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

When General Burnside relieved General McClellan from his command, on the 7th of November, 1862, the army of the Potomac was on the south side of the Potomac, under instructions to pursue Lee, by a flank march on the interior line, to Richmond, hugging closely to the Blue Ridge, so as to observe its passes and to give battle to the enemy whenever an opportunity occurred. On reaching Warrenton, however, General Burnside proposed to give up this chase of Lee's army towards Richmond and to move down the north side of the Rappahannock to Falmouth, and establish a new base of supplies at Aquia Creek or Belle Plain.

General Burnside did not commence his movement from Warrenton till the 15th, and then marched his whole army down on the north bank of the Rappahannock, his advance reaching Falmouth on the 20th.

Battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862.

Lee's army, in the mean time, moved down the south side of the river, but had not occupied Fredericksburg on the 21st. No attempt was made to effect the passage till the 11th of December, by which time Lee's army had been concentrated and strongly entrenched. The passage, however, was effected without serious opposition, by the right wing and centre, under Sumner and Hooker, at Fredericksburg, and the left wing, under Franklin, on bridges established some miles below. It was intended that Franklin's grand division, consisting of the corps of Reynolds and Smith, should attack the enemy's right, and turn his position on the heights in rear of Fredericksburg, while Sumner and Hooker attacked him in front. But, by some alleged misunderstanding of orders, Franklin's operations were limited to a mere reconnoissance, and the direct attacks of Sumner and Hooker were unsupported. The contest on the right wing during the 13th was continued till half-past five P.M., when our men were forced to fall back, after suffering terrible losses. Both armies remained in position till the night of the 15th, when General Burnside withdrew his force to the north side of the Rappahannock. General Burnside has made no official report of these operations. The loss of the rebels in this battle is not known. As they were sheltered by their fortifications, it was probably less than ours, which, as officially reported, was 1138 killed, 9105 wounded, and 2078 missing. Most of the missing and many of the slightly wounded soon rejoined their regiments and reported for duty.

Battle of Chancellorsville, May 2—3, 1863.

General Hooker relieved General Burnside from his command on the 25th of January, but no advance movement was attempted till near the end of April, when a large cavalry force under General Stoneman was sent across the Upper Rappahannock towards Richmond, to destroy the enemy's communications, while General Hooker with his main army crossed the Rappahannock and the Rapidan above their junction and took position at Chancellorsville. At the same time General Sedgwick crossed near Fredericksburg, and stormed and carried the heights.

A severe battle took place on the 2d and 3d of May, and on the 5th our army was again withdrawn to the north side of the river. For want of official data, General Halleck is unable to give any detailed accounts of these operations, or of our losses.

Lee's Advance into Maryland and Pennsylvania.

In the early part of June, Lee's army moved up the south bank of the Rappahannock, occupied the gaps of the Blue Ridge, and threatened the valley of the Shenandoah. General Hooker followed on an interior line by Warrenton Junction, Thoroughfare Gap, and Leesburg. Winchester and Martinsburg were at this time occupied by us simply as outposts. Neither place was susceptible of a good defence. Directions were therefore given, on the 11th of June, to withdraw these garrisons to Harper's Ferry. But these orders were not obeyed, and on the 13th Winchester was attacked and its armament and a part of the garrison captured. Lee now crossed the Potomac, near Williamsport, and directed his march upon Harrisburg. General Hooker followed on his right flank, covering Washington and Baltimore. On reaching Frederick, Maryland, on the 28th of June, he was, at his own request, relieved from the command, and Major-General Meade appointed in his place.

During these movements, cavalry skirmishes took place at Beverly Ford, Brandy Station, Berryville, and Aldie, some of which were quite severe, but in the absence of detailed reports, the General-in-Chief is unable to give the losses on either side.

General Meade in Command of the Army of the Potomac.

When General Meade, under the orders of the President, took command of the army of the Potomac, on the 28th of June, it was mainly concentrated at Frederick, Md. Lee's army was supposed to be advancing against Harrisburg, which was garrisoned by raw Militia. Ewell's corps was on the west side of the Susquehanna, between that place and Columbia; Longstreet's corps was near Chambersburg, and Hill's corps between that place and Cashtown. Stuart's cavalry was making a raid between Washington and Frederick, cutting Meade's line of supplies, and capturing his trains.

On the 29th General Meade's army was put in motion, and at night was in position; its left at Emmettsburg, and its right at New Windsor. The advance of Buford's cavalry was at Gettysburg, and Kilpatrick's division at Hanover, where it encountered Stuart's cavalry, which had passed around the rear and right of our army without meeting any serious opposition.

Battle of Gettysburg, July 1—2—3, 1863.

On the 30th of June, the 1st, 3d, and 11th corps were concentrated at Emmettsburg, under General Reynolds, while the right wing moved up to Manchester. Buford reported the enemy in force on the Cashtown road, near Gettysburg, and Reynolds moved up to that place on the 1st of July. He found our cavalry warmly engaged with the enemy, and holding him in check on the Cashtown road. Reynolds immediately deployed the advanced division of the 1st corps, and ordered the 11th corps to move promptly to its support. Wadsworth's division had driven back the enemy some distance, and captured a large number of prisoners, when General Reynolds fell, mortally wounded. The arrival of Ewell's corps, about this time, by the York and Harrisburg roads, compelled General Howard, upon whom the command devolved, to withdraw his force, the 1st and 11th corps, to the cemetery ridge, on the south side of Gettysburg. About 7 P.M. Generals Sickles and Slocum arrived on the field with the 3d and 12th corps, which took position, one on the left and the other on the right of the new line. The battle for the day, however, was over. General Meade arrived on the field during the night with the reserves, and posted his troops in line of battle: the 1st corps on the right; the 11th corps next; then the 12th corps, which crossed the Baltimore pike; the 2d and 3d corps on the cemetery ridge, on the left of the 11th corps. The 5th corps, pending the arrival of the 6th, formed the reserve. On the arrival of the latter, about 2 o'clock P.M., it took the place of the 5th, which was ordered to take position on the extreme left. The enemy massed his troops on an exterior ridge, about a mile and a half in front of that occupied by us. General Sickles, misinterpreting his orders, instead of placing the 3d corps on the prolongation of the 2d, had moved it nearly three-fourths of a mile in advance—an error which nearly proved fatal in the battle. The enemy attacked this corps on the 2d with great fury, and it was likely to be utterly annihilated, when the 5th corps moved on the left, and enabled it to reform behind the line it was originally ordered to hold. The 6th corps and a part of the 1st were also opportunely thrown into this gap, and succeeded in checking the enemy's advance. About sunset the rebels retired in confusion and disorder. At 8 P.M. an assault was made from the left of the town, which was gallantly repelled by the 1st, 2d, and 11th corps.

On the morning of the 3d we regained, after a spirited contest, a part of our line on the right, which had been yielded to sustain other points on the 2d. About 1 P.M. the enemy opened an artillery fire of 125 guns on our centre and left. This was followed by an assault of a heavy infantry column on our left and left centre, which was successfully repulsed, with terrible loss to the enemy. This terminated the battle, and the rebels retired defeated from the field.

General Meade Victorious—Lee in Defeat and Retreat.

The opposing forces in this sanguinary contest were nearly equal in numbers, and both fought with the most desperate courage. The commanders were also brave, skilful, and experienced, and they handled their troops on the field with distinguished ability. But to General Meade belongs the honor of a well earned victory in one of the greatest and best fought battles of the war.

On the morning of the 4th the enemy apparently occupied a new line in front of our left, but in reality his army had commenced its retreat, carrying off a part of his wounded. His lines, however, were not entirely evacuated till the morning of the 5th, when the cavalry and 6th corps were sent in pursuit. The days of the 5th and 6th were employed by General Meade in succoring the wounded and burying the dead left on the battle-field. He then started in pursuit of Lee, by a flank movement upon Middletown. In the mean time General French had re-occupied Harper's Ferry, destroyed the enemy's pontoon train at Williamsport and Falling Waters, and captured its guards.

Halting a day at Middletown, General Meade crossed the South Mountain, and, on the 12th, found the enemy occupying a strong position on the heights of Marsh Run, in front of Williamsport. Not being attacked in this position, Lee constructed a pontoon bridge with lumber collected from canal boats and the ruins of wooden houses, and on the morning of the 14th his army had crossed to the south side of the river. His rear guard was attacked by our cavalry, and suffered considerable loss.

Thus ended the rebel campaign north of the Potomac, from which important political and military results had been expected.

Our own loss in this campaign had been very severe, viz.: 2834 killed, 13,709 wounded, and 6643 missing—in all 23,186. We captured three guns, 41 standards, 13,621 prisoners, 28,178 small arms. The entire loss of the enemy is not known, but judging from the numbers of his dead and wounded left on the field, it must have been much greater than ours.

Lee Continues his Retreat.

After crossing the Potomac, Lee continued his retreat up the valley of the Shenandoah and through the gaps of the Blue Ridge till he reached the south bank of the Rapidan, near Orange Court-House, where he took a defensive position to dispute the crossing of the river. General Meade continued his flank pursuit by Harper's Ferry, Berlin, and Warrenton, till he reached Culpepper Court-House, where he halted his army, not deeming it prudent to cross the river and attack the enemy, who was now entrenched on the south bank, which completely commanded the approaches on the north side. During this advance several cavalry skirmishes took place, but without serious loss on either side.

Lee's Advance and Retreat, Oct., 1863.

A considerable part of Lee's army was now withdrawn to reinforce Bragg in the West. But with his diminished numbers he assumed (Oct. 8) a threatening attitude against Meade; manœuvred to turn his flank, and forced him to fall back to the line of Bull Run. Having destroyed the Orange and Alexandria Railroad from the Rapidan to Manassas, the rebels again fell back to their former position near Orange Court-House.

Bristow Station and other Combats.

During these operations there were several severe engagements between detached forces, but no general battle—October 10th and 11th, at Robertson's river; 12th, at Brandy Station; 14th, at Bristow Station; 19th, at Buckland Mills; 24th, at Bealton and the Rappahannock bridge; and the 7th of November, on the south bank of that river. Our loss at Bristow Station was 51 killed, and 329 wounded. We captured five cannon, two colors, and 450 prisoners. In the several skirmishes between the 9th and 23d of October, the casualties in our cavalry corps were 74 killed, 316 wounded, and 885 missing. The enemy's loss is not known, but must have been heavy, as we captured many prisoners.

While Lee was threatening Meade's army by Warrenton and Thoroughfare Gap, Imboden descended the Shenandoah Valley, and surprised a small garrison at Charlestown, capturing three or four hundred prisoners. Troops sent out from Harper's Ferry forced him to immediately retreat.

On the 7th of November, Generals Sedgwick and French attacked the enemy at Rappahannock Station and Kelly's Ford, capturing several redoubts, four guns, eight battle flags, and about 2000 prisoners. Our loss in killed and wounded was 370. The enemy now retreated to his old position south of the Rapidan.

OPERATIONS IN WEST VIRGINIA.

When Lee's army retreated across the Potomac, in July, Brigadier-General Kelley concentrated all his available force on the enemy's flank, near Clear Springs, ready to co-operate in the proposed attack by General Meade. They also rendered valuable services in the pursuit, after Lee had effected his passage of the river.

On the 24th of July, Colonel Toland attacked the enemy at Wytheville, on the Tennessee and Virginia Railroad, capturing two pieces of artillery, 700 muskets, and 125 prisoners. Our loss was 17 killed and 61 wounded. Enemy's killed and wounded reported to be 75.

In August, General Averill attacked a rebel force, under General Sam. Jones, at Rocky Gap, in Greenbrier county, capturing one gun, 150 prisoners, and killing and wounding some 200. Our loss in killed, wounded, and missing was 130.

On the 11th of September, Imboden attacked a small force of our troops at Morefield, wounding 15, and capturing about 150.

On the 5th of November, General Averill attacked and defeated the enemy near Lewisburg, capturing three pieces of artillery, over 100 prisoners, and a large number of small-arms, wagons, and camp equipage. The enemy's loss in killed and wounded is estimated at 300.

DEPARTMENT OF VIRGINIA AND NORTH CAROLINA.

In December, 1862, General Foster marched against Kinston, and on the 14th, defeated the enemy, and captured that place. He then moved up the south side of the Neuse river to Goldsboro', burned the railroad bridge at that place, and tore up much of the railroad between the river and Mount Olive. He captured 496 prisoners, and nine pieces of artillery. His loss was 90 killed, 478 wounded, and nine missing.

In March, 1863, the rebel General Pettigrew, with a large force of infantry and artillery, made demonstrations on Newbern, but was forced to abandon the attempt upon that place. General Foster's loss was only two killed and four wounded.

In April, General Hill laid siege to Washington, on Tar river. The place had only a small garrison, and was but slightly fortified. General Foster, however, immediately directed all his energies to strengthen the works, so as to resist any assault till reinforcements arrived from Newbern to raise the siege. There is no report of the losses on either side.

An expedition sent against a rebel camp at Gum Swamp, in May, which captured 166 prisoners, and military stores, and another in July against Rocky Mount, on Tar river, which destroyed the bridge at that place, and a large amount of rebel property, terminate the military operations in that State to October, 1863.

On being compelled to abandon his attempt upon Washington, the rebel General Hill marched toward the Nansemond, to reinforce Longstreet, who was investing Suffolk. Failing in his direct assaults upon this place, the enemy proceeded to establish batteries for its reduction. General Peck made every preparation for defence of which the place was capable, and by vigorous and well-timed sorties, kept the enemy at a distance, and retarded the construction of his works, till, finally, the attempt was abandoned. Our loss in these operations was 44 killed, 202 wounded, and 14 missing. We captured 400 prisoners and five guns during the siege.

As Suffolk possessed no advantages as a military post, and was not susceptible of a good defence, the garrison was afterwards withdrawn within the new lines constructed around Norfolk.

On the 5th of October, Brigadier-General Wistar was sent, with a small force, aided by gunboats, to Mathew County, Va., to break up a rebel party known as the "Confederate Volunteer Coast Guard," which was engaged in smuggling goods across the Chesapeake, from Maryland and the Eastern Shore. Most of these "Coast Guards" were absent at the time, but the expedition resulted in capturing 150 boats and schooners, and 80 head of beef cattle. The navy has given efficient aid in all the operations in this department.

DEPARTMENT OF THE SOUTH.

The withdrawal in 1862 of most of our troops in South Carolina, compelled the commanding general of that department to confine himself mainly to the defence of the points which he then occupied.

A naval attack on Fort Sumter took place on the 7th of April, 1863, but it was unsuccessful.

It being represented by the Navy Department that a second attack upon Fort Sumter and Charleston was preparing, and that its success required the military occupation of Morris Island, and the establishment of land batteries on that island, to assist in the reduction of Fort Sumter, the establishment of these batteries, and the reduction of the enemy's works,—Fort Wagner and Battery Gregg,—being a matter of engineering skill, Brigadier-General (now Major-General) Q. A. Gillmore was selected to command the land forces engaged in these operations.

Charleston.—General Gillmore's Operations.

General Gillmore, despite the enemy's defensive works, landed his force on Morris Island on the 10th of July, and immediately commenced the siege of Fort Wagner, and established batteries against Fort Sumter. Without, however, waiting for the reduction of the former, he opened, on the 17th of August, his fire on the latter, and on the 23d, after seven days' bombardment, Fort Sumter was reported "a shapeless and harmless mass of ruins." Being under the fire of other forts of the enemy, and inaccessible by land, our troops could not occupy it, and a few guns have since been temporarily remounted; but they have been as often silenced.

General Gillmore now vigorously pushed forward his saps against Fort Wagner, and on the morning of September 7th took possession of that place, and also of Battery Gregg, most of the garrison having made their escape in boats during the night. He captured, in all, thirty-six pieces of artillery, and a large amount of ammunition.

General Gillmore's operations have been characterized by great professional skill and boldness. He has overcome difficulties almost unknown in modern sieges. Indeed, his operations on Morris Island constitute a new era in the science of engineering and gunnery. Since the capture of Forts Wagner and Gregg he has enlarged these works, and established powerful batteries, which effectually command Fort Sumter, and can render efficient aid to any naval attack upon Charleston. They also control the entrance to the harbor. [January, 1864, the siege of Charleston still continues.]

DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF.

Major-General Banks took command of the Department of the Gulf on the 17th of December, 1862. Almost immediately on assuming command, he ordered a detachment of troops to Galveston, Texas. Colonel Burrill, with three companies of the 42d Massachusetts Volunteers, the advance of the expedition, arrived at that place on the evening of the 24th of December, and took possession of the city.

On the 1st of January, before the arrival of the remainder of our forces, the rebels made an attack by land with artillery and infantry, and by water with three powerful rams. Colonel Burrill's command of 260 men were nearly all killed and taken prisoners; the Harriet Lane captured, and the flag-ship Westfield was blown up by her commander, to prevent her falling into the hands of the enemy.

On the 11th of January, General Weitzel, with a force of infantry and artillery, aided by the gunboats under Lieutenant-Commanding Buchanan, crossed Berwick bay, and attacked the rebel gunboat Cotton, in the Bayou Teche. This gunboat, being disabled by the fire of our naval and land forces, was burned by the rebels.

The loss of General Weitzel's command in this expedition was six killed and 27 wounded. A number were killed and wounded on our gunboats, and among the former, Lieutenant-Commanding Buchanan.

In his operations up the Teche and Atchafalaya, General Banks encountered the enemy under Sibley, Taylor, and Mouton, at several points, and defeated them in every engagement. Butte à la Rose was captured, with a garrison and two heavy guns, by the gunboats under Lieutenant-Commanding T. Cooke, of the navy. General Banks reached Alexandria on the 8th of May, the enemy having retreated towards Shreveport and into Texas. In this expedition, General Banks reports the capture of 2000 prisoners, 22 pieces of artillery, two transports, and a large amount of public property. We destroyed three gunboats and eight transports. Our own loss in the different engagements with the enemy was "very slight," numbers not given.

General Banks now returned to the Mississippi river, crossed his army to Bayou Sara, where he formed a junction, May 23, with General Augur's forces from Baton Rouge. The latter had an engagement with the enemy on Port Hudson Plains on the 22d, in which he lost nineteen killed and eighty wounded. Port Hudson was immediately invested. While awaiting the slow operations of a siege, General Banks made two unsuccessful assaults. Finally, on the 8th of July, the place unconditionally surrendered. We captured 6233 prisoners, 51 pieces of artillery, two steamers, 4400 pounds of cannon powder, 5000 small arms, 15,000 rounds of ammunition, &c., &c. Our loss from the 23d to 30th of May, including the assault of the 27th, as reported, was about 1000.

Being reinforced from General Grant's army, on the termination of the Mississippi campaign, General Banks sent an expedition under General Franklin to occupy the mouth of the Sabine river, in Texas. It reached the entrance to the harbor on the 8th of September, and the gunboats engaged the enemy's batteries; but two of them, the Clifton and Sachem, being disabled and forced to surrender, the others retreated, and the whole expedition returned to Brashear City. The officers and crew of the gunboats, and about ninety sharpshooters, who were on board, were captured, and our loss in killed and wounded was about thirty. After a long delay at Brashear City, the army moved forward by Franklin and Vermillionville, and at last accounts occupied Opelousas.

[December, 1863, an expedition from this Department occupies the Rio Grande country from its mouth up to and including Brownsville.]

Opening of the Mississippi.—Battle of Arkansas Post.

General Grant was instructed, December, 1862, to drive the enemy, in the interior, as far south as possible, and destroy their railroad communications; then fall back to Memphis, and embark his available forces on transports, and, with the assistance of the fleet of Admiral Porter, reduce Vicksburg. The first part of this plan was most successfully executed, but the right wing of the army sent against Vicksburg, under Major-General Sherman, found that place much stronger than was expected. Two attacks were made on the 28th and 29th of December, but failing in their object, our troops were withdrawn, and while waiting for reinforcements from General Grant, moved up the Arkansas river to Arkansas Post, which place was, with the assistance of the gunboats, captured on the 11th of January. Our loss at Vicksburg was 191 killed, 982 wounded, and 756 missing; at Arkansas Post, 129 killed, 831 wounded, 17 missing. We captured at the latter place 5000 prisoners, 17 cannon, 3000 small arms, 46,000 rounds of ammunition, and 563 animals.

General Grant's Operations.

General Grant now assumed the immediate command of the army on the Mississippi, which was largely reinforced. Being satisfied by the result of General Sherman's operations that the north line of the enemy's works was too strong to be carried without a very heavy loss, he directed his attention to opening the canal, which had been commenced the year before by General Williams, across the peninsula, on the west bank of the river, and to several other projects for turning the enemy's position.

The canal proving impracticable, and his other plans being unsuccessful, he determined to move his army by land down the west bank of the river some seventy miles, while transports for crossing should run past the enemy's batteries at Vicksburg. The danger of running the batteries being very great, and the roads on the west side in horrible condition, this was a difficult and hazardous expedient, but it seemed to be the only possible solution of the problem. The execution of the plan, however, was greatly facilitated by Admiral Farragut, who had run two of his vessels past the enemy's batteries at Port Hudson and Grand Gulf, and cleared the river of the enemy's boats below Vicksburg; and finally, through the indomitable energy of the commanding general and the admirable dispositions of Admiral Porter for running the enemy's batteries, the operation was completely successful.

Victories of May, 1863.—Champion's Hill, &c.

The army crossed the river at Bruinsburg April 30; turned Grand Gulf, and engaged the enemy near Port Gibson on the 1st, and at Fourteen-Mile creek on the 3d of May. The enemy was defeated in both engagements, with heavy loss. General Grant then moved his forces, by rapid marches, to the north, in order to separate the garrison of Vicksburg from the covering army of Johnston. This movement was followed by the battles of Raymond, May 12th; of Jackson, May 14th; of Champion's Hill, May 16th; and Big Black River bridge, May 17th—in all of which our troops were victorious. General Grant then proceeded to invest Vicksburg.

Grierson's great Raid.

In order to facilitate General Grant's operations by destroying the enemy's line of communication and prevent the early concentration of any reinforcements, Colonel (now Brigadier-General) Grierson was sent, with a cavalry force from La Grange, on the 17th of April, to traverse the interior of the State of Mississippi. This expedition was most successfully conducted; it destroyed many of the enemy's railroad bridges, depots, and much rolling stock, and reached Baton Rouge, Louisiana, in safety, on the 2d of May.

Capture of Vicksburg.

On returning to Vicksburg, General Grant found his forces insufficient to entirely invest the enemy's works; there was, therefore, danger that the two bodies of the enemy under Pemberton and Johnston might yet effect a junction, as it was known that the latter was being largely reinforced from Bragg's army in Middle and East Tennessee. Under these circumstances General Grant determined to attempt to carry the place by assault. Two unsuccessful attacks were made May 19th and 22d, but as reinforcements reached him a few days after, sufficiently large to enable him to completely invest the rebel defences, he resorted to the slower but more certain operations of a regular siege. By the 3d of July his saps were so far advanced as to render his success certain, and on that day General Pemberton proposed an armistice and capitulation, which were finally accepted, and Vicksburg surrendered on the 4th of July.

In the language of General Grant's official report, the results of this short campaign were "the defeat of the enemy in five battles outside of Vicksburg; the occupation of Jackson, the capital of the State of Mississippi; and the capture of Vicksburg and its garrison, and munitions of war—a loss to the enemy of thirty-seven thousand (37,000) prisoners, among whom were fifteen general officers; at least ten thousand (10,000) killed and wounded, and among the killed Generals Tracy, Tilghman, and Green, and hundreds, and perhaps thousands, of stragglers who can never be collected and organized. Arms and munitions of war for an army of sixty thousand men have fallen into our hands, besides a large amount of other public property, consisting of railroads, locomotives, cars, steamboats, cotton, &c., and much was destroyed to prevent our capturing it.

"Our losses in the series of battles may be summed up as follows:

	Killed.	Wounded.	Missing.
Port Gibson	130	718	5
Fourteen-Mile creek (skirmish).	4	24	...
Raymond	69	341	32
Jackson	40	240	6
Champion's Hill	426	1842	189
Big Black railroad bridge	29	242	2
Vicksburg	545	3688	303

"Of the wounded, many were but slightly wounded, and continued on duty; many more required but a few days or weeks for their recovery. Not more than one half of the wounded were permanently disabled."

When we consider the character of the country in which this army operated, the formidable obstacles to be overcome, the number of the enemy's forces, and the strength of his works, we cannot fail to admire the courage and endurance of the troops, and the skill and daring of their commander. No more brilliant exploit can be found in military history.

Second Capture of the City of Jackson, &c.

As soon as Vicksburg capitulated, General Sherman was sent in pursuit of Johnston's forces. The latter retreated to Jackson, Mississippi, which place was taken by us on the 16th of July. Our loss was about 1000 killed, wounded, and missing. General Sherman captured 764 prisoners, 2 rifled guns, a large amount of ammunition, and destroyed the railroads, rolling stock, &c. The enemy retreated towards the Alabama line, and General Sherman returned to Vicksburg to recuperate his forces.

Capture of Yazoo City.

A military and naval force was sent to Yazoo City on the 13th. It took 300 prisoners, captured one steamer and burned five; took six cannon, 250 small arms, and some 800 horses and mules. No loss on our side reported.

Other Operations.

Small expeditions were also sent against Canton, Pontotoc, Grenada, and Natchez, Mississippi. At Grenada a large amount of rolling stock was destroyed, and near Natchez General Ransom captured 5000 head of Texas cattle, a number of prisoners and teams, and a large amount of ammunition. The other expeditions were also successful, meeting with very little opposition.

As soon as his army was supplied and rested, General Grant sent a force under General Steele to Helena to co-operate with General Schofield's troops against Little Rock, and another, under Generals Ord and Herron, to New Orleans to reinforce General Banks for such ulterior operations as he might deem proper to undertake.

Small expeditions were also sent to the Red river, and to Harrisonburg and Monroe, on the Washita, to break up and destroy guerilla bands.

After General Grant left Vicksburg to assume the general command east of the Mississippi, General McPherson moved with a part of his force to Canton, Mississippi, scattering the enemy's cavalry and destroying his materials and roads in the centre of that State.

DEPARTMENT OF THE MISSOURI.

Battle of Springfield, January, 1863.

Early in January, 1863, a rebel force estimated at from 4000 to 6000, under Marmaduke, moved upon Lawrence Mills, and proceeded, by way of Ozark, to the attack of Springfield, Missouri, to which place our small force, consisting chiefly of militia, convalescents and citizens, was compelled to fall back. This miscellaneous garrison, of only about 1000 men, obstinately defended the place most of the day of the 8th of January, with the loss of 14 killed, 145 wounded, and 5 missing—in all, 164. Under cover of the night the enemy withdrew. Another skirmish took place at Hartsville on the 11th, in which our loss was 7 killed and 64 wounded. We captured 27 prisoners.

Battle Near Honey Springs, Ark., July, 1863.

On the 15th of July Major-General Blunt crossed the Arkansas river, near Honey Springs, Indian Territory, and on the 16th attacked a superior force of rebels, under General Cooper, which he completely routed, the enemy leaving their killed and wounded on the field. Our loss was 17 killed and 60 wounded, while that of the enemy was 150 killed, (buried by our men), 400 wounded, and 77 prisoners taken, besides one piece of artillery, two hundred stand of arms, and fifteen wagons.

Capture of Fort Smith, Ark.

After several skirmishes with the enemy General Blunt descended the Arkansas river, and, on the 1st of September, occupied Fort Smith, Arkansas.

Helena—Victory of July 4, 1863.

The main body of our troops in the department of the Missouri had, in the early part of the season, been sent to reinforce General Grant before Vicksburg. Taking advantage of this reduction of force, the enemy moved against Helena, and attacked that place on the 4th of July. After a severe engagement he was defeated by Major-General Prentiss, with a heavy loss in killed and wounded, and 1100 prisoners. Our loss in killed, wounded and missing was only about 250.

Capture of Little Rock, Ark.

As soon as Vicksburg had capitulated, Major-General Steele was sent with a force to Helena, to form a junction with Brigadier-General Davidson, and drive the enemy south of Arkansas river. This junction being effected, General Steele, on the 1st of August, advanced against the enemy, who fell back towards Little Rock. After several successful skirmishes our troops, on the 10th September, took possession of the capital of Arkansas. Our loss in killed, wounded and missing did not exceed 100. We captured 1000 prisoners, and such public property as the rebels had not time to destroy. After the capture of Little Rock, and while our cavalry were driving the main force of the rebels south, the enemy attempted to recapture Pine Bluff, but was repulsed with heavy loss. On the 28th of October our troops occupied Arkadelphia, the enemy retreating to Red river.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NORTHWEST.

Campaign against the Indians.

As soon as the season was sufficiently advanced for a campaign against the Indians, General Pope sent a column, under Brigadier-General Sibley, up the Mississippi river to near our northern boundary, and thence across the country to the Missouri; and another of cavalry, under Brigadier-General Sully, from Sioux City up the latter river to cut off the retreat of the hostile Indians whom General Sibley might drive before him from Minnesota and eastern Dakota. Unfortunately these movements were not well timed, and no junction was effected. A portion of the savages driven north took refuge within British territory, where our troops were not permitted to follow them. Some fled westward and were overtaken by General Sibley near Missouri Coteau, where he encountered a force of Minnesota and Dakota warriors estimated at from 2200 to 2500. In the engagements which followed at Big Mound and Dead Buffalo lake, the Indians were completely routed, with a heavy loss in killed and wounded, and in the destruction of their provisions and means of transportation. Our loss was five killed and four wounded. The savages who escaped crossed to the west side of the Mississippi, and General Sibley reached that river, about 40 miles below Fort Clarke, on the 29th of July, having marched a distance of some six hundred miles from St. Paul.

On the 3d of September General Sully encountered and defeated, at White Stone Hill, about 130 miles above the Little Cheyenne, a body of Indians, a part of whom had previously been engaged against Sibley's column. The savages were defeated, with a heavy loss in killed and wounded, and 156 prisoners. Our loss was 20 killed and 38 wounded.

DEPARTMENT OF THE PACIFIC.

Some thefts and robberies having been committed by roving bands of Indians on the overland stage route, January, 1863, General Conner marched with a small force to Bear river, Idaho Territory, where, on the 26th, he overtook and completely defeated them in a severe battle, in which he killed 224 of the 300, and captured 175 of their horses. His own loss in killed and wounded was 63 out of 200.

DEPARTMENT OF NEW MEXICO.

The troops of this department have been principally employed during the past year on the Indian frontier, and in opening and in guarding roads to the newly discovered gold mines in Arizona.

DEPARTMRNT OF THE OHIO.

In December, 1862, Brigadier-General S. P. Carter made a cavalry raid into Eastern Tennessee and destroyed the Union and Watauga railroad bridges, a considerable amount of arms, rolling stock, &c. He returned to Kentucky with the loss of only 10 men.

General Gillmore's Victory at Somerset.

On the 30th of March, 1863, Brigadier-General Gillmore engaged and defeated a large rebel force under General Pegram, near Somerset, Kentucky.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

Our loss in killed, wounded and missing was only 30; that of the enemy estimated at 500.

In June the rebels attempted a raid into Harrison county, Indiana, but were driven back with the loss of 53 prisoners.

Colonel Sanders' Raid.

About the same time Colonel Sanders, with two pieces of artillery, the 1st Tennessee cavalry, and some detachments from General Carter's command, destroyed the railroad near Knoxville, and the bridges at Slate creek, Strawberry plains, and Mossy creek; captured 10 pieces of artillery, 1000 stand of arms, and 500 prisoners. Our loss was 1 killed, 2 wounded, and a few stragglers.

Morgan's Raid.

About the time of Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania the rebel General John N. Morgan, with a large guerilla band, attempted a raid into Indiana and Ohio, intending probably to recross the Ohio river into West Virginia or Pennsylvania, and join Lee's army. His force consisted of six pieces of artillery and some 3000 cavalry. This band was completely destroyed, nearly every man being killed or taken prisoner.

Knoxville.—General Burnside's Operations.

The detaching of the 9th army corps to reinforce General Grant before Vicksburg delayed somewhat General Burnside's preparations for an active campaign in East Tennessee. The necessity, however, of co-operating with the movements of General Rosecrans compelled him take the field without awaiting the return of this corps. His main column moved on three routes, making Kingston his objective point, which place was reached on the 1st of September. Knoxville was also occupied on the 1st by Colonel Foster, and General Shackelford moved forward to Loudon bridge, which was burned by the retreating enemy. Another small column had marched from Kentucky directly on Cumberland Gap, and by a rapid flank march from Knoxville upon that place General Burnside cut off the retreat of the garrison and forced it to surrender on the 9th of September, capturing 14 pieces of artillery and 2000 prisoners. His infantry made this forced march of 60 miles in 52 hours. A column of cavalry at the same time ascended the valley to Bristol, driving the enemy across the Virginia line, and destroying the railroad bridges over the Holston and Watauga rivers, to prevent the enemy's return into Tennessee. The main body of Burnside's army was now ordered to concentrate on the Tennessee river, from Loudon westward, so as to connect with General Rosecrans' army, which reached Chattanooga on the 9th. Paint Rock Pass into North Carolina was also occupied by a small force. The restoration of East Tennessee to the Union was thus affected by skilful combinations, with scarcely any loss on our part.

On the 21st of September Colonel Foster had a skirmish with the enemy near Bristol, on the Virginia line, and on the 10th and 11th of October another sharp engagement took place at Blue Springs. The enemy was defeated with a heavy loss in killed and wounded, and 150 prisoners; our loss was about 100. After the battle of Chickamauga, when, General Rosecrans had fallen back to Chattanooga, the enemy pushed forward a column into East Tennessee to threaten Burnside's position at Loudon, and to cover a cavalry raid upon Rosecrans' communications. General Burnside had occupied Philadelphia, Tenn., and other points on the south side of the river, with small garrisons. The enemy surprised some of these forces and captured 6 guns, 50 wagons, and some 600 or 700 prisoners. The remainder retreated to Loudon, and succeeded in holding the crossing of the river. In the mean time Jones had moved down on the north side of the Holston river to Rogersville, with some 3500 cavalry, and surprised our garrison at that place, capturing 4 pieces of artillery, 36 wagons, and 650 men. [Subsequently General Burnside was besieged in Knoxville by Longstreet, but, after a gallant and skilful defence, Longstreet was defeated.]

DEPARTMENT OF THE CUMBERLAND.

Victory at Murfreesboro.

On the 26th of December, 1862, General Rosecrans advanced from Nashville against Bragg, whose forces were at that time somewhat dispersed. On the 30th our army, after heavy skirmishing en route, reached the vicinity of Murfreesboro', and took up a line of battle. The left, under Crittenden, crossed the next day to the east of Stone's river, while the centre, commanded by Thomas, and the right by McCook, were posted on the west bank of the river. By the plan of battle agreed upon, McCook was to hold the enemy in check on the right at least for three hours, until Crittenden crossed Stone's river, crushed the enemy's right to the east of the stream, and forced his way into Murfreesboro', taking the enemy in flank and reverse, the unsupported rebel centre being exposed at the same time to the vigorous blows of Thomas. This well-conceived programme, unfortunately, was unsuccessful, from the failure of McCook to maintain his position; our right, brigade after brigade in succession, being forced back by the enemy's heavy columns with regimental front. This retrograde movement of the right caused Crittenden to suspend his march and support our forces on the west bank of the river, the battle, on our part, changing from the offensive to the defensive. The day closed with our right and right-centre about at right angles to the first line of battle, but leaving us masters of the original ground on our left, and our new line advantageously posted, with open ground in front, swept at all points by our artillery. Though in this day's engagement the enemy had been roughly handled, our loss in men and artillery had been heavy.

On the 1st of January we awaited in position the enemy's attack, but the day closed without offensive operations, except two demonstrations producing no result.

On the morning of the 2d the enemy opened four heavy batteries on our centre, and made a strong demonstration of attack a little further to the right, but a well-directed artillery fire soon silenced his batteries, and put an end to his efforts there. In the afternoon a vigorous attack was made on our left by heavy columns, battalion front, forcing us, after severe fighting, to cross to the west of the river, from which side a well directed fire, supported by infantry, was opened with terrific havoc on the enemy's masses, inflicting a loss upon him, in 40 minutes, of 2000 killed and wounded. The defeated and flying enemy were pursued by five brigades until after dark. We captured four pieces of artillery and a stand of colors.

As a heavy rain, on the morning of the 3d, rendered the ploughed ground on our left impassable for artillery, no pursuit was ordered, and the day terminated without further hostilities than driving from our front the enemy's numerous sharpshooters, who greatly annoyed us from the woods and their rifle-pits.

On the 5th we occupied Murfreesboro', and pursued the enemy six or seven miles towards Manchester, but the difficulty of bringing up supplies, and the great loss of artillery horses, was thought to render further pursuit inexpedient.

Our loss in this battle was 1533 killed, 7245 wounded, and 2800 missing, and 28 pieces of artillery and a large number of wagons captured by the enemy. Reported rebel loss in killed and wounded was 14,560. We captured six pieces of their artillery.

Subsequent Operations.

After the battle of Murfreesboro', or Stone's river, the enemy took position at Shellbyville and Tullahoma.

On the 3d of February Generals Wheeler, Forrest and Wharton invested Fort Donelson, and demanded its capitulation. This was promptly refused by its commander, Colonel Harding. After an obstinate attack, which lasted all day, the rebels retired with an estimated loss of 900. Our loss in the fort was 13 killed and 51 wounded.

On the 4th of March Colonel Coburn, with 1845 men, attempted a reconnoissance from Franklin towards Springfield, encountering in his way Van Dorn's rebel column, estimated at 7500. The enemy retreated, drawing Colonel Coburn into a gorge, where he was surrounded, and nearly all his force captured. Our loss was 1406; that of the enemy 150 killed and 450 wounded.

On the 20th of March Colonel Hall, while on a reconnoissance, encountered and defeated the rebel General Morgan with a force of three or four thousand. Our loss was 55. The enemy left 63 on the field, but carried off his wounded, estimated at 300.

On the 25th of March the rebel General Forrest made a cavalry raid on the Nashville and Columbia railroad, burning the bridge, and capturing Colonel Bloodgood's command at Brentwood. General Green Clay Smith, arriving opportunely with about 600 cavalry, attacked the enemy in rear, and recovered a large portion of the property captured at Brentwood, pursuing the rebels to the "Little Harpeth," where they were reinforced. His loss in this attack was 4 killed, 19 wounded and 4 missing.

On the 10 of April a guerilla force attacked a train near Lavergne, guarded by 40 men. The cars were destroyed, and nearly half of the guard killed and wounded. At the same time Van Dorn, with a large mounted force, attacked Franklin, but was repulsed by Major-General Granger, with a loss of 19 killed, 35 wounded left on the field, and 48 prisoners.

Major-General Joseph J. Reynolds made a raid upon the Manchester and McMinnville railroad, destroying depots, rolling stock, supplies, and other property, and capturing 180 prisoners.

Colonel Straight, with about 1600 men, including reinforcements received from General Dodge at Tuscumbia, started on a raid into Georgia to cut the enemy's communications. After heavy losses in skirmishes with Forrest's cavalry, and when near his destination, he was forced to surrender.

On the 22d of May Major-General Stanley made a raid upon Middleton, capturing 80 prisoners, 300 horses, 600 stand of arms, and other property.

On the 4th of June the rebel General Forrest made a raid upon Franklin, and on the 11th attacked Triune. His loss in these unsuccessful skirmishes were estimated at over 100, while ours was only 17 killed and wounded.

Shellbyville and Tullahoma.—Brilliant success of General Rosecrans.

General Rosecrans on the 25th of June commenced a forward movement upon the enemy, well intrenched at Tullahoma, covered in front by the defiles of Duck river, a deep narrow stream with a few fords or bridges, and a rough, rocky range of hills which divides the "barrens" from the lower level of Middle Tennessee. Bragg's main force occupied a strong position, north of Duck river from Shelbyville, which was fortified, to Wartrace, all the gaps on the roads leading thereto being held in force.

General Rosecrans determined to render useless the rebel intrenchments by turning their right and moving on their communications at the railroad bridg on Elk river, thus compelling a battle on our own ground, or driving them on a disadvantageous line of retreat. By admirable combined movements he deceived the enemy by a threatened advance in force on their left at Shelbyville, while the mass of his army in reality seized Hoover's, Liberty, and the other gaps by hard fighting, and moved on Manchester, thus turning the right of the enemy's defences of Duck river and directly threatening Bragg, who was compelled to fall back to Tullahoma, hotly pursued by Granger, who had brilliantly carried Shelbyville on their left. Dispositions were immediately made to turn Tullahoma and fall upon the enemy's rear, but Bragg abandoned to us his intrenched camp and rapidly fell back towards Bridgeport, Alabama.

In the words of General Rosecrans' official report: "Thus ended a nine days' campaign, which drove the enemy from two fortified positions and gave us possession of Middle Tennessee, conducted in one of the most extraordinary rains ever known in Tennessee at that period of the year, over a soil that became almost a quicksand. Our operations were retarded thirty-six hours at Hoover's gap, and sixty hours at and in front of Winchester, which alone prevented us from geting possession of his communications and forcing the enemy to a very disastrous battle. These results were far more successful than was anticipated, and could only have been obtained by a surprise as to the direction and force of our movements."

Our losses in these operations were 85 killed, 462 wounded and 13 missing; making in all 560.

The killed and wounded of the enemy is unknown, but we took 1634 prisoners, of which 59 were commissioned officers. We captured six pieces of artillery, many small arms, considerable camp equipage, and large quantities of commissary and quartermaster's stores.

Capture of Chattanooga.

After the expulsion of his army from Middle Tennessee, Bragg retreated across the Cumberland mountains and Tennessee river upon Chattanooga, which place was fortified, and defensive works constructed at the crossings of the river as far up as Blythe's Ferry.

Having put the railroad in condition to forward supplies, Rosecrans, on the 16th of August, commenced his advance across the Cumberland Mountains, Chattanooga and its covering ridges on the southeast being his objective point. In order to command and avail himself of the most important passes, the front of his movement extended from the head of Sequatchie valley, in East Tennessee, to Athens, Alabama, thus threatening the line of the Tennessee River from Whitesbury to Blythe's Ferry, a distance of over 150 miles.

The Tennessee River was reached on the 20th of August, and Chattanooga shelled from the north bank on the 21st. Pontoon, boat, raft, and trestle bridges were rapidly prepared at Caperton's Ferry, Bridgeport, mouth of Battle Creek, and Shellmount, and the army, except cavalry, safely crossed the Tennessee in face of the enemy. By the 8th of September, Thomas had moved on Trenton, seizing Frick's and Stevens's Gaps on the Lookout Mountain; McCook had advanced to Valley Head and taken Winston's Gap, while Crittenden had crossed to Wauhatchie, communicating on the right with Thomas, and threatening Chattanooga by the pass over the point of Lookout Mountain.

The first mountain barrier south of the Tennessee being successfully passed, General Rosecrans decided to threaten the enemy's communication with his right, while his centre and left seized the gaps and commanding points of the mountains in front. General Crittenden's reconnoissance on the 9th developed the fact that the enemy had evacuated Chattanooga on the day and night previous.

Chickamauga, Sept. 19, 1863.

The battle of Chickamauga commenced on the morning of the 19th, McCook's corps forming the right of our line of battle, Crittenden's the centre, and Thomas's the left. The enemy first attacked our left with heavy masses, endeavoring to turn it so as to occupy the road to Chattanooga, but all their efforts proved abortive. The centre was next assailed, and temporarily driven back, but, being promptly reinforced, maintained its ground. As night approached, the battle ceased, and the combatants rested on their arms.

The attack was furiously renewed on the morning of the 20th, against our left and centre. Division after division was pushed forward to resist the attacking masses of the enemy, when, according to General Rosecrans's report, General Wood, overlooking the direction to "close up" on Reynolds, supposed he was to support him by withdrawing from the line and passing in the rear of General Brannan.

"By this unfortunate mistake a gap was opened in the line of battle, of which the enemy took instant advantage, and, striking Davis in flank and rear, threw his whole division into confusion." General Wood claims that the orders he received were of such a character as to leave him no option but to obey them in the manner he did. Pouring in through this break in our line, the enemy cut off our right and right centre, and attacked Sheridan's division, which was advancing to the support of our left. After gallant but fruitless efforts against this rebel torrent, he was compelled to give way, but afterwards rallied a considerable portion of his force, and, by a circuitous route, joined General Thomas, who now had to breast the tide of battle, against the whole rebel army. Our right and part of the centre had been completely broken, and fled in confusion from the field, carrying with them towards Chattanooga their commanders, Generals McCook and Crittenden, and also General Rosecrans, who was on that part of the line. His chief of staff, General Garfield, however, made his way to the left and joined General Thomas, who still remained immovable in his position. His line had assumed a crescent form, with its flanks supported by the lower spurs of the mountain, and here, like a lion at bay, he repulsed the terrible onsets of the enemy. About half-past three P.M., the enemy discovered a gap in the hills in the rear of his right flank, and Longstreet commenced pouring his massive column through the opening. At this critical moment Major-General Gordon Granger, who had been posted with his reserves to cover our left and rear, arrived upon the field. He knew nothing of the condition of the battle, but, with the true instincts of a soldier, he had marched to the sound of the cannon. General Thomas merely pointed out to him the gap through which the enemy was debouching, when, quick as thought, he threw upon it Steadman's brigade of cavalry. In the words of General Rosecrans's official report, "Swift was the charge and terrible the conflict, but the enemy was broken. A thousand of our brave men, killed and wounded, paid for its possession, but we held the gap. Two divisions of Longstreet's corps confronted the position. Determined to take it, they successively came to the assault. A battery of six guns, placed in the gorge, poured death and slaughter into them. They charged to within a few yards of the pieces, but our grape and canister, and the leaden hail of our musketry, delivered in sparing but terrible volleys from cartridges taken, in many instances, from the boxes of their fallen companions, was too much even for Longstreet's men. About sunset they made their last charge, when our men, being out of ammunition, rushed on them with bayonet, and they gave way, to return no more."

In the mean time the enemy made repeated attempts to carry General Thomas's position on the left and front, but were as often driven back with great loss. At nightfall the enemy fell back beyond the range of our artillery, leaving Thomas victorious on his hard-fought field.

As most of the corps of McCook and Crittenden had retreated to Chattanooga, it was deemed advisable also to withdraw the left wing to that place. Thomas consequently fell back during the night to Rossville, leaving the dead and most of the wounded in the hands of the enemy. He here received a supply of ammunition, and during all the 21st offered battle to the enemy, but the attack was not seriously renewed. On the night of the 21st he withdrew the remainder of the army within the defences of Chattanooga.

The enemy suffered severely in these battles, and on the night of the 20th was virtually defeated; but, being permitted to gather the trophies of the field on the 21st, he is entitled to claim a victory, however barren in its results. His loss in killed, wounded, and missing, as reported in rebel papers, was 18,000.

Our loss in these battles was 1644 killed, 9262 wounded, and 4945 missing. If we add the loss of the cavalry in its several engagements, at about 500, we have a total of 16,351. We lost, in material, 36 guns, 20 caissons, 8450 small arms, and 5834 infantry accoutrements. We captured 2003 prisoners.

Subsequent Operations.

After General Rosecrans's retreat to Chattanooga, he withdrew his forces from the passes of Lookout Mountain, which covered his line of supplies from Bridgeport. These were immediately occupied by the enemy, who also sent a cavalry force across the Tennessee above Chattanooga, which destroyed a large wagon-train in the Sequatchie valley, captured McMinnville, and other points on the railroad, thus almost completely cutting off the supplies of General Rosecrans's army. Fortunately for us, the line of railroad was well defended; and the enemy's cavalry being successfully attacked by Colonel McCook at Anderson's Cross-Roads on the 2d of October, by General Mitchell at Shelbyville on the 6th, and by General Crook at Farmington on the 8th, were mostly captured or destroyed.

General Grant relieves General Rosecrans.

Major-General Grant arrived at Louisville, and on the 19th, in obedience to the orders of the President, assumed general command of the Departments of the Tennessee, Cumberland, and Ohio. In accordance with his recommendation, Major-General G. H. Thomas was placed in the immediate command of the Department of the Cumberland, and Major-General W. T. Sherman of that of the Tennessee.

Recapture of Lookout Valley.

As the supply of the army at Chattanooga demanded prompt attention, he immediately repaired to that place. By bringing up from Bridgeport the 11th and 12th Corps (Army of the Potomac), under General Hooker, and throwing a force from Chattanooga, under General W. F. Smith, on the south side of the river at Brown's Ferry, the points of Lookout Mountain commanding the river were recaptured on the 27th, 28th, and 29th of October. This important success restored his communications with his depots of supplies.

It appears, from the official reports, that our loss in the operations for reopening communications on the south side of the Tennessee River from Chattanooga to Bridgeport, was 76 killed, 339 wounded, and 22 missing,—total, 437. The estimated loss of the enemy was over 1500.

As soon as General Grant could get up his supplies, he prepared to advance upon the enemy, who had become weakened by the detachment of Longstreet's command against Knoxville.

Battle and Victory of Chattanooga.

General Sherman's army moved up the north side of the Tennessee River, and during the night of the 23d and 24th of November established pontoon bridges and crossed to the south side between Citico Creek and the Chickamauga. On the afternoon of the 23d, General Thomas's forces attacked the enemy's rifle-pits between Chattanooga and Citico Creek. The battle was renewed on the 24th along the whole line; Sherman carried the eastern end of Missionary Ridge up to the tunnel, and Thomas repelled every attempt of the enemy to regain the position which he had lost at the centre, while Hooker's force in Lookout Valley crossed the mountain and drove the enemy from its northern slope.

On the 25th, the whole of Missionary Ridge from Rossville to the Chickamauga was, after a desperate struggle, most gallantly carried by our troops, and the enemy completely routed. Considering the strength of the rebel position and the difficulty of storming his intrenchments, the battle of Chattanooga must be regarded as one of the most remarkable in history. Not only did the officers and men exhibit great skill and daring in their operations on the field, but the highest praise is also due to the commanding general for his admirable dispositions for dislodging the enemy from a position apparently impregnable. Moreover, by turning his right flank and throwing him back upon Ringgold and Dalton, Sherman's forces were interposed between Bragg and Longstreet, so as to prevent any possibility of their forming a junction.

Our loss in killed, wounded, and missing, is reported at about 4000. We captured over 6000 prisoners, besides the wounded left in our hands, 42 pieces of artillery, 5000 or 6000 small arms, and a large train. The enemy's loss in killed and wounded is not known.

While Generals Thomas and Hooker pushed Bragg's army back into Georgia, General Sherman, with his own and General Granger's forces, was sent into East Tennessee to prevent the return of Longstreet and to relieve General Burnside, who was then besieged in Knoxville. Sherman successfully accomplished his object, General Burnside having skilfully and bravely held his position, and Longstreet retreated towards Virginia.

BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG.

July 3.—GETTYSBURG, PA., county seat of Adams county, on the turnpike road from Philadelphia to Pittsburg, 114 miles west of the former, and 36 miles south-west of Harrisburg, stands on elevated ground, in a fertile farming country. At this point the Union Army obtain a decisive victory, after three days of severe fighting.

The Union forces, under General George G. Meade, in chief command, consist of the following corps of the Army of the Potomac: 1st Corps, General John F. Reynolds, subsequently under General A. Doubleday; 2d Corps, General W. G. Hancock; 3d Corps, General D. E. Sickles; 5th Corps, General George Sykes; 6th Corps, General John Sedgwick; 11th Corps, General Oliver O. Howard; 12 Corps, General Henry W. Slocum; in all 80,000 men, and 200 guns.

The Confederate forces, under General Robert E. Lee, in chief command, consist of General Hill's corps, General Longstreet's, and General Ewell's, in all 90,000 men, and 200 guns.

First Day of the Battle.

July 1.—The battle begins at half-past nine A. M., between the 1st Corps of the Army of the Potomac, under Major-General John F. Reynolds, and Confederate General Hill's corps. At the beginning of the engagement General Reynolds was killed, and the chief command devolved on General Doubleday, until the arrival of General O. O. Howard, at half-past eleven A.M.

From ten to twelve o'clock the 1st Corps, numbering about 8000, successfully sustained on their right the attack of Confederate General Heath, with 10,000 men, and on their left the attack of Confederate General Pender, with another 10,000 men.

At one P.M. two divisions of the 11th Corps of the Army of the Potomac reinforced the 1st Corps, about giving way on the right, while the other division of the 11th Corps, under General Von Steinwehr, by order of General Howard, occupied Cemetery Hill heights, south of Gettysburg.

The left of the Union army was able, until three P.M., to resist the Confederate attack, and captured Confederate General Archer and 1500 men, attempting a flank movement.

The right suffered heavily, and during the alternate advances and retreats, lost at one time 1900 men (afterwards retaken), but in turn captured a Mississippi regiment of 800, which was sent to the rear.

At two P.M. Hill's corps, having been reinforced by Early's division of 9000 men, and pressing heavily on the right of the Union line of battle, the 1st Corps fell back through the south-west outskirts of the town; the 11th Corps falling back through the centre of the town, lost 2500 in prisoners. Previously, however, the heavy artillery had been removed to Cemetery Hill, and Von Steinwehr's division was so disposed as to support the retiring Union forces.

During the fight of the first day, lasting from half-past nine A.M. to four P.M., the Union loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners, greatly exceeded that of the enemy. At the close of the fight, the Confederate army occupied Gettysburg.

Second Day of the Battle.

July 2.—At twelve midnight, the 12th Corps arrives, with General Slocum, upon whom devolves the chief command, until the arrival of General Meade, at one A.M. Next the 3d Corps, under Sickles, arrives, and at six A.M., the Reserve Artillery and the 2d Corps, under General Hancock. Two brigades of Pennsylvania Reserves, under General S. Wylie Crawford, attached to the 5th Corps, also arrived during the morning, the remainder of the 5th Corps, the 6th Corps, and Lockwood's Maryland Brigade, temporarily attached to the 12th Corps, coming up in the afternoon.

The Union line from the right to the left was formed in an irregular horse-shoe shape, as follows: 12th Corps, part of 1st Corps, under Wadsworth, 11th Corps, part of 1st Corps, under Doubleday, 2d Corps and 3d Corps. Later in the day, the 5th Corps was placed to the left of the 3d, and the 6th Corps was interposed between the 2d and 3d Corps. During the early part of the day, the Confederates kept perfectly quiet; but at twenty minutes past four P.M. began the battle of July 2d, by a terrific artillery fire, followed by an infantry attack on the Union left, which, after a severe struggle, fell back.

General Sickles was here severely wounded. The 2d and 5th filled the breach. The Confederates still pouring in, fighting furiously, the 12th Corps was ordered across from the extreme right; still, numerically, the Confedederate force was vastly the superior. The 6th Corps, after a continuous march of 36 hours, now came up, and rushing in to the support of the 12th, drove the Confederates back. The right wing of the Union army was now immediately and furiously attacked, and the fighting was desperate until ten P.M., when the Confederates retired, leaving the Union troops upon the field.

Third Day of the Battle.

July 3.—At half-past four A.M., the Union forces renewed the engagement, opening fire upon the Confederates, who poured in heavy cannonading from their right-wing batteries.

For half an hour the cannonading did but little injury to the Union troops, when a sudden and impetuous attack was made by the Confederate infantry and sharp-shooters upon the right wing, driving the Union front line and skirmishers back from their entrenchments. Quickly rallying, they regained their position, driving back their assailants, and taking a large number of prisoners. An entire cessation of hostilities, from eleven to one o'clock, followed. At one P.M., the Confederates again opened their batteries, and for an hour the cannonading from both sides was incessant, the Confederates repeatedly charging the Union lines, under cover of the artillery fire, but being as often repulsed. Until nearly five P.M., the ground was hotly contested, when the Confederate army fell back, leaving the Union forces masters of the field. The Confederate losses are reported to be as follows: killed, 5500; wounded, 21,000; prisoners, 13,621.

General Meade's official report sums up the result of the combat as follows: "The enemy were defeated, compelled to evacuate Pennsylvania and Maryland, and to withdraw from the Upper Shenandoah Valley. We captured three guns, 41 stand of colors, 13,621 prisoners, and 24,978 small-arms We lost 2834 killed, 13,709 wounded, and 6643 missing. General Lee very carefully refrains from saying anything about his losses; but that they were very much larger than ours cannot be doubted."

——— ABANDONED AND CAPTURED PROPERTY.—Secretary S. P. Chase issues a circular letter from the Treasury Department, regulating the treatment of abandoned, captured, commercial, and confiscable property in the insurrectionery region.

——— PAROLED PRISONERS.—Secretary Stanton officially refuses to recognize unauthorized military paroles.

———ATHENS, GREECE.—A letter from this point states: "Party spirit and love of rule have at length divided the soldiers and citizens into two hostile bands, and in the streets and squares of the city blood has been flowing. For two days—July 1st and 2d—the battle was incessantly raging, and the sound of guns and cannon told us that the work of death was going on. To-day, through the intervention of the ministers of the three protecting Powers,—France, England, and Russia,—a truce of forty-eight hours was proclaimed."

VICKSBURG CAMPAIGN.

July 4.—VICKSBURG SURRENDERS to the United States forces, under Major-General U. S. Grant. This city, a port of entry, and capital of Warren County, Miss., is situated on the Mississippi river, 400 miles above New Orleans, and 50 miles west of Jackson. The situation is elevated, and the ground uneven. It is the most important port on the river between Natchez and Memphis, and was strongly fortified by the Confederates. The history of the campaign may be briefly summed up as follows: Jan. 12, 1861.—The Governor of Mississippi sent artillery to fortify Vicksburg, and erected a series of forts, miles in extent. May 12, 1862.—The Union force opened the siege of the city, Flag-Officer Farragut demanding the surrender of the forts. June 7.—The Union fleet pass Vicksburg June 8.—The Union gunboats silence the Confederate batteries at Grand Gulf. June 25.—General Grant assumed command of the troops threatening Mississippi. June 27.—Union gunboats shell Vicksburg, continuing the bombardment at intervals until July 15, when the rebel ram Arkansas ran by the fleet, and lay in front of the city. (This ram was destroyed later by the U. S. fleet.) July 24.—Admiral Farragut raises the naval siege. Dec. 22.—Grant's army organized into four army corps.—XIII. commanded by General McClernand; XV. by General Sherman; XVI. by General Hurlbut; XVII. by General McPherson. Dec. 29.—General Sherman advanced upon Vicksburg, on the north side, and was repulsed, with heavy loss. Jan. 2, 1863.—General Sherman retired from Vicksburg. Jan. 18.—The land forces were started from Napoleon and Memphis, and landed at Young's Point and Milliken's Bend, on the west side of the river, above Vicksburg. Feb. 2.—The Queen of the West ran the Vicksburg batteries. Feb. 4.—General Grant arrived, and assumed command of the land forces. Feb. 18.—The mortar-boats took up their position, and the bombardment of the city opened. March 14.—Admiral Farragut attacked Port Hudson, and succeeded in running the batteries to Warrenton, and communicating with the fleet above. Admiral Porter shortly afterward run some of his fleet down to the assistance of Admiral Farragut, and important naval operations commenced between Vicksburg and Port Hudson, cutting off the Confederate communications. March 25.—Two gunboats run past Vicksburg. April 17.—Fire opened from the Peninsula batteries. April 29.—Admiral Porter attacked Grand Gulf, to cover the landing of General Grant's troops. April 30.—General Grant, with three corps d'armée, crossed from the Louisiana side of the river to Bruinsburg, Miss., thus turning Grand Gulf. May 1, he engaged and defeated the enemy near Port Gibson, and on May 3d he again defeated them near Fourteen Mile Creek. General Grant then moved his forces by rapid marches towards the North, in order to separate the garrison of Vicksburg from the army of Johnston. This movement was followed by the battle of Raymond, May 12; of Jackson, May 14; of Champion's Hill, May 16; and Big Black Bridge, May 17; in all of which General Grant's army were signally victorious. May 20.—Vicksburg invested on all sides, the Union troops forming a semicircle, with both flanks resting on the river. May 21 and 22.—The Union forces assaulted the works, but were forced to retire, with heavy loss. May 23.—General Grant commenced the regular siege operations, while Admiral Porter bombarded the city day and night. July 3.—Generals Grant and Pemberton, commander of Vicksburg, had an interview, which resulted in an unconditional surrender of the city to the United States forces on the following day.

General McPherson received the formal surrender. The terms allowed the Confederate forces to be paroled, the officers retaining their side-arms, horses, and personal property. At eleven o'clock A.M., the Union forces marched into the city, and at noon the United States flag floated over the batteries.

The paroled prisoners numbered 31,277, including 15 Generals, with the subordinate officers of their commands. The captures included 206 pieces of siege guns and light artillery, 6000 head of cattle, 1000 hogsheads of sugar, 380,000 rounds of fixed ammunition, 500 head of horses and mules, $5,000,000 worth of clothing (Confederate prices), 60,000 stand of small-arms, and large supplies of molasses, salt, and bacon.

TENNESSEE CAMPAIGN.

July 4.—TENNESSEE is entirely evacuated by Confederate troops. On the 1st instant, the Union General McCook, at Estell Springs, faced the Confederate General Buckner, opposite the forks. The Union General Thomas faced the Confederates on the opposite bank of the river, the main body of the Confederates being in the vicinity of Winchester and Dechard. The Union General Crittenden took possession of the road from Dechard to Chattanooga. On the 2d, General McCook drove the Confederate force from the mouth of Rock Creek to Winchester. General Sheridan, with his force, engaging and driving the enemy from the south bank of the Elk river. General Thomas took possession of a ford on the Elk, while General Turchin, with a small brigade of cavalry, pushed from Hillsboro', on the Dechard road, and engaged a Confederate force near Morris Ferry. After a sharp conflict, General Mitchell arriving to aid the Union troops, they succeeded in forcing the passage of the river. On the 3d, General Sheridan crossed the Elk river, and supported by General J. C. Davis, pursued the Confederates to Cowan, when he found they had retreated across the mountains. The whole Union force arrived during the day, but the Confederates had made good their escape, without a general engagement. The campaign may be briefly summed up as follows: June 23.—The Union troops take Shelbyville, Tenn. June 27.—Union headquarters reached Manchester, Tenn., and were followed by the various divisions until the 29th. June 30.—The Union troops threaten Tullahoma. July 1.—Confederate troops evacuate Tullahoma. July 2 and 3.—Union troops in pursuit. July 4.—The Confederates retreat from Tennessee.

On the 1st of July, an envoy from the Tycoon waited upon the French minister, and requested that some ships-of-war might be placed at the service of the Japanese Government, for the transport of troops to Kioto. This request could not be complied with, and it was arranged that merchant vessels should be employed.

On the following day the envoy had another interview, and the representatives of France and England proposed that the Tycoon should open the port of Hiago and the town of Osacca, as evidence of the good will by which he declared himself to be animated, and as the only means of mitigating the serious consequences which the expulsion decree would occasion in Europe. The reply of the envoy was evasive.

The position of affairs is tranquil, and foreigners have no intention of leaving their establishments. Admiral Juares has been reinforced by two French vessels, and Colonel Neale has written to China for reinforcements.

POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES AS AFFECTED BY IMMIGRATION.

This most interesting topic has never received the deep study which it deserves, and has never been fully developed by our statisticians. Some years ago, when the political parties of the United States were strongly exercised on the subject of a proposed restriction of the elective franchise extended by our laws to immigrants, an inquiry into the extent of the increase of our population by immigration was made by Mr. Louis Schade, a gentleman of mathematical talents, then resident in Washington. The results of his calculations were surprising, for until they appeared very few persons had even a remote conception of the extent to which the rapid increase of our population was influenced by immigration. Upon the basis of the calculations referred to, we have constructed the subjoined tables, which present in one view what would have been the white and free colored population of the United States if it had been left to the slow increase produced by the excess of births over deaths. In other words, these tables show by mathematical demonstration what would have been the white and free colored population of the United States in 1863, if our ports had been closed against immigration in 1790; they show what that population would have been if the influx of immigrants had been shut off in 1800; and the same, if that policy had been adopted in 1810 or 1820. The basis of calculation is the following: if there had been no immigration to the United States after the adoption of the Constitution, then the increase of our population would only have been so much as resulted from the excess of births over deaths. This increase is found by calculation to be 1.38 per annum. Taking then the white and free colored population of 1790, and multiplying it by this ascertained percentage of natural increase, and so multiplying and compounding the results year by year down to 1863, we find what would have been that population in the last year by such natural increase alone. By this process it is shown that the white and free colored population of the United States would have reached but 8,789,969, instead of the majestic aggregate of 29,902,174 at the close of 1863. So widely different is this result from any existing opinion or notion of the subject in the popular mind, that it may be described as startling. Yet the figures appear to be unimpeachable. The rate of annual natural increase assumed (1.38) is higher than that of any other country for which we have sufficient official data for calculation. To show how it compares with that of other nations, the following table is presented:—

TABLE SHOWING THE INCREASE OF POPULATION BY THE EXCESS OF BIRTHS OVER DEATHS, AND THE PERCENTAGE THEREOF FOR THE YEARS AND COUNTRIES NAMED.

Year.	Name of the Country.	Number of inhabitants.	Number of births in the respective year.	Number of deaths in the respective year.	Per cent. of increase of the total population.
1850†	England and Wales	17,927,609	593,422	368,986	1.25
1851	France	35,783,170	943,061	784,433	0.44
1849	Prussia	16,331,187	691,562	498,862	1.17
1850	Holland	3,056,591	105,338	67,588	1.23
1850	Belgium	4,426,202	120,107	92,820	0.61
1849	Portugal	3,473,758	114,331	88,992	0.72
1852	Saxony	1,987,832	80,322	58,739	1.08

From the foregoing table it will be perceived that the percentage of 1.38 allowed for the natural increase of the population of the United States, from the mere excess of births over deaths, is considerably greater than that of Great Britain, the next highest, and very far greater than that of any other country named. This difference in our favor is, beyond question, due to the long periods of peace enjoyed by the United States when other nations were at war. The percentage of France, it will be observed, is the lowest in the table, a result flowing from her almost constant wars, which drain her population of large numbers of her marriageable young men.

Referring now to the table on the next page, and subtracting the totals of the respective columns from 29,902,174, the aggregate of our white and free colored population in 1863, we find the following remarkable results:—

In 1863, the immigrants since 1790, and their descendants, number.....	21,112,205
In 1863, the immigrants since 1800, and their descendants, number.....	19,439,230
In 1863, the immigrants since 1810, and their descendants, number.....	17,223,632
In 1863, the immigrants since 1820, and their descendants, number.....	15,300,689

* 1850 is taken for the United States, because the number of births for 1860 are not yet published; and the free colored are taken with the whites, because they are placed together in the tables of births and deaths in the census. The slave population is omitted from the tables, because it is not affected by immigration.

† The Census for Great Britain for 1861 shows the increase from excess of births over deaths for the previous ten years to be 12.6, which is considerably less than 1.25 per annum.

The number of Catholics comprises 640,000 Roman Catholics, 25,000 United Greeks, 75,000 United Armenians, 20,000 Syrians and United Chaldeans, and 140,000 Maronites. The number of Catholics has of late greatly increased, by accessions from the Greek and other Oriental denominations,—especially among the Bulgarians; and, according to a recent Roman Catholic work on ecclesiastical statistics ("P. Karl vom Heil-Aloys, Statistisches Jahrbuch der Kirche, 1862"), they number now 2,000,000.

The number of Protestants will not fall short at present of 40,000: they are especially increasing in the Danubian Principalities, where they are estimated at 20,000.

The number of Mohammedans has been for many years on the decrease.

The "Star in the East"—a journal published in Constantinople—gives the following statistics of Christian schools, which were derived, it says, from the Bureau of the Ministry of Public Instruction:—

At Constantinople and in the environs,—schools, 144; pupils, 16,217; in Roumelia and the isles of the Archipelago,—schools, 1692; pupils, 87,231; in Anatolia and Arabia,—schools, 726; pupils, 34,959: total schools, 1562; pupils, 138,387.

In the city of Constantinople and the suburbs, there are 127 schools,—of which 77 are Greek, with 6477 pupils; 37 Armenian, with 6528 pupils; 5 Protestant, with 82 pupils; and 8 Roman Catholic, with 509 pupils.

THE PRECIOUS METALS.

PREPARED BY DAVID M. BALFOUR.

FROM the earliest times to the commencement of the Christian era, the amount of the precious metals obtained from the surface and bowels of the earth is estimated to be four thousand millions of dollars; from the commencement of the Christian era to the discovery of America, another sum of four thousand millions was obtained; from the date of the latter event to the close of 1842, an addition of nine thousand millions was made; the discovery and extensive working of the Russian gold-mines in 1843 added, to the close of 1852, one thousand millions more; the double discovery of the California mines in 1848, and the Australia mines in 1851, added, to the close of 1863, three thousand millions;—making a grand total, to the close of 1863, of twenty-one thousand millions of dollars. The average loss by abrasion of coin is estimated to be a tenth of one per cent. per annum; and the loss by consumption in the arts, and by fire and shipwreck, at from two to seven millions of dollars per annum. The amount of the precious metals in existence is estimated to be eleven thousand millions of dollars; of which, six thousand millions are estimated to be in silver, and the remainder in gold. Of the amount now in existence, six thousand millions are estimated to have been obtained from the continent of America, two thousand millions from Europe, two thousand millions from Asia, and the remainder from Africa and other sources.

The following statement will exhibit the annual product of the precious metals throughout the world in 1863:—

1863	4,862,000,000	5,700,000,000	10,562,000,000

Period.	Gold.	Silver.	Total.
A.C.	$1,415,000,000	$2,913,000,000	$4,328,000,000
A.D. to 1492	3,842,000,000	521,000,000	4,363,000,000
1493 to 1842	2,839,000,000	5,913,000,000	8,752,000,000
1843 to 1852	642,000,000	394,000,000	1,036,000,000
1853 to 1862	2,018,000,000	535,000,000	2,553,000,000

During the first period (prior to the commencement of the Christian era), the annual product of the precious metals was about two millions of dollars; during the second period (from the commencement of the Christian era to the discovery of America), it was three millions of dollars; during the third period (three hundred and fifty years,—to the discovery of the Russian mines), it attained to twenty-five millions of dollars; during the decade immediately succeeding the discovery of the Russian mines (from 1843 to 1852), it was one hundred millions of dollars per annum; during the decade immediately succeeding the double discovery of the California and Australia mines (from 1853 to 1862), it was two hundred and fifty-five millions of dollars; but, owing to the falling off of the latter sources of supply, the annual product has diminished to two hundred and forty millions of dollars, notwithstanding the increased supply from New Zealand and other sources. The increase in the amount of the precious metals in existence has been greater during the last fifteen years than during the previous seventy-five.

THE NEW GOLD-MINING REGIONS.

Since the grand impulse given to gold-mining by the discoveries and workings in California and Australia, new gold-fields have been brought to light, in rapid succession, in various parts of the world. It is not difficult to give some account of them, provided we be excused from setting down in figures how much they are yielding or likely to yield,—on which subject estimates, made with as much care as the subject admits of, are presented in the preceding article.

In the United States, we have first the mines in the Rocky Mountains, within the Territory of Colorado,—say two thousand miles, by the shortest line of travel, due west from Philadelphia. All native gold is more or less mixed with silver; but this is characteristically pale,—the fineness of gold varying generally from 700 to 850 thousandths. Still, it is found in sufficient quantity and richness to build up towns rapidly, to carry some of the refinements of civilization across the plains, to draw a large population, partly adventurous, but chiefly industrious, and to enrich large operators and claim-holders.

Some hundreds of miles west and northwest of this locality, we find the busy miners and prospectors of Idaho Territory. This Territory, which was organized in March, 1863, takes in the northern ranges of the Rocky Mountains, with the head-waters of the Missouri, Columbia, Yellow Stone, and North Platte Rivers. The gold from that region is of high fineness, particularly from the mines on Salmon River, a tributary of the Columbia.

Of the Nevada mining-region, where there is both silver and gold in great abundance, there is yet known too little to speak definitely. The mines are numerous, and the shares in some of them sell at very high prices in the stock-market of San Francisco. A branch-mint is about to be located in this new Territory. Like Colorado, it is eminently a mineral, not an agricultural, region.

After Nevada Territory, the State of Oregon claims attention. The gold from this State is of about the same fineness as that from the mines of California; and the production has been rapidly increasing during the last two years.

In the Territories of Arizona and Washington, there are also valuable deposits of the precious metals; but the mines have not been developed to the same extent as in the other regions mentioned.

The production of gold in the United States has been materially retarded by the disturbing events of the last three years. When our national troubles shall have been settled, and peace once more prevails, an extraordinary stimulus will be given to the development of the mineral resources of the country. We may then confidently expect an unprecedented production of the precious metals, and the commencement of a new era in the settlement and progress of the Territories.

There are some promising openings in Canada, south of Quebec, and approaching the line of Maine: some small deposits, we understand, have been received from this locality at the Philadelphia Mint. The grains are said to be large and of a high quality, though various. In Nova Scotia, also, there have been extensive mines recently laid open, though as yet not very remunerative. This gold goes direct to England.

NECROLOGY (1863), AMERICAN.

[NOTE.—It is a matter of deep regret to the publisher and editor of the NATIONAL ALMANAC that no full or accurate necrology of the United States Volunteer service could be prepared. In the regular service (in both the army and navy) official records of the casualties are kept and periodically published. These furnish reliable data for those branches of the military service; but thus far there is no record of similar character within our knowledge concerning the casualties in the volunteer army and navy. In the absence of such authentic data, the necrology of the volunteers (below the grades of general and staff officers) has to be made from the hasty and incomplete, and frequently erroneous, accounts sent from the field while it is still obscured by the clouds and confusion of battle. From a copious supply of such materials a necrology of the commissioned officers of the volunteers was prepared for this volume; but, upon submitting it to a course of verification, it was found that in many instances the officers named were living, that in numerous other instances officers who are undoubtedly among the fallen heroes of the nation, were not named at all, and that, in a word, the publication of such a list would be placing on record a mere digest of unreliable or erroneous rumors. Under these circumstances, the necrology of volunteers (below the grade of general and staff officers) has been omitted from this volume, with the hope that by the time of our next publication some provision shall have been made by which the record may be made full and reliable, as such a record should be.]

FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

SOURCES OF INFORMATION, AND ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

In the preparation of the following articles on foreign countries the editor of the Almanac sought (as in all other cases) information from original sources and official personages. To this end he addressed letters to the ministers, diplomatic agents, and consuls of foreign countries in the United States, and also to the ministers, diplomatic agents, and consuls of the United States abroad. From a large number of these gentlemen he received valuable contributions,—which favors are gratefully acknowledged. Some of them, however, failed to respond; and in these cases, the best authorities in book-form were examined and used, chief among which was the Almanach de Gotha for 1864. These articles are believed to be exceedingly valuable, and, taken in the aggregate, far superior to any thing on the same subject hitherto published in annual form in the United States.

The Austrian Empire is a union of different States under one sovereign and one central government. The inhabitants of these States differ from each other in descent, language, customs, laws, and religion. Previous to October 20, 1860, the whole legislative authority was vested in the Emperor, who exercised supreme control in all the provinces except Hungary, Croatia, and Transylvania, the Diets being intrusted only with the power of apportioning the supplies to be contributed by the different districts in accordance with the laws on financial affairs framed by the Emperor and transmitted to them to be registered. On October 20, 1860, however, to remove the general deep-seated dissatisfaction which had existed from long before the insurrection of 1848, the Emperor granted a Constitution to the non-Hungarian States, and reaffirmed the ancient Constitutions of Hungary, Croatia, and Transylvania. This Constitution, with the subsequent Imperial concessions of 26th February, 1861, and 1st May, 1862, granted to the Austrian Imperial Parliament the regulation of all subjects of legislation in regard to the non-Hungarian provinces, except those reserved specially to the Provincial Diets, fixed the law of representation, and decreed the responsibility of Ministers.

The Imperial Austrian Parliament is composed of a House of Lords and a House of Representatives.

The House of Lords is constituted as follows:—the Great Princes of the Imperial Family, 62 hereditary chiefs of noble families of high rank from their very extensive territorial possessions, the archbishops and bishops of princely rank, and 47 members appointed for life. The States of Guatemala, San Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica declared their independence of Spain, September 21, 1821, and joined the Mexican Republic. They, however, separated from the Mexican Confederation, July 1, 1823. After many efforts, a treaty of union between Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, and San Salvador was entered into, October 7, 1842. From this union Guatemala seceded, March 21, 1847, and has since continued a separate State. In 1849 and 1850, commissioners on the part of San Salvador, Honduras, and Nicaragua proposed a union of all the Central American States, under the title of "The National Representatives of Central America." This pact was unanimously ratified by the three States represented in convention, and went into effect January 9, 1851, when the National Representatives met at the city of Chinandega, State of Nicaragua. José Barrundia was elected President, but Guatemala and Costa Rica declined to accede. A constitutional assembly was next convoked in 1853, at Tegucigalpa, for the purpose of framing a constitution which should comprehend San Salvador, Honduras, and Nicaragua, when San Salvador withdrew and declared itself a sovereign and separate State. The union between Honduras and Nicaragua was practically dissolved by a war which broke out in February, 1863, between San Salvador and Guatemala, Honduras joining San Salvador and Nicaragua joining Guatemala. HISTORICAL NOTICE.—This republic, formerly New Grenada, embraces the States of Panama, Bolivar, Magdalena, Santander, Antioquia, Boyaca, Cundinamarca, Tolima, Cauca, and the Federal District of Bogota. The title of United States of Colombia was substituted for that of United States of New Grenada, on the 20th of September, 1861, by a convention of the Liberals sitting at Bogota, who at the same session adopted a Constitution. This was for a period resisted in the northern portions of the States, by General Canal and his adherents of the Conservative party. On the 29th of September, 1862, a convention was concluded between General Mosquera and General Canal, by which the party of the latter acceded to the Government of the United States of Colombia; and the civil war then terminated. On the 4th of September, 1863, the Deputies of the States reassembled in convention at Rio Negro in the State of Antioquia. General Mosquera then resigned the dictatorial power conferred upon him, 20th of September, 1861, and the convention appointed a provisional Government of five ministers, pending the consideration of a new Constitution. The new Constitution was established and put into operation in May, 1863. Under this charter the several States administer their own local affairs, independent of the Federal Government,—the President and the Congress being elected by the States. The public journals report that, at an election held in Dec. 1863, six of the new States voted for Murillo for President.

THE SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN QUESTION.—[Denmark is now (Feb. 1864) apparently on the brink of a war with the Germanic Confederation on account of complications growing out of the Schleswig-Holstein question. Schleswig and Holstein are two duchies independent of the Danish monarchy, but the dukes of which happen to be at the same time kings of Denmark. The dukedoms, however, descend by a different law of succession from that which regulates the succession to the monarchy, —the crown of Denmark being heritable by females, and the sovereignty of the duchies only by males. This being the case, and Frederick VII. (the predecessor of the present King of Denmark) having no male heir, the duchies were likely to be separated entirely from Denmark at his death. To guard against future trouble apprehended on this account, and to preserve the integrity of the Danish monarchy, a Congress of European Powers, consisting of Austria, Denmark, England, France, Norway, Prussia, and Sweden, assembled in London in 1852, and on the 8th of May of that year settled the succession to both Denmark and the duchies upon Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glucksburg and his heirs, by which the heirs of an elder branch (Augustenburg) were excluded from the succession to the duchies. At the death of the late King of Denmark (Frederick VII.), Nov. 15, 1863, Prince Christian succeeded to the crown of Denmark and to the duchies under the London settlement; but at the same time Prince Frederick, of Augustenburg, claimed to succeed to the duchies on the ground that the London Congress of European Powers could neither set aside his rights, nor the rights of the people of Schleswig and Holstein. The duchies being mainly German in origin, language, and feeling, the greater part of the German people side with Prince Frederick, and the German Diet have (January, 1864) marched an army into the duchies to prevent their incorporation into the Kingdom of Denmark. Austria and Prussia, acting independently of the Diet, have marched armies there also to prevent hostilities if possible. Feb. 4, 1864, hostilities commenced at Missunde.]

The Senate.

The Senate consists of not more than 150 Senators, appointed by the Emperor; their tenure of office is for life. Cardinals, Marshals, and Admirals belong to the Senate as of right.

The Legislative Chambers.

The 35th Article of the French Constitution provides that there shall be one deputy to the Legislative Chamber for each 35,000 voters. And the Senatus-Consultus of the 27th May, 1857, further provides that an additional deputy shall be accorded to each and every department in which the fraction of voters over and above the foregoing-mentioned quota may exceed 17,500 voters. The Legislative Chamber is, consequently, formed of 283 deputies. It is believed that 35 of them are of the Opposition.

The Council of State.

The Council of State consists of one President, three Vice-Presidents, and one Secretary-General, appointed by the Emperor; of not less than forty nor more than fifty Councillors of State of ordinary service; of not more than fifteen Councillors of State of ordinary service, unclassed; of not more than twenty Councillors of State of extraordinary service; of forty Masters of Petitions and Grievances (divided into a first and a second class, each consisting of twenty Masters); and of eighty Auditors (divided into a first and a second class, each consisting of forty Auditors). It is stated that 80,000 sailors at the outside can be procured when all those who follow the sea in France are draughted.

There are in the French Navy 136 steam-vessels (if the 24 gunboats afloat be counted); but if only the five chief classes of vessels used in naval warfare be reckoned, France possesses only 112 steam-vessels:—

Profitable as this monopoly was to the French Government, the proceeds are really a great deal of money less than England draws from the same imported article by her judicious practice of liberty. England taxes tobacco between 3 shillings and 9 shillings the pound, levying at the same time an additional tax of five per cent. Nevertheless, although she has a population one-fourth less than France, and with fewer smokers and snuffers in proportion to every hundred inhabitants than France possesses, the difference between the two nations in the revenues drawn from this source was as follows, in these years:—

* The Seine Department (in which Paris is situated) is selected as containing the maximum density of population in France. By Urban Population is meant the total population of communes, or parishes, which contain above 2000 souls agglomerated. By the Rural Population is meant the total population of communes where the agglomerated population is less than 2000 souls. In France the country is uninhabited; the whole population live in villages. There are in France 37,510 communes: this is less than 1000 souls in every commune. Communes with a population less than 500 souls are very numerous.

† The French law (in common with all systems of jurisprudence built on the foundation of the Roman Law) provides fathers and mothers with power to place their illegitimate children on nearly the footing of children born in lawful wedlock. This power, unquestionably, militates against good morals. Children so legitimated are said to be "recognised."

XX. GERMANY.

STATES OF THE GERMANIC CONFEDERATION.

Under this title we present a general view of the States embraced in the Germanic Confederation; a separate view of each of those States being presented in its alphabetical order.

The TREATY OF VIENNA (1815) divided Germany into 39 separate sovereignties, but that number has been reduced to 34. The sovereignties which are no longer found on the rolls of the German States are (1) the Principality of Gotha, which lapsed in 1826, the territory being divided between Cobourg and Meiningen; (2) the Duchy of Anhalt-Cöthen, which lapsed in 1847, the territory being attached to Anhalt-Dessau; (3 and 4) the Principalities of Hohenzollern-Hechingen and Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, which were annexed to Prussia in 1849, upon the abdication of the reigning princes; and (5) the Duchy of Anhalt-Bernberg, which lapsed in 1863, upon the death of the last duke, the territory being now annexed to Anhalt-Dessau-Cöthen, the whole composing the Duchy of Anhalt.

The remaining 34 sovereignties constitute what is known as the German Empire, being united in a confederation (Deutsche Bund) of independent States under an Act of Constitution signed at Vienna June 8, 1815. According to the first article of that Constitution, the object of the Confederation is "the preservation of the internal and external security of Germany and the independence and inviolability of the several German States." The second article concedes equality of rights and privileges to the members of the Confederation, but the influence and votes of the States in the Diet or Assembly are arranged and established according to the relative importance of the States, as will appear in a subsequent table. The organ and representative of the Confederation is a Diet of Plenipotentiaries, which sits in permanence in the city of Frankfort-on-the-Main. This body acts in one of two forms,—either as a General Assembly, or plenum, in which the States have votes according to their importance, but every State casting at least one vote; or as the Ordinary Assembly or Committee of the Confederation, in which 17 votes are divided among the 34 members according to a scale in the table already referred to. In all cases where changes in the organic laws of the Confederation are to be considered or made, or when a new member is to be admitted into the Diet, or when peace or war is to be declared, the proceedings must be in plenum, or in General Assembly. But in other cases the Ordinary Assembly, or Committee of Confederation, may act either in a legislative or executive capacity.

The following are the members of the Confederation as now constituted, with their votes in the General Assembly, and their votes in Committee of Confederation. By the Fifth Article of the Act of June 8, 1815, Austria is invested with the right of presiding in the Diet.

The Committee of Confederation has not exerted much influence of late years. It was, consequently, proposed in 1863 to popularize the German representative system. On the 16th of August, the sovereign German Princes and the Burgomasters of the Free Cities assembled at Frankfort, when a plan of reform was laid before the Assembly by the Emperor of Austria. This plan proposes for the legislative and administrative affairs of the Confederation: (1) A Directory consisting of the Emperor of Austria, the Kings of Prussia and Bavaria, and two other princes taken from the minor States; (2) a Federal Council consisting of Commissioners casting 17 votes for the whole Confederation, subject to the revision of the Federal Assembly; (3) an Assembly of Delegates elected by the representative bodies of the several States; (4) an Assembly of the Princes and of the Chief Magistrates of the Free Cities; (5) a Federal Tribunal.

In the Assembly of Delegates, the votes of the several States were to be as follow:—Austria and Prussia, 30 each; Bavaria, 10; Saxony, Hanover, and Würtemberg, each 6; Baden, 5; Electoral and Grand Ducal Hesse, each 4; Holstein, Luxemburg, Brunswick, Mecklenburg, Nassau, and Weimar, each 2; Meiningen, Coburg, Altenburg, Oldenburg, Anhalt, the two Schwarzburgs, Waldeck, Lippe, Lichtenstein, Frankfort, Bremen, Hamburg, and Lübeck, each 1,—making in all 128 votes. No definitive action has been arrived at on these propositions.

The Army of the Confederation.

By the Act of the Congress of Vienna of June, 1815, the contribution of the various States to the army of the Germanic Confederation was fixed at one per cent. of the population, that is, the population possessed at that particular period, without taking into account a further increase or decrease of numbers. One-seventh of this army was to consist of cavalry; and ten pieces of artillery, with a proportionate number of artillerists, were to be furnished with every 1000 men. On this basis, the army of the Confederation consisted of 301,637 men, rank and file. Various changes were introduced into this military organization subsequently; and by a vote of the Diet of March 10, 1853, the total strength of the army was largely increased. The actual strength of the army of the Confederation consists of 391,634 infantry, 60,758 cavalry, and 50,680 artillery, divided into ten corps d'armée, and a number of troops of reserve,—total, 503,072 men. The distribution is as follows among the thirty-four States:—

Five German fortresses—namely, Mayence, Luxemburg, Landau, Rastatt, and Ulm—are garrisoned by Federal troops. The strongest and most important of these fortresses, Mayence, is garrisoned by Austrians and Prussians, in equal moieties; Luxemburg, by Prussians chiefly; Landau, by Bavarian troops; Rastatt, by troops of Baden and Prussia; and Ulm, by troops of Würtemberg, Bavaria, and Austria.

The Zollverein (Commercial Union).

Within the Confederation (but not embracing all of the German States) is a Commercial Union, called the Zollverein. Formerly each of the States had its own separate system of custom-houses, tariffs, moneys, weights, and measures, the existence of which was a serious embarrassment to commerce. It is the object of the Zollverein to consolidate all of these under one general system. The first measures towards the formation of the Commercial Union were proposed by Prussia in 1828, and since then the progress of the Zollverein is shown in the following statement:—

1828, Feb. 14, Union of Prussia with Hesse-Darmstadt.
" July 17, Adherence of Anhalt-Dessau.
1829, July 8, Saxe-Meiningen and Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.
1831, April 16, Waldeck.
" Aug. 25, Hesse-Cassel.
1833, Mar. 22, Bavaria and Würtemberg.
1833, May 30, Saxony.
" May 11, Saxe-Weimar, Saxe-Altenburg, and the two Schwarzburgs.
1835, Feb. 20, Hesse-Homburg.
" May 12, Baden.
" Dec. 10, Nassau.
1836, Jan. 25, Frankfort.
1841, Oct. 18, Lippe-Detmold.
" " 19, Brunswick.
1847, April 2, Luxemburg.
1851, Sept. 7, Hanover, Oldenburg, and Schaumburg Lippe.

The treaties which bind these States into the Zollverein are not of a permanent nature, but open to dissolution at stated terms.

The total revenue of the Zollverein in 1859 was 23,757,542 thalers. The thaler is about 73 cents of American money.

The Cotton Famine in England.

Report showing the Ratio of Pauperism before the Cotton Famine, the Maximum since, and Present State.

The following table exhibits the pauperism at its maximum and in its present state. The first column of figures gives an average degree of pauperism in a period of great manufacturing activity, by showing the numbers weekly relieved in every 1000 of the population; the second column contains the actual mean of the numbers so relieved; the third column shows the highest numbers returned during the cotton famine; and the fourth column, the present numbers (Sept. 12, 1863).

A census of Labrador, taken by James L. Prendergast, Superintendent of Fisheries, estimates the number of residents from L'Anse Sablon to Sandwich Bay at 1650, of whom 1331 are Protestants and 319 Catholics.

EDUCATION.—Education on this colony is sectarian, so far as the Church of England and the Catholics are concerned. The money voted by the Legislature is divided according to population between the two denominations, the expenditure for the common schools being under the control of Boards of Education, appointed by the Governor in Council. In St. John's there are several classical academies, endowed by the Government, under the control of Boards of Directors taken from the principal religious bodies, viz.:—

Catholic (called St. Bonaventure College).
Church of England Academy.
Wesleyan Academy.
General Protestant Academy, and several other schools.

In Harbor Grace and Carbonear (the two next towns in population to St. John's) there are grammar schools established by act of the Legislature. The Colonial Church and School Society have a number of schools in the Colony. There are very few private schools. By the Colonial Act, 21 Vic. cap. 7, provision is made for the training of teachers, and also for two inspectors,—one Catholic and one Protestant,—who make an annual inspection of schools; but education, from the smallness of the teachers' stipends in the outports, and the peculiar pursuits of the people, is not far advanced. The following will show the condition of the schools, 1863:—

	Schools.	Scholars.	Average Attendance.
Total	242	13,444	8,357

They are 13 in number, chosen by the property-holders of the colony for a term of eight years,—6 of those now in office to retire at the end of four years,—so that one-half the Council may be renewed every fourth year. ECCLESIASTICAL.—Church of England,—The Lord Bishop of Nova Scotia, Right Rev. Hibbert Binney, D.D., has jurisdiction of the island.

Catholic Church,—Right Rev. Peter McIntyre, D.D., Bishop of Charlottetown.

FINANCE, COMMERCE, &c.—For the year ending January 31, 1863, the revenue of the colony was £25,861 sterling, and the total expenditure was £34,451 sterling. At the close of the same year the public debt was £54,803 sterling. The exports for the year amounted to £150,549, and the imports to £211,240. In 1860, sixty-six vessels were built, of the aggregate value of $309,225. There are two banks at Charlottetown,—the Bank of Prince Edward's Island, and the Union Bank. The capital of the latter is £30,000, = $120,000.

AGRICULTURE.—By the census of 1861, it appears that in 1860 the products of some of the staples were as follow:—Wheat, 346,125 bushels; barley, 223,195 bushels; oats, 2,218,578 bushels; buckwheat, 50,127 bushels; potatoes, 2,972,235 bushels; turnips, 343,784 bushels; hay, 31,100 tons. The

COUNTIES, TOWNS, AND POPULATION.—The island is divided into three counties,—Queen's county, Prince county, and King's county. The whole population of the colony, according to the census of 1861, was 80,857, of whom 40,880 were males, and 39,997 were females. Divided according to their religious faith, there were 44,975 Protestants, and 35,882 Catholics. The population of Charlottetown was, by the same census, 6706. Georgetown, in King's county, has a population of about 900.

EDUCATION.—The Prince of Wales College, established at Charlottetown in 1860, is the most important educational institution of the colony. It is supported from the public revenue. St. Dunstan's College is a private establishment near Charlottetown. In 1856, a normal school for the training of teachers was established. The number of common schools in the same year was 260, and of pupils, 11,000. In 1861, there were 302 public school-houses, and 280 teachers; but we have no returns of the number of pupils for that year. The amount of money disbursed from the Colonial treasury, in 1862, for public education, was £11,000 sterling,—say $55,000. In 1863, an act was passed by the Legislature transferring a portion of this expense to the people individually.

XXII. GREECE.—Kingdom.

Area (including Ionian Islands), 19,250. Population (1861, including Ionian Islands), 1,330,933. Government, Constitutional Monarchy. Legislature, composed of two Chambers. Capital, Athens. Religion, Greek Confession.

The reigning sovereign of Greece is King George I., who was born 24th of Dec. 1845, and accepted at Copenhagen the crown of Greece on the 6th of June, 1863. He is younger son of the present King Christian of Denmark. The principal events which led to his election as King of the Greeks were briefly as follow:—On the 13th of October, 1862, Otho, the late king, departed from Athens, ostensibly for a tour in the Peloponnesus. On the 19th a revolution, having for its object the expulsion of the reigning dynasty, broke out at Missolonghi, followed on the 20th at Patras, and on the 22d at Athens. On the 23d, a Provisional Government was formed, and a proclamation was issued announcing the overthrow of the dynasty of King Otho, and the formation of a new government; which was followed, next day, by a proclamation of King Otho, date dat Salamis, declaring his departure from Greece to prevent the effusion of blood. The country remained under the control of the Provisional Government and the National Assembly until June, 1863. Meanwhile, on the 30th of March, 1863, the National Assembly proclaimed Prince William of Schleswig-Holstein King of the Greeks, under the title of George I.; and on the 6th of June, 1863, that prince accepted, as stated above, with the condition that the Ionian Islands should be reunited to Greece. On the 27th of June, the National Assembly at Athens declared King George, then in his nineteenth year, to be of age. Upon his arrival in Athens, the young king made proclamation as follows:—

HELLENES:—On ascending the throne to which I have been called by your suffrages, I feel the desire to say a few words to you. I bring to you neither experience nor wisdom, qualities which you cannot expect at my age; but I come to you with confidence and sincere devotion, as also with a firm belief in the prosperity of our future, to which I promise to devote my whole life.

I shall respect and conscientiously observe your laws, and especially the constitution, that keystone of the Greek edifice. I shall also endeavor to love and respect your customs and language, every thing that is dear to you, as I love you already.

I shall collect around me the best and the wisest men among you, without any regard to past differences. Assisted by their intelligence, I shall endeavor to foster the numerous and happy germs of the material resources of your noble country, which henceforth is mine.

My ambition is to make Greece the model State of the East.

* An allowance of £2500 has been granted for contingent expenses of Governor's establishment, under a local act, which has been confirmed by the Queen.

† Under the Constitutional Act, an allowance of £5000 is granted for his staff, travelling-expenses, &c.

The Almighty will give strength to my weakness and enlighten my efforts. He will aid me not to forget the obligations which I have contracted towards you.

Whereon I pray God to have you in his safe keeping. GEORGE.

ATHENS, Friday, Oct. 30.

The President must be thirty-five years of age, and have property of the value of $600. The judicial power is vested in a Supreme Court, and such subordinate courts as the Legislature may from time to time establish.

For political and judicial purposes, the Republic is divided into counties, which are further subdivided into townships. The counties are four in number,—Montserrado, Grand Bassa, Sinoe, and Maryland. The townships are commonly about eight miles in extent. Each town is a corporation, its affairs being managed by officers chosen by the inhabitants. Courts of monthly and quarter sessions are held in each county. The civil business of the county is administered by the four Superintendents appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The county system of government is capable of indefinite extension over new districts of territory that may be acquired, giving all the advantages which local self-government affords to the inhabitants.

The government of Liberia is entirely in the hands of colored men, and is successfully maintained. Its independence has been formally acknowledged by thirteen of the Powers of Europe and America,—England and France being among the former, and the Government of the United States among the latter. Treaties of amity, commerce, and navigation have been concluded between it and most of the nations referred to above, besides several others.

HISTORICAL NOTICE, PROGRESS, &c.—On the 15th of December, 1821, Commodore Robert F. Stockton, U.S.N., and Dr. Eli Ayres, acting for the American Colonization Society,—which was formed in Washington City on the night of the 20th of December, 1816,—purchased Cape Mesurado, upon which is now situated Monrovia, the capital of Liberia. There was subsequently added six hundred miles of the West African coast, with an average depth interiorwards of twenty miles.

In 1839, the several settlements planted by American benevolence on the shores of Western Africa were united as a commonwealth. In 1847, this gave place, at the desire of the settlers and with the consent of the Colonization Society, to the present Republic of Liberia.

POPULATION, &c.—16,000 persons of color have been settled in Liberia by the Colonization Society. The great majority of these were born in the United States. Besides these, about 6000 native Africans, rescued from slave-ships by American naval vessels, have been provided with homes in the Republic. An aboriginal population, estimated at 400,000, reside upon the soil, and are amenable to the laws of Liberia. Many of the natives have become useful citizens, serve on the jury, act as magistrates, and one of them was elected and creditably served as a member of the Liberian House of Representatives.

EDUCATION.—A system of common-school instruction is provided by the Liberian Government; and several institutions of a more advanced character are supported by the benevolence of the American people. A college-building, erected at a cost of $20,000, is open at Monrovia, having a faculty of 3 (colored) professors, and about 25 students.

CLIMATE, SOIL, PRODUCTIONS, &c.—From an address to the colored people of Pennsylvania, by Edward S. Morris, Esq., of Philadelphia,—a gentleman feeling a deep interest in the prosperity of the Republic of Liberia and well informed concerning its affairs,—we extract the following passages relating to its climate, soil, productions, &c.:—

"On Christmas afternoon, 1862, our good ship anchored off Monrovia. The appearance of the surrounding country from the anchorage is superb, being adorned with all the luxuriant vegetation of that sunny clime, although it wanted many of those improvements which the hand of man can bestow in more favorable circumstances. The sloping banks, carpeted with the richest tropical verdure, the city on the hill, the fort and its flag, the light-house, store-houses, &c., formed a scene which excited admiration.

"The climate of Liberia varies but little in temperature throughout the year. Properly speaking, there are but two seasons,—spring and summer. Vegetation is not interrupted. While some products of the earth are in blossom, others are coming to maturity. The two seasons which divide the year are called the wet and the dry; the former extends from the beginning of June to the end of October. During the wet season the rains are by no means incessant, and in the dry season there are some refreshing showers. The temperature in the warmest weather seldom exceeds 90° Fahrenheit, and it has not often been known to fall below 68°.

"The soil of Liberia is in all respects excellent: it is so exceedingly fertile that many articles which require so much labor in other countries are here produced spontaneously, or with very little effort on the part of the husbandman. The vegetable productions of the country are of countless variety, some of them very valuable. The forests produce mahogany, hickory, teak, rosewood, boxwood, and many other kinds of timber suitable for carpenters, ship-builders, and cabinet-makers; also camwood and other dye-woods of great value. The acacia, which produces the gum-arabic of commerce, is found in some parts of the interior; likewise the copal, from which the celebrated varnish is extracted. There are several varieties of the palm-tree, of which the nut-bearing palm is the most valuable, as it produces the palm-oil of commerce. The returns of imports from Western Africa by England during 1860 gave the value of palm-oil as reaching £1,684,532,*—equal to $8,000,000. There are also medicinal plants in great variety. Indian corn and rice (the latter of a superior quality) are produced in great abundance; also yams, sweet potatoes, cassada (which in flavor resembles the Irish potato), and many other vegetables suitable for table use. All the common garden-vegetables of America may be cultivated in Liberia. Pigs and goats, and the various kinds of domestic fowls, thrive well. Wheat, barley, and oats may be produced in some localities. The fruits are abundant and of great variety, many of them extremely delicious. Among them are the mango, orange, lemon, lime, guava, tamarind, cocoanut, banana, rose-apple, and African peach. The cultivation of sugar is also very promising, and is already carried on to a considerable extent.

"But, in conformity with the opinion which I have often expressed here and in Africa, the cultivation of coffee holds out the strongest inducements to agriculturists. Since the production of this article in Brazil has greatly decreased, owing to local causes, the supply in all parts of the world has fallen far short of the demand; and, as a consequence, prices have considerably advanced. Coffee is a native of Africa, and the coffee-plantations of the world owe their origin to plants obtained from that continent. There is now much of coffee-growing in Liberia and its neighborhood, and the quality of Liberia coffee is deemed to be equal if not superior to that of any other, not excepting the celebrated Mocha. Immense fortunes will be made by the cultivators of this article, all circumstances being now favorable for the successful prosecution of this branch of industry. There is nothing to prevent Liberia from becoming the principal coffee emporium of the world.

"Mineral wealth of the richest qualities abounds."

COMMERCE AND NAVIGATION.—The Liberians have built and manned 30 coast traders, and they have a number of large vessels engaged in commerce with England and the United States. The principal articles of export are coffee, sugar, palm-oil, and camwood.

FINANCES.—The revenue of the Republic in 1861 was $149,550, and the expenditures for the same year were $142,831.

THE NEW PRESIDENT OF LIBERIA.—Mr. E. S. Morris contributes the following letter, containing a personal sketch of the recently-inaugurated third President of this interesting Republic:—

"OFFICE, 916 ARCH STREET, PHILADELPHIA, January 8, 1864.

"GEORGE W. CHILDS, Esq., Publisher, &c.

"Knowing you are about issuing 'The National Almanac and Annual Record,' and as I have lately returned from a visit to the promising young Republic of Liberia, I take the liberty of forwarding for your disposal the following sketch of one who has contributed much to the moral and physical advancement of Liberia.

"Daniel B. Warner, the third President of that Republic, was inaugurated on the 1st of this month. He is an able statesman, a republican of the right stamp, a good writer, a patriotic citizen, and, I may add, a working-man in its broadest signification.

"Mr. Warner is of unmixed African blood. His personal appearance is manly, and calculated to command respect. His moral traits are excellent, and his intellectual qualities are of a high order. He is sagacious, persevering, diligent in every pursuit, and strictly correct in all his dealings. He possesses much firmness of character, though his manners are agreeable and his disposition amiable. Few men in any country can compare with Mr. Warner with regard to the variety of services he has rendered to the public. He has done active duty in the army and navy, in the counting-house and in the Cabinet. He has also been an efficient local preacher in the Methodist Church. In short, he is what Dr. Franklin considered the most honorable of human beings,—'a doer of good to his fellow-men.' The writer of this sketch, while lately on a visit to Liberia, became personally acquainted with Mr. Warner: he has met with few men more deserving of universal esteem. The high estimation he obtains among his countrymen is sufficiently proved by his elevation to the chief magistracy. The zeal which Mr. Warner has always displayed in the public service gives us an assurance that the affairs of the nation will continue to flourish under his auspices. His policy is strictly industrial, and will no doubt be used to develop the agricultural and manufacturing resources of the country.

"What an example does the record of Mr. Warner offer to the industrious and enterprising young men of Liberia! It exemplifies the reality of the fact that the highest offices of the Government stand open for the most worthy, however humble his origin or however straitened his worldly circumstances. His record also addresses itself to the fathers of worthy and intelligent youth in America. I respectfully invite them to glance at that chair of state, by obtaining which their sons would become historical characters. And I am free to add that the chief magistracy of Liberia is the highest position a colored man can reach in this life; for on him rest the destinies of one hundred millions of human beings. Africa will be civilized and Christianized through and by Liberia, whose President will be both the fulcrum and the lever to assist in the mighty work.

"Our philanthropic and first American minister to the Republic of Liberia (Hon. Abraham Hanson) has thus written to Mr. Morris:—

"'Allow me to record my honest and deep conviction that Liberia is destined to be the free and happy home of millions of the descendants of Africa, who shall return hither from the home of bondage, and live in the full enjoyment of the unalienable rights of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.'

"Respectfully, EDWARD S. MORRIS."

* In 1862, the imports of palm-oil from West Africa into the United Kingdom were of the value of £1,724,310.

Minister of Foreign Affairs and of the Inter.} Don Sebastian Lerdo y Tejada.
Minister of War and Marine.....General Negrete.
Minister of Justice and Public Education.....} Señor Don José M. Iglesias.
Minister of Finance and Public Credit.....} Señor Don José Higinio Nunez.

Legislature.—The legislative authority of Mexico is vested in a Congress elected by the people, the number of members being (in the last Congress) 184.

FINANCES, DEBT, &c.—In consequence of the disturbed condition of Mexico for many years, there are no recent or authentic returns of the revenue and expenditures of the Government. The principal resources of the Federal treasury consist of duties on imports and duties on the exports of gold and silver. The product of these should be from $12,000,000 to $14,000,000. Besides these, a royalty is charged upon the operations of the mints, and stamp duties are levied on paper for legal documents and contracts equal to about $4,000,000 additional. From these sources (if there were no interruptions of internal or foreign war) it is calculated that the gross revenue would amount to $16,000,000 or $18,000,000. The expenditures in time of peace amount to about $17,000,000. These statements are given on the authority of well-informed Mexican officials. The only other statement we have seen is the following, from a letter written at Vera Cruz in the summer of 1863:—

"The budgets of different Ministers of Finance for fifteen years—from 1824 to 1841, both inclusive (those for 1834–35 and 1836–37 having never been published)—give a total expenditure of $274,737,317, or a yearly average of $18,315,821; the accounts, however, of actual receipts and expenditures for fourteen of those years averaging only $17,732,292 annually. During eleven years—from 1827 to 1837, both inclusive—the maritime custom-houses averaged $6,619,900. Señor Lerdo y Tejada, in his 'Memoria' of 1857, estimates them at over $8,000,000; but as we have the assurance of Antonio Garay, José Mariano Blasco, Luis María Mora, Francisco Lombardo, T. Echevaría, Señor Lerdo y Tejada, and others, Ministers of Finance at different periods, that the contraband amounted, at the very least, to as much more (some placing it as high as three-fourths), it follows that the maritime custom-houses, properly administered, should from the years 1827 to 1837 have produced an average of $13,229,800, and during the year 1857 upwards of $16,000,000. We may fairly presume that the maritime custom-houses are capable of producing, under honest management, between $16,000,000 and $20,000,000 annually; and that this might, by a judicious system of internal taxation, be raised to $30,000,000 annually I have not the least doubt."

PUBLIC DEBT.—In December, 1861, the foreign debt of Mexico stood about thus, according to the account of the Mexican authorities:—

To English subjects.....	$60,000,000
To English subjects (secured by treaty)	4,000,000
To Spanish subjects (a great part of which was disputed).....	12,000,000
To French subjects (secured by treaty)	180,000
Total.....	$76,180,000

These figures represent the public debt as recognized by the Constitutional Government, and of course do not include the French, British, Spanish, and American claims which are in controversy between those Governments and Mexico. The latter (omitting American claims) are stated in the London "Times" as follow:—British claims, $14,000,000; French claims, $12,000,000; Spanish claims, $5,000,000; total, $31,000,000.

THE FRENCH CLAIM.—The history of this, as stated by a Mexican officer in the confidence of his Government, is as follows. In 1861 the French Minister, M. de Saligny, demanded the payment of a large sum alleged to be due to a Swiss banker, named Jecker, residing in the city of Mexico, he claiming the banker as a subject of the Emperor. Subsequently (in 1862) Jecker was gazetted in the "Mouiteur" at Paris as a French subject. The origin of Jecker's claim was a loan of $750,000 made by him to Miramon while the latter was in possession of the city of Mexico in rebellion against the Constitutional Government. The sum demanded by M. de Saligny in satisfaction of this claim, and refused by the Mexican Government, was $15,000,000. Other claims have been suggested by the French, but neither before nor since the war have they ever been specified.

ARMY AND NAVY.—The military force of Mexico in arms for the defence of the country in December, 1863, was about 50,000 men, distributed at that time in the States of San Luis Potosí, Guanajuato, Jalisco, and Michoacan. Besides these regular forces, there were numerous bands of guerrillas on the roads from Vera Cruz to the city of Mexico, hovering about the French line of communications. Mexico has no navy, the small force remaining in 1861 having been destroyed upon the arrival of the French, Spanish, and English squadrons in 1861.

EDUCATION.—Popular education in Mexico is provided for by a system of primary and secondary schools, the former being supported by municipal funds or from the treasuries of the States respectively, except in the District of Mexico and the Territory of California, where the expenses are paid from the National Treasury. Some of these schools have, in addition, particular funds administered by private associations. Under their influence, popular education has been greatly stimulated, and very great progress has been made. In the primary schools, instruction is limited to reading, writing, the principles of arithmetic, and religious and moral training. There is in the city of Mexico an association, named "Compania Lancasteriana," protected by the Government, which company superintends all primary schools, encouraging publications, and every kind of labor favorable to this branch of education; and associations of a similar character exist in most of the States.

The secondary instruction is given in colleges supported either by particular funds or by the treasuries of the States.

In the city of Mexico there have been, since the time of the Spanish Government, excellent colleges of this kind, where many of the notables of the Church, the bar, &c., have been educated. The most important are "Saint Ildephonso College," "The Lateran College," "The Conciliar Seminary," and "Saint Gregory College." All of these are extant but the last, which was suppressed by the Government a few years ago, its funds being transferred to a school of agriculture.

In the above-mentioned colleges, young men make their preparatory studies for the professions of lawyer and notary public, besides the special studies adapted to those professions.

The preparatory studies, which continue generally five years, consist of Latin and Spanish Grammar, translation from the French and sometimes the English languages, elements of Logic and Ethics, of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy.

After these follow the particular studies of the legal or medical profession, which are thorough and extensive. The law studies, which last four years, embrace Natural and International Law, Public Law, Roman or Civil Law, Spanish and Mexican Legislation, and Criminal or Penal Jurisprudence, besides the Canonical Legislation of the Catholic Church.

Medical studies are pursued in the city of Mexico in the "School of Medicine," a college organized according to the regulations and system observed in the "École de Médecine," of Paris. It has now a large and magnificent edifice, having an excellent "amphitheatre" for the chirurgical operations and autopsies, and every accommodation for keeping models, instruments, &c. This school has been very successful.

There is also a University, in which are conferred the degrees of doctor of divinity and of law; but the importance of this university is lost, since in modern times it has no more the superintendency of studies, trusted now to a committee composed of all the chief professors of the principal colleges, and named "Direccion de Estudios."

There is also in the capital an excellent college, called the "Colegio de Mineria," established in the most splendid and magnificent edifice of that city. It is designed for the education of experts in mineralogy, topographic and geographic engineering. Some of the young men educated in this college have proved very distinguished scientific professors.

The college has an astronomical observatory, and all kinds of instruments and apparatus for teaching the natural sciences.

It is supported by funds derived from a duty exacted from the owners of silver from all the mines of the republic. The students pursue their practical exercises in schools connected with the central establishment in Mexico, which are located in the mineral districts of "Real del Monte," "Guanajuato," "Zacatecas," and "Fresnillo."

Another special school, under the name of "School of Agriculture," is established near the city of Mexico, for the instruction of young men to be employed in managing farms and plantations. It is a new institution, founded five or six years ago, under very wise regulations; and it is expected that it will bring forth very efficient scholars for the improvement of agriculture. The college has an extensive farm, with all the necessary implements for rural industry belonging to it.

The public education for women is given in the city of Mexico, besides the primary schools for girls, in two principal colleges, named "Colegio de Niñas," and "Colegio de los Vizcainos," both established before the Independence. The education is limited to sewing, embroidering, housekeeping, music, and dancing, besides religious practices.

In most of the capitals and principal cities of the States, there are colleges for men supported and organized in the same way as those in the city of Mexico. The most notable are in Puebla, Oaxaca, Morelia, Toluca, and Guadalajara. There are also institutions for girls, generally of the same kind.

Besides these colleges, there are, in Mexico and in other cities, many schools directed by private professors and supported by the pensions paid by the scholars. In some of them, almost every branch of knowledge is taught.

The commission of architect, and even of a topographic engineer, may be obtained by studying in another institution, the "Academia de San Carlos." It is established in an important edifice, and it has classes in mathematics, mechanics, stereotomy, theory of constructions, besides the teaching of drawing (lineal and natural), painting, sculpture, and engraving, which form the main objects of the Academy. It has a fine gallery of pictures by the principal European painters, especially of the Spanish school, as Murillo, Velasquez, and Rivera, abounding also with religious paintings of Mexican ancient artists well known by amateurs.

This Academy is supported by the Government, and, even in the most critical circumstances of the country, it has imparted the benefit of instruction to many young Mexican artists. Some of those distinguished for their talents are sent to Rome and are pensioned there to perfect their artistical education.

One of the persons thus educated is the young painter Juan Cordero, whose pictures have been admired in Europe, one of them having obtained a premium in an exposition at Paris.

THE WAR, AND THE PROGRESS OF EVENTS.—Since the arrival of the French, Spanish, and English expedition at Vera Cruz in December, 1861, Mexico has been engaged in a war of defence against invasion. The alleged cause for this invasion was an act of the Mexican Congress suspending for two years the payment of certain foreign obligations of debt. That act, however, was promptly repealed; but the hostile forces remained, on the ground that Mexico provided no security for the fulfilment of her obligations. The troops of the expedition occupied the port of Vera Cruz without resistance, that place having been evacuated by the Mexican forces according to a plan of defence previously adopted. While there and on the road leading to the city of Mexico, the troops of the expedition suffered greatly from the excessive heat of the climate, and then negotiations were opened, ostensibly with a view to a settlement of the differences between the allied nations and Mexico without further hostilities. Meanwhile it was asked by the allies, and consented to by Mexico, that the invading army should occupy more salubrious quarters in Cordova, Orizaba, and Tehuacan, with the understanding that, if hostilities should be renewed, the troops of the expedition should first retire to the positions occupied before the agreement. Just previous to the opening of negotiations for a settlement, the representatives of the three allied nations had a meeting for the purpose of agreeing upon the claims they were to present to the consideration of the Mexican Government. It was at this meeting that the French Minister disclosed the enormous Jecker claim. The English Minister and General Prim, the Spanish commander, were surprised; and this, with other disclosures made to them, leading to the belief that the French Emperor intended to interfere in the domestic concerns of Mexico, caused them on the 9th of April, 1862, to declare the Convention of London transgressed, and to withdraw the troops of their Governments from the expedition. After that time the invasion was continued by the French alone. When hostilities were renewed, the French did not retire to their original positions, according to their agreement with the Mexican authorities, but retained possession of Orizaba. The prominent events subsequent to the period in question were as follow:—

September 22, 1862.—Proclamation of General Forey, promising the Mexicans a new Government after the defeat of the Constitutional Government.

October 22, 1862.—Manifesto of the Mexican Congress, signed by 109 members, protesting against General Forey's proclamation and its interference in their political affairs.

May 31, 1863.—President Juarez with the troops under his command evacuate the city of Mexico and transfer the national capital to San Luis Potosi. [Subsequently transferred to Monterey.]

June 5, 1863.—General Bazaine with the advance of the French army reach the city of Mexico.

June 10, 1863.—General Forey with the main body of the French enter the city.

June 16, 1863.—General Forey by a decree established a "Junta" of 35 members, whose first duty was to choose three Mexicans to exercise the Executive power provisionally, and, second, to choose 215 other citizens, who with themselves were to compose an Assembly of "Notables," charged with the duty of adopting the future form of government.

June 24, 1863.—General Forey's Junta select, as the provisional Executive, Juan Almonte, J. Mariano Salas, and Bishop Juan B. Ormaechea, who were installed the next day.

July 10, 1863.—General Forey's "Notables" selected by General Forey's Junta of 35 declare, by a vote of 231 to 19, that the Mexican nation adopts as its form of government hereditary limited monarchy, with a Catholic prince for sovereign, to bear the title of Emperor, and the crown to be offered in the first place to the Archduke Maximilian of Austria.

The French forces continue to occupy Vera Cruz, the city of Mexico, and the line of roads between the two cities, and many places in the interior; but the country is against them.

CONDITION OF THE COUNTRY.

From the 24th of January, 1848, Venezuela was disturbed almost continuously by warring factions down to the month of June, 1863. At that time the treaty of Caracas was signed by General Paez and General Falcon, the latter being elected President of the Republic. Since then there has been a period of increasing tranquillity, until the 7th of October, 1863, when Puerto Cabello, the last refuge of the insurgents, surrendered to the existing government, entirely accomplishing the pacification of the country.

FINANCES, &c.—It is not easy to present any reliable figures relating to the financial affairs of this Republic. In time of peace the revenue amounted to about $5,000,000, and the expenditures to an equal sum or more. The expenditures have been as high as $8,250,000. The public debt is about $50,000,000.

ARMY AND NAVY.—The peace establishment of Venezuela is an army of 2000 men. The navy consisted, in 1863, of 20 small vessels, mounting, in all, 50 guns.

EDUCATION.—In every ward in the several States, two public schools are provided by law for the education of children, the expenses to be paid from the revenue of the respective States; but the continual troubles of the country have, of course, interrupted their operations. There are, besides, two universities, a military school, and a number of private colleges and schools.

CONSTITUTION OF THE REPUBLIC.—On the 10th of December, 1863, a convention consisting of 100 members—5 from each of the 20 States into which the Republic is divided—was to have assembled in the city of Caracas to form a new Constitution. Meanwhile the President decreed, on the 19th of August, the following provisional Constitution, to remain in force until the "fundamental compact of the States" should be issued by the convention:—

JUAN C. FALCON, General-in-Chief, President of the Republic:—

Considering that the revolution having triumphed, the democratic principles proclaimed by it and acquired by civilization should be placed among the laws, in order that Venezuelans might enter upon the full enjoyment of their political and individual rights, I do decree:—

ARTICLE FIRST.

To Venezuelans are guaranteed:—

1. Life: in consequence hereof, the penalty of death is abolished, and the laws which imposed it are abrogated.

2. Property: no proprietor can, therefore, be despoiled of it nor debarred by any authority from the enjoyment thereof, except it be by a judicial sentence.

3. Inviolability of private residences: only for preventing the perpetration of a crime, and in the legal form, can a house be entered with a search-warrant.

4. The secrecy of papers and correspondence: should this be violated, the magistrate, functionary, or person in whose possession they are found shall, from the fact itself, be supposed guilty of the crime.

5. The free expression of thoughts in words or writing: there is, in consequence, no crime in relation to printing.

6. Freedom of instruction: this does not exonerate the chief authority from establishing primary schools or extending its protection to secondary instruction.

7. The right of suffrage: without any other restriction than the minority.

8. The free right of peaceably assembling together and without arms.

9. The right of petitioning and obtaining decision.

10. Natural liberty: in virtue of which, one may do whatever is not injurious to another or prohibited by law.

11. Personal liberty: by which it is understood that one may enter, travel through, or leave the republic with his goods without the necessity of a passport; change his residence and dispose freely of his properties. Only a judicial resolution may limit the exercise of these rights.

12. The freedom of every lawful industry.

13. Equality before the law: which, without exception, shall be one for Venezuelans. All shall be equally admissible to public employments without any other consideration than that of their fitness and capacity.

14. Individual security: and, consequently,—

1. No one can be judged but by pre-existing laws, and never by special commissions, but by the territorial judges or those of the place where the crime is committed.

2. Nor be imprisoned for debt which does not proceed from crime or fraud.

3. Nor be incarcerated or arrested except by the competent authority in the places known as prisons, and not without being previously informed in writing of having committed a crime which deserves corporal punishment, with strong evidences of being the author: a warrant containing the reason must be sent to him before. It is in the power of any one to arrest a person detected in the commission of a crime, and conduct him immediately to the presence of a judge.

4. Nor deprived of communication by any pretext whatever.

5. Nor kept in prison after the failure of the accusations.

6. Nor be subjected to any other punishment besides the privation of liberty, it being prohibited to refuse him those conveniences which may be compatible with his safe keeping.

7. Nor sentenced before being summoned, heard, and convicted. In these judgments no one is obliged to bear testimony against himself, his relations to the fourth degree of consanguinity and second of affinity, or his consort.

8. Nor exiled from his native country. Banishment is therefore abolished.

ARTICLE SECOND.

Slavery is forever abolished in Venezuela. Every slave who places his feet upon her soil shall be considered free and taken under the protection of the republic.

ARTICLE THIRD.

The places called Bajo-Seco and La Rotunda, selected for tormenting freeman, can in future not be used as prisons.

ARTICLE FOURTH.

The principles, guarantees, and rights comprehended in the preceding articles cannot be altered, and every functionary who breaks them loses his authority and may be treated as a traitor to the country.

ARTICLE FIFTH.

The present decree shall remain in force until the fundamental compact of the States is issued by the Constituent Assembly.

ARTICLE SIXTH.

The Secretaries of State will sign this decree, and the Secretary of State for Justice, Home, and Foreign Affairs is charged with putting it in execution and communicating it to whom it may concern.

Given in Caracas, this 18th day of August, 1863, the fifth year of the federation.

THE SUN'S DISTANCE FROM THE EARTH.

[Popular Discussion of a Material Error, by J. R. Hind, of Bishop's Observatory, Twickenham, England.]

It may occasion surprise to many who are accustomed to read of the precision now attained in the science and practice of astronomy, when it is stated that there are strong grounds for supposing the generally received value of that great unit of celestial measures—the mean distance of the earth from the sun—to be materially in error, and that, in fact, we are nearer to the central luminary by some 4,000,000 miles than for many years past has been commonly believed. The results of various researches during the last ten years appear, however, to point to the same conclusion, and, under the impression that the subject may be deemed one of more than scientific interest, Mr. Hind has drawn up the following popular outline of the actual state of our knowledge respecting it.

The measure of the sun's distance which has been generally accepted by astronomers depends upon an elaborate discussion of the observations of the transits of the planet Venus over the sun's disk in the years 1761 and 1769, published by Professor Encke, of Berlin. The great importance of these rare phenomena in the solution of what has been justly termed "the noblest problem in astronomy," was first pointed out by our countryman Halley, towards the close of the seventeenth century. The principle involved is the determination of the amount of displacement of Venus upon the solar disk, as viewed from distant stations on the earth's surface, whereby the parallax of the planet is found, and hence from the known proportion of her distance to that of the sun the distance of the latter body can be inferred. In practice this principle resolves itself into one of two methods. The first, and by far the best, consists in the comparison of the observed duration of the transit at places favorably situated for shortening and lengthening it, either by difference of latitude alone, or in certain cases with the additional effect of the earth's rotation on her axis, which will diminish or increase the interval of transit, according as the observer is carried to meet the motion of Venus or the contrary. This method is independent of the longitudes of the stations, which are often very imperfectly known, but unfortunately it cannot be applied advantageously in every transit, and is liable to fail entirely if atmospherical circumstances interrupt the observations either at ingress or egress (or of the first and last contacts of the planet with the sun's disk). The second method is by comparison of observations of the absolute times of ingress only, or of egress only, at stations widely differing in latitude; here the longitude enters as an indispensable element, and it must be pretty exactly known to allow of a trustworthy result.

At no period, probably, has an astronomical phenomenon excited a more wide-spread interest than previous to the year 1761, as the first of the transits of Venus drew nigh. The Royal Society, at that time under the presidency of the Earl of Macclesfield (a nobleman distinguished for his great attainments and zeal in the encouragement of this particular science), took action in 1760, and procured the fitting-out of two Government expeditions to points which had been judged favorable for the purpose in view. Mason and Dixon, originally destined for Bencoolen, were, fortunately as it happened, delayed on their passage, and stationed themselves at the Cape of Good Hope, while Maskelyne proceeded to St. Helena. The scientific academies of Paris, St. Petersburg, and Stockholm, aided by their respective Governments, despatched observers to the island of Rodrigues, in the Indian Ocean, and various parts of the extreme north of Europe, Siberia, and Tartary; indeed, from Lisbon to Pekin, and from Tornea, on the Gulf of Bothnia, to the Cape of Good Hope, preparations were made for observations which it was hoped would lead to a more precise knowledge of that unit of measures upon which all distances and dimensions beyond the moon depend. The result, however, disappointed expectation; the values of the solar parallax obtained by different calculators exhibited discordances which tended to throw doubt upon the whole, and hence it cannot be said that the transit of 1761 was of material service in the solution of the problem. Encke's researches assign 8″.49 as the most probable parallax from this transit, but some of the cotemporary computers arrived at much larger numbers. The cause of this unsatisfactory conclusion is sufficiently evident. In 1761 it was impossible to fix upon stations so situated as to give the first method described above a chance of success, and hence the value of the observations depended upon an exact acquaintance with the longitudes of the observers, which are open to considerable uncertainty in several of the most important cases.

The transits of Venus generally happen in pairs, an interval of eight years elapsing between the two, while from the last of one pair to the first of the next either 105 or 122 years will intervene. The second transit is always more favorable for ascertaining the sun's distance than the first, which circumstance, added to the contradictory nature of the results derived in 1761, gave occasion to preparations in 1769 on even a greater scale than in the former year. The British Government again, at the instance of the Royal Society, equipped several expeditions to distant stations.

Captain (then Lieutenant) Cook proceeded to the Pacific, and with Mr. Green, one of the assistants at the Royal Observatory, had a favorable view of the transit in the island of Tahiti, from a position still known as Point Venus; observers were also despatched to Hudson's Bay and to Madras. The Danish Government sent to Wardhus (an island in the Arctic Ocean, at the northeast extremity of Norway) a Vienna ecclesiastic, Father Hell, who had witnessed the previous transit at the observatory of that city, and who succeeded in establishing a most unenviable notoriety in connection with the second. The entrance of the planet upon the sun's disk was seen at nearly all the European observatories, and its departure therefrom at several points in Eastern Asia, at Manilla, Batavia, &c.; while the entire duration was watched at Wardhus, at different places in Lapland, at Tahiti, St. Joseph in California, and elsewhere. If the weather had been propitious at all the northern stations, the combination of the data thus obtained, with the observations of Captain Cook and Mr. Green in the Pacific, would, in all probability, have led to a very reliable determination of the sun's distance: indeed, Professor Encke, at the conclusion of his treatise on the subject, has a remark which virtually implies that complete observations at the eight northern stations, and a similar number in the Friendly Islands, would have given this distance more exactly than the whole 250 observations taken at both transits elsewhere. Unfortunately, clouds interfered at most of the selected stations, except Wardhus, and it consequently happens that the times noted by Hell and his assistants exercise a great influence on the final result. This would have been comparatively unimportant if the Viennese astronomer had not tampered with his observations to such an extent as to induce some of his cotemporaries (Lalande among the number) to regard them as forgeries. He delayed their publication for nine months, and repeatedly prevaricated respecting them; even when given to the world they were found to exhibit serious discordances from those of other observers; but, although the suspicions of his dishonesty were pretty general at the time, it was not until 1834 that positive proof was forthcoming. In that year Professor Littrow, of the Vienna Observatory, discovered among Hell's manuscripts a note-book which there is every reason to suppose was the identical one used at Wardhus. It then became apparent that the principal figures had been erased so as to be for the most part illegible; but from a careful examination of such as remained it was thought that one observation of the ingress and one of the egress might be depended upon; this was Littrow's opinion, and Encke, accepting his reasons, discussed the whole anew, and found the solar parallax to be 8″.57, or, for the earth's distance from the sun, 95,365,000 miles.

Although, for the reason stated, some suspicion has attached to the value of the solar parallax obtained from the transit of 1769, the first serious doubts as to its accuracy may perhaps be dated from the publication of Professor Hansen's elements of the moon's orbit in 1854. Several years previous Mr. Airy had brought to a conclusion one of the most valuable and laborious works ever undertaken in astronomy,—the reduction on a uniform system and comparison with theory of the immense mass of lunar meridional observations taken at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, between the years 1750 and 1830, the results of which were printed in 1847. These calculations furnished the means of improving the tables of the moon so far as depends upon observations in the meridian; but such observations are impracticable when she is near to the sun, and consequently several of the inequalities of her motion are not completely exhibited by them. It was for this reason, and to secure a hold upon her entire orbit, or very nearly so, that the Astronomer Royal some years since devised and erected at Greenwich an instrument specially intended for determining the place of the moon in any part of her diurnal path. The results given by this instrument, which is known as the altazimuth, have proved of great value in affording a check upon the amount of several irregularities indicated by theory, and particularly upon one technically called the parallactic equation, which is directly connected with the solar parallax, or, in other words, with the earth's distance from the sun. If the amount of this inequality, as given by observation, does not agree with that computed with an assumed value for the sun's distance, we know that the latter requires correction, and it is easy to ascertain to what amount. Professor Hansen found that the Greenwich meridian observations required a material diminution in the sun's distance, and were confirmed by a long series taken at Dorpat, in Russia; while the same conclusion was drawn by Mr. Airy from the observations with the altazimuth instrument in other parts of the moon's orbit. The solar parallax finally given by Hansen is 8″.97, about four-tenths of a second greater than was inferred from the transits of Venus, and corresponding to a diminution of more than 4,000,000 miles in the earth's distance from the sun.

Within the last few years M. Le Verrier has completed a most rigorous application of the theory of attraction to the motions of the earth, Venus, and Mars, as defined by a long course of observation at Greenwich and other astronomical establishments. Nothing can excel in completeness the three investigations of this eminent mathematician.

The theory of the earth was published in 1858, in the Annales of the Observatory of Paris, and contains one striking result bearing upon the subject of my communication. The inequality technically called the lunar equation was found to require an increase of one-twelfth part, which would render necessary an augmentation of Encke's solar parallax of nearly four-tenths of a second, and therefore a diminution of the assumed distance of the earth from the sun very nearly to the same amount assigned by Hansen's researches connected with the moon. M. Le Verrier adopts 8″.95 for the parallax in his solar tables, but does not, in this place, insist upon its substitution for the number given by the transits of Venus. The earth's mass as referred to the sun's would, from the same cause, require increasing to the extent of nearly a tenth part of the whole.

In the theory of the planet Venus it is found impossible to account for the motion of the line of nodes (the points where her orbit intersects the ecliptic) with the received values of the planetary masses; but, if a correction be applied to the mass of the earth of about the same magnitude as indicated by M. Le Verrier's previous researches, the calculated motion of the nodes would agree with that resulting from observations as far back as they can be depended upon. In this case, however, it would be necessary to diminish the adopted measure of the earth's distance from the sun by a thirtieth part,—affording another and quite independent corroboration of the error with which it is affected. In 1861 the investigation of the orbit of Mars was completed, and forms, with the tables of the planet, a part of the last volume of the Paris Annales. M. Le Verrier announces, as the fait capital to which his discussion had led him, the absolute impossibility of representing the observations without a motion of the perihelion (or nearest point of the orbit to the sun) greater than is consistent with the planetary masses employed, and the equal impossibility of providing for the increase of disturbing force, except by the addition of at least a tenth part to the assumed mass of the earth, with the corresponding diminution in her distance from the sun.

Notwithstanding these very remarkable and confirmatory results, M. Le Verrier appears to have been at this time very strongly impressed with the exactness of Encke's parallax, and terms the unavoidable increase of the received value "a grave objection" to the augmented mass of the earth derived from his theories. He had previously detected a motion of the perihelion of the planet

Mercury, due to some unknown cause, and proposed to account for this and the other anomalous motions I have alluded to, by the following assumptions:—

1. There exists, besides the planets Mercury, Venus, the Earth, and Mars, a ring of asteroids between the Sun and Mercury, the aggregate mass of which is comparable to that of Mercury.

2. At the distance of the earth from the sun there is a second ring of asteroids, the mass of which is at most equal to a tenth of the earth's.

3. The total mass of the asteroids between Mars and Jupiter is at most equal to one-third of the mass of the earth.

4. The masses of the last two groups are complementary to each other: ten times the mass of the group at the earth's distance, plus three times the mass of the group situate between Mars and Jupiter, gives a sum equal to the mass of the earth. "This last conclusion," adds M. Le Verrier, "depends on the measure of the distance of the earth from the sun by the transits of Venus, which astronomers agree in considering as very precise."

Now, it is to be remarked that the first of these assumptions may be admitted in explanation of the motion of the perihelion of Mercury, without affecting the question of the earth's distance: indeed, it acquires additional probability from the fact that dark spots have from time to time been observed to traverse the sun's disk, and from their rapid motion and well-defined appearance have been considered bodies of a planetary nature revolving within the orbit of Mercury. The existence of a ring of asteroids in the vicinity of the earth's path, and with an aggregate mass sufficient to explain the observed motion of the node of Venus and the perihelion of Mars, is perhaps a more disputable point. I shall not, however, stop to inquire how far it may be favored or otherwise by our present knowledge of meteoric astronomy, but proceed to mention the further evidence which has been forthcoming since the publication of M. Le Verrier's investigations, and would rather induce us to adopt a diminished measure of the earth's distance from the sun, as the most probable solution of the difficulty.

M. Léon Foucault, of Paris, has succeeded in measuring the absolute velocity of light by means of the "turning mirror,"—an experimental determination of no little interest and significance. He concludes that it cannot differ much from two hundred and ninety-eight millions of French metres per second, or 185,170 English miles, which is a notable diminution upon the velocity previously derived from astronomical data alone. The time which light requires to travel from the sun to the earth is known with great precision; at the mean distance of the latter it is rather less than 8 minutes 18 seconds, and if this number be combined with M. Foucault's measure of the velocity it will be evident that the received distance is too great by about one-thirtieth part,—that light, in fact, has not so far to travel before it reaches the earth as generally supposed. The corresponding solar parallax is 8″.86, which approaches much nearer to M. Le Verrier's theoretical value than to the one depending on the transits of 1761 and 1769. So curious a corroboration of the former deserves especial remark.

The very rare occurrence of the transits of Venus has naturally induced astronomers to consider other practical methods of approximating to the sun's distance, admitting of more frequent repetition, though not possessing in a single application the same amount of accuracy. Among these the observation of the planet Mars at stations widely differing in latitude has received much attention. The orbit of this planet is so excentrical as to cause a material variation in its distance from the earth when in opposition, and consequently most favorably placed for observation. In some years it will not approach within two-thirds of the distance of the earth from the sun, while in others it will be separated from us by little more than one-third of the same, and in such cases we have opportunities of ascertaining the sun's parallax from that of the planet, either by a system of observations at different points of the earth's surface, or even by measuring its distance from neighboring stars, at a single station. The nearer we are to Mars, the greater the probability, cæteris paribus, of an exact result. Suppose we have a number of determinations of the planet's distance from the celestial equator at an observatory in north latitude (as Greenwich or Poulkova), and others on corresponding dates at an observatory in the opposite hemisphere (as the Cape or Melbourne), and that from the known rate of the apparent motion of Mars we reduce them to the same instant, care being taken to eliminate the effect of refraction, the declinations will still exhibit a discordance, which, neglecting error of observation, will be due to the sum of the parallaxes of Mars at the two observatories. From this quantity the sun's parallax can be inferred, since we know the exact proportion which the distance of the planet bears to that of the sun. In 1857 Mr. Airy drew attention to two oppositions of Mars, 1860 and 1862, peculiarly favorable for such observations, and strongly recommending that an attempt should be made to correct the received distance of the sun by means of them. In 1860 the observations wholly failed through an unusual prevalence of clouded skies at the best stations; but, in 1862, numerous comparisons of the planet with stars in his vicinity were procured at Greenwich, Poulkova, the Cape of Good Hope, and Williamstown, Victoria.

If those at Greenwich and Williamstown are combined, the sun's parallax is found to be 8″.93, while Poulkova and the Cape give 8″.97, numbers in close accordance with the theoretical values already mentioned. There is but little probability that any further light will be thrown on the question of parallax from observations of Mars during the next ten years, the planet's distance from the earth in opposition being always too great to afford that method a fair chance of success.

To recapitulate briefly: a diminution in the measure of the sun's distance now adopted is implied by—1st, the theory of the moon, as regards the parallactic equation, agreeably to the researches of Professor Hansen and the Astronomer Royal; 2d, the lunar equation in the theory of the earth, newly investigated by M. Le Verrier; 3d, the excess in the motion of the node of the orbit of Venus beyond what can be due to the received values of the planetary masses; 4th, the similar excess in the motion of the perihelion of Mars, also detected within the past few years by the same mathematician; 5th, the experiments of M. Foucault on the velocity of light; and 6th, the results of observations of Mars when near the earth about the opposition of 1862.

I subjoin a few of the numerical changes which will follow upon the substitution of M. Le Verrier's solar parallax (8″.95) for that of Professor's Encke, on which reliance has so long been placed. The earth's mean distance from the sun becomes 91,328,600 miles, being a reduction of 4,086,000. The circumference of her orbit, 599,194,000 miles, being a diminution of 25,360,000. Her mean hourly velocity 65,460 miles. The diameter of the sun 850,100 miles, which is smaller by nearly 38,000. The distances, velocities, and dimensions of all the members of the planetary system of course require similar corrections if we wish to express them in miles; in the case of Neptune, the mean distance is diminished by thirty times the amount of correction to that of the earth, or about 122,000,000 miles. The velocity of light is decreased by nearly 8000 miles per second, and becomes 183,470 if based upon astrononomical data alone. These numbers will illustrate the great importance that attaches to a precise knowledge of the sun's parallax, in our appreciation of the various distances and dimensions in the solar system.

The first of the ensuing pair of transits of Venus will take place on the 9th of December (civil reckoning), 1874, and the second on the 6th of December, 1882.

I have calculated the circumstances of both phenomena from M. Le Verrier's new tables of the sun and planet, the full details of which may be found in the Comptes Rendus of the Paris Academy of Sciences for July 22, 1861. For the transit of 1874, December 9, I find—

"The conjunction in right ascension at 4h. 59m. 13s. A.M., mean time at Greenwich, Venus north of sun's centre by 14m. 15s. External contact at ingress, 1h. 46m. 56s. A.M.; internal ditto, 2h. 15m. 57s. A.M.; internal contact at egress, 5h. 57m. 5s. A.M.; external ditto, 6h. 26m. 5s. A.M.

"The first contact at ingress will take place in the zenith in longitude 161 degrees 22 minutes east, and latitude 22 degrees 57 minutes south, and the last contact at egress in longitude 81 degrees 36 minutes east, and latitude 22 degrees 58 minutes south. As viewed in an inverting telescope, the planet will enter upon the sun's disk at a point about 131 degrees from north towards the west, and will leave it about 160 degrees from north towards the east."

"The conjunction in right ascension at 4h. 20m. 14s. P.M., mean time at Greenwich; Venus south of sun's centre 11m. 6s. External contact at ingress, 1h. 55m. 38s. P.M.; internal ditto, 2h. 15m. 56s. P.M.; internal contact at egress, 7h. 52m. 27s. P.M.; external ditto, 8h. 12m. 47s. P.M. The first contact at ingress will take place in the zenith in longitude 31 degrees 5 minutes west, and latitude 22 degrees 40 minutes south, and the last contact at egress in longitude 125 degrees 20 minutes west, and latitude 22 degrees 42 minutes south. As viewed in an inverting telescope, the planet will enter upon the sun's disk at a point about 35 degrees from north towards the west, and will leave it about 66 degrees from north towards the east."

From the preceding numbers it will appear that no part of the transit of 1874 can be witnessed in England. The egress only will be visible in the southeast of Europe near sunrise—in Italy, Turkey, &c. The entire duration may be observed in Australia, New Zealand, British India, China, Tartary, and the islands of the Indian Ocean, including Madagascar. The astronomical conditions, however, will not be very favorable for the investigation of parallax, either by the first or second method to which allusion has been made. Thus, for observations of the difference of duration of transit, we must rely upon stations selected so as to offer the greatest difference of latitude, without the possibility of introducing the additional effect of the earth's rotation. The Russian authorities, always energetic in matters of science, may provide for the observation of the phenomenon in Eastern Siberia, and observers might be located in various parts of Central Asia. For southern stations we have Australia, New Zealand, and several islands in the Indian Ocean, including Kerguelan's Land, but, as remarked by the Astronomer Royal (whose lucid address on this subject, published in the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society for May, 1857, I am here chiefly following), "the observable difference of durations will probably not be half of that in 1882."

The successful application of the second method, viz., the comparison of differences of absolute times of ingress only or of egress only, will render necessary a precise determination of many distant longitudes between the Mauritius, or the Isle of Bourbon, and the Sandwich Islands. In the transit of 1882, the first and preferable method may be advantageously used under certain conditions. The entire duration will be observable in the United States and in a part of British North America, and in this region will be shortened not only by northern position, but by the effect of the earth's rotation, which must carry the observer to meet the motion of the planet. On the contrary, the duration would be lengthened by the latter cause and by southern position in those parts where an Antarctic continent was laid down some years since by Admiral Wilkes. Assuming that land is really to be found in that region and may be approached in December, there can be no doubt, on merely scientific considerations, that observers would be very advantageously placed upon it in 1882. For the application of the second method, the island in the western part of the Indian Ocean will have the ingress accelerated, while the Atlantic seaboard of North America will have it retarded. The egress will be retarded in part of the Australian continent, including New South Wales and Victoria, in New Zealand, the New Hebrides and many islands of the Polynesian group, and will be accelerated in the United States, the West India Islands, and the northeastern part of South America. In this case, also, numerous longitudes would require determination with greater accuracy than they are probably as yet known. The ingress will be visible in England, the first external contact at Greenwich taking place at 1h. 59m. 57s. P.M.

It is scarcely to be doubted that every possible use will be made of the transits of 1874 and 1882 to improve our knowledge of the great astronomical unit, the measure of the sun's distance, and that all the resources of modern science and all the facilities afforded by modern enterprise will be combined for that purpose. No other opportunity of the kind will occur until the year 2004.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE GREAT CIVIL WAR.

From the Hon. EDWARD EVERETT, D.C.L., &c.

Boston, March 11, 1862.

DEAR SIR:—I have examined with interest and pleasure the prospectus of the "PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE GREAT CIVIL WAR," proposed to be executed by Mr. Lossing. I feel no hesitation in expressing the opinion that such a work, prepared by Mr. Lossing, will be of great value. Mr. Lossing's diligence in exploring the localities which he describes, his fidelity and accuracy as a historian, and the spirit of his illustrations, are too well known, from his volumes which are already before the public, to need any recommendation.

I remain, dear sir, respectfully yours, EDWARD EVERETT.

GEORGE W. CHILDS, Esq.

New York, March 16, 1862.

DEAR SIR:—I am glad to learn that Mr. Lossing is preparing a "PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE GREAT CIVIL WAR." In his previous works, no man has shown himself more diligent and careful in the collection of facts, and his illustrations are executed with great fidelity and exactness. I am, sir, respectfully yours,

GEORGE W. CHILDS, Esq. WM. C. BRYANT.

From General CASS.

I am much gratified to be informed that Mr. Lossing is preparing a History of the present Civil War. The theme is equally instructive and impressive; and I am satisfied that the undertaking will be executed with diligence and ability, and that the work will become a valuable repository, not only for present perusal, but also for future reference.

LEWIS CASS.

From JARED SPARKS, LL.D.

Cambridge, March 25, 1862.

DEAR SIR:—I have perused with much satisfaction the prospectus of a work which you propose to publish on the present war, and which is to be prepared by Mr. Lossing. If we may judge from the result of Mr. Lossing's labors in previous works of a similar character, it cannot be doubted that this enterprise will be executed with ability, zeal, and success, and will furnish valuable materials for illustrating the history of the period to which it relates. Respectfully and truly yours, and ranks highest on account of the elasticity, permanence, beauty, and general desirableness of the stitching when done, and the wide range of its application.—Report of American Institute, N.Y.

GEORGE W. CHILDS, Esq. JARED SPARKS.

THIS MACHINE MAKES THE

The qualities which recommend the WHEELER & WILSON Machine are—1. Beauty and excellence of stitch, alike upon both sides of the fabric sewed; 2. Strength, firmness, and durability of seam, that will not rip nor ravel, and made with—3. Economy of thread; 4. Its attachments and wide range of application to purposes and materials; 5. Compactness and elegance of model and finish; 6. Simplicity and thoroughness of construction; 7. Speed, ease of operation and management, and quietness of movement.

The WHEELER & WILSON Sewing-Machine is adapted for all kinds of

Seamstresses, Dress-Makers, Tailors; Manufacturers of Shirts, Collars, Skirts, Cloaks, Mantillas, Clothing, Hats, Caps, Corsets, Ladies' Gaiters, Linen Goods, Umbrellas, Parasols, and Silk Goods.

An Important Feature in the Use of this Machine, resulting from the wide range of its application, is the varying branches of business to which it is applied as fashion changes. Thus, a house or a person furnished with these Machines may, at different seasons, employ them in making Skirts, or Mantillas, or Ruffling, or Shirts, or Stitching Hats, Caps, etc. It is not as if they were limited and must remain unused unless that particular article be in demand. So long as Sewing is to be done, these Machines are sure of something to do.
